During the period these armed forces are employed by the Security Council, the Military Staff Committee shall be responsible, under the Security Council, for their strategic direction. The time and place at which the Military Staff Committee will assume or relinquish strategic direction will be designated by the Security Council.

Article 39

The command of national contingents will be exercised by Commanders appointed by the respective Member Nations. These contingents will retain their national character and will be subject at all times to the discipline and regulations in force in their own national armed forces.

Article 40

The Commanders of national contingents will be entitled to communicate directly with the authorities of their own country on all matters.

Article 41

Accepted by the Chinese, U.S.S.R. and U.S. Delegations:

An overall Commander or overall Commanders of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council may be appointed by the latter, on the advice of the Military Staff Committee, for the period of employment of these forces by the Security Council.

Accepted by the French and the U.K. Delegations:

A supreme Commander or supreme Commanders of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council may be appointed by the latter, on the advice of the Military Staff Committee, for the period of employment of these forces by the Security Council.

POSITIONS OF THE DELEGATIONS OF THE MILITARY STAFF COMMITTEE ON THE ARTICLES OF THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES GOVERNING THE ORGANIZATION OF ARMED FORCES ON WHICH THE MILITARY STAFF COMMITTEE HAS NOT REACHED UNANIMITY

CHAPTER III

Overall Strength of the Armed Forces

Article 7

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation accepts the Article because it considers that in determining the overall strength of the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council, both the requirements of the Security Council and the conditions of Member Nations concerned should be taken into account.

Regarding the principle of equality as proposed by the U.S.S.R. Delegation, see the Chinese position on Article 11.

Position of the French Delegation

See French position on Article 11 below.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The U.S.S.R. Delegation conditionally accepts Article 7. The final acceptance of Article 7 by the U.S.S.R. Delegation will depend on the acceptance by the other Delegations of the principle of equality regarding the strength and composition of Armed Forces made available by the five Permanent Members of the Security Council as stated in the U.S.S.R. proposal on Article 11.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The arguments of the U.K. Delegation against the principle of equality are contained in full in the U.K. position for Article 11.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

See the U.S. position on Article 11 below.

Article 8

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation considers that since the Security Council has been entrusted, under Article 24 of the Charter, with the responsibility for the maintenance of international peace, it is only logical that the Security Council should be given the authority to initiate proposals to change the overall strength of the Armed Forces in accordance with the prevailing international situation. Hence, this text is acceptable to the Chinese Delegation.

Regarding the principle of equality as proposed by the U.S.S.R. Delegation, see the Chinese position on Article 11.

Position of the French Delegation

See French position on Article 11 below.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The U.S.S.R. Delegation conditionally accepts Article 8. The final acceptance of Article 8 by the Soviet Delegation will depend on the acceptance by the other Delegations of the principle of equality regarding the strength and composition of Armed Forces made available by the five Permanent Members of the Security Council as it stated in the U.S.S.R. proposal on Article 11.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The arguments of the U.K. Delegation against the principle of equality are contained in full in the U.K. position for Article 11.

CHAPTER IV

Contribution of Armed Forces
By Member Nations

Article 11

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation feels that the spirit of the Charter emphasizes throughout above all else the importance of maintenance or restoration of international peace. It is with such an object in view that the Armed Forces are going to be organized. Hence, it seems to the Chinese Delegation that how these Armed Forces are organized matters less than the fact that the United Nations do have an effective police force that would be powerful enough to guard the peace.

The Chinese Delegation is by no means unaware of the fact that the Permanent Members of the Security Council in a sense share equal responsibility in maintaining international peace and security, and does not deny that it would be an ideal to make the contributions of the Permanent Members absolutely equal down to the smallest detail. On the other hand, however, the Military Staff Committee should not blind itself to the realities of the present situation. The military conditions of the Permanent Members differ widely from one another and the strengths of their three different Services, land, sea and air, are not of the same level. Hence, it seems to the Chinese Delegation that it would be highly inadvisable to allow scrupulous regard to an ideal impractical at least at the present stage to jeopardize the efficiency and effectiveness of the international force, thereby weakening the guardian of universal peace.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that contributions from Members of United Nations should be determined on the basis of the following principles:—

A. With regard to the comparison between the contributions by each of the five Permanent Members, the French Delegation is in favour of equality of responsibility as well as equality of sacrifice and equality of rights among the five Permanent Members of the Security Council, but considers that it would be utopian to insist that each of them provide contributions equal in quantity and in quality.

That is why the French Delegation proposes that the Armed Forces envisaged in the initial Special Agreements should be provided on the principle of equivalent contributions by the five Permanent Members of the Security Council. On this assumption, the French Delegation waives the obligation that the five Permanent Members should provide forces of identical composition with regard to land, sea and air components, and insists solely on a comparable overall strength of the contingents.

The French Delegation foresees, should the occasion arise to appreciably increase the overall strength of the United Nations Armed Forces, the provision by the five Permanent Members, to the extent of their capacity, of additional equivalent contributions, taking into account bases, assistance and facilities.

B. With regard to the comparison of contributions by Permanent Members and by other Member Nations of United Nations, the French Delegation considers that, in spirit, the Charter entrusts the five Permanent Members with the major portion of responsibilities. The proof of this can be found in two of its main provisions:

i. Article 27 of the Charter requires the concurring votes of the five Permanent Members to adopt any decision by the Security Council on any question other than a matter of procedure.

The greater the responsibility, the greater should be the liabilities.

ii. Article 106 of the Charter entrusts the five Permanent Members with the responsibility of maintaining international peace and security, pending the coming into force of Special Agreements referred to in Article 43 of the Charter.

As long as the Charter remains in force, without amendments, this main responsibility of the five Permanent Members will be the decisive factor of the system.

Moreover, the French Delegation considers that, in practice, the vast superiority of the Permanent Members, viewed from every angle (population, economic and financial strength, area of territories, geographical distribution of these territories), is such that the greater part of the Armed Forces of United Nations will always be provided by the five Permanent Members.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The principle of equality in the contribution of armed forces by the five Permanent Members of the Security Council proposed by the U.S.S.R. Delegation is based on the provisions of the United Nations Charter which lay the main responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security on those States and that corresponds to their equal status in the Security Council.

The overall size of the armed forces made available to the Security Council will not be too large. Therefore the five States can make armed forces available on the principle of equality, that is they can contribute armed forces, land, sea and air, which would be equal in strength and composition. The principle of equality does not permit advantages in the position of any Permanent Member of the Security Council in the contribution of armed forces by that Member.

The principle of "comparable contributions" proposed by the other Delegations permits a situation when certain of the five States may, for instance, contribute the major portion of the Armed Forces chiefly in air forces, others chiefly in sea forces, and a third group chiefly in land forces, and so on. That would lead to advantages in the positions of certain States in the contribution of armed forces by these States and therefore would be in contradiction with the equal status of these States as Permanent Members of the Security Council.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation considers that the existing variation in the size and composition of the three Services amongst the five Permanent Members of the Security Council must be a major consideration in determining their contributions to the United Nations Forces. It seems essential to maintain as far as possible equality of sacrifice amongst the five Permanent Members and at the same time ensure that the Security Council is provided with armed forces, from which it can select a balanced force for a specific operation.

In the opinion of the U.K. Delegation, a rigid rule of equality would not in practice be capable of implementation and in fact the proposal of the U.S.S.R. Delegation has had to recognize the need for deviations from such a principle. Furthermore by accepting deviations from this principle, an equality of sacrifice amongst the five Permanent Members would not necessarily be maintained. On the other hand, the U.K. Delegation considers that the principle of comparable overall contributions is the only realistic one, and that given goodwill, common sense and military knowledge it could be implemented among the five Permanent Members of the Security Council without particular advantage to any specific Member. Thus the U.K. Delegation is firmly convinced that the principle of comparable overall contributions is the only practical one.

The U.S. Delegation believes that the fundamental and dominant aim of the General Principles is the establishment and organization of effective United Nations Armed Forces. The contributions of all Member Nations will and should, in large measure, be based upon the capability and willingness of the Member Nations and the requirements of the Security Council. Every Member Nation should have the right to offer as its own contribution such forces as it considers reasonable and proper. Each Permanent Member should have the right to contribute armed forces equal to those contributed by any other Permanent Member, but these contributions should not be limited or restricted by this right. The Security Council will, of course, determine the acceptability of contributions offered. It is desirable that these forces should result from contributions of the Permanent Members which are comparable or not greatly disproportionate in overall strength. However, no principle governing national contributions should jeopardize the all-important goal of effective United Nations Armed Forces.

The U.S.S.R. "Principle of Equality" is inconsistent with the goal of effective United Nations Armed Forces and with Article 9, and is, therefore, unacceptable to the United States. This principle has been interpreted by the U.S.S.R. Delegation to mean that each of the five Permanent Members of the Security Council must make available identical forces. The military power of each of the five Permanent Members does not rest on equal military forces or on equal services, land, sea and air, and probably never will. Hence, the Permanent Members should not be expected to provide equal forces. Under the "Principle of Equality" as defined by the U.S.S.R. Delegation, every component and every element of every component, contributed by the Permanent Members would be limited so that it must be equal in strength and composition to the weakest corresponding component or element provided by any Permanent Member.

It is recognized that the Soviet proposal provides that deviations from the "Principle of Equality" may be made by special decision of the Security Council. However, the U.S. Delegation believes that, if the goal of effective forces is to become a reality, the deviations would of necessity become the rule.

In the discussions leading to the formulation of this Article, there arose the question as to whether or not the Permanent Members of the Security Council should contribute, for all time, the major portion of the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council. Certain Delegations indicated the belief that the major portion of these Armed Forces should always be provided by the Permanent Members of the Security Council. Whereas this concept is no longer implicit in the proposals for this Article, the U.S. Delegation nevertheless desires to state its position on this principle.

The U.S. Delegation agrees that the Permanent Members of the Security Council should contribute initially the major portion of the Armed Forces in order to facilitate the early establishment of these forces as indicated in Article 10. It may be that the contributions of the other nations will never overtake those of the five Permanent Members. However, the U.S. Delegation cannot agree that this condition necessarily will govern for all time. It may be that the collective capabilities of the members of the United Nations, other than the Permanent Members of the Security Council, might at some time in the future exceed the capabilities of the five Permanent Members of the Security Council, in which case the U.S. Delegation conceives of no reasons why the contributions of those other Members of the United Nations should not exceed those of the Permanent Members of the Security Council.

Therefore, in recognition of the national interests of all Members of the United Nations, the U.S. Delegation is opposed to expressing as a permanent principle that the five Permanent Members would, for all time, contribute the major portion of the Armed Forces.

Position of the Chinese Delegation

In view of the fact that the Air Force is essential to prompt military action, the Chinese Delegation believes that in determining the strength of national air force contributions of the Member Nations, the obligations arising out of Article 45 of the Charter should be taken into consideration. Hence, it prefers the text agreed upon by the four Delegations.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that the responsibilities under Article 45 of the Charter should be taken into consideration at the time when the Special Agreements envisaged in Article 43 of the Charter will be negotiated. The French Delegation considers that the national contingents referred to in Article 45 of the Charter represent only a portion of the air forces made available to the Security Council, in fulfilling the terms of the Special Agreements to which reference is made above.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The General Principles for the Organization of the Armed Forces should refer to all the principal Services, land, sea, and air, and should be based on the provisions of Article 43 of the Charter.

The examination of Article 45 of the Charter can take place only after the completion of the study of Article 43 of the Charter and the conclusion of Special Agreements. After the conclusion of such Agreements, the Security Council, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee, shall determine, under Article 45 of the Charter, what portion of the overall number of national air force contingents made available to the Security Council under the Agreements should be held immediately available for the taking of urgent military measures in case of necessity.

The proposals of the other Delegations stated in Article 16 of the General Principles on the furnishing of national air force contributions concern Article 45 of the Charter, and therefore, for reasons stated above, these proposals cannot be justified.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation does not agree with the U.S.S.R. Delegation that the provisions of Article 45 of the Charter should not be reflected in the General Principles, since in the opinion of the U.K. Delegation these provisions must be taken into consideration at the time when the Special Agreements envisaged in Article 43 of the Charter are negotiated.

Article 45 of the Charter deals with the strength and composition and the state of readiness of national air force contingents. In the opinion of the U.K. Delegation, any reference to these factors should be made separately under the appropriate Chapters of the General Principles.

The U.K. Delegation considers the implementation of Article 45 of the Charter would be carried out by the following processes:

- a. In determining the strength and composition of the total national air force contributions, the obligations arising from Article 45 of the Charter would be taken into account.
- b. The air force contingents for action envisaged in Article 45 of the Charter would be selected from amongst the national air force contributions made under Article 43 of the Charter.
- c. The Security Council, advised by the Military Staff Committee, would request Member Nations to maintain at a high degree of readiness the air force contingents selected for this purpose.

The U.K. Delegation considers that the proposal of the U.S.S.R. Delegation, being phrased in the exact wording of Article 45 of the Charter, does not give the full military interpretation of this Article.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation interprets Article 45 of the Charter as making available to the Security Council specific contingents of national air force contributions for the special purpose of providing the United Nations with a means of taking urgent military measures. It will be necessary to establish these particular contingents as a part of the overall national air force contributions. This requirement will be a major consideration in determining the strength and composition of the national air force contributions. The U.S. Delegation considers it most appropriate to include, in the Chapter concerned with the principles governing national contributions under Article 43 of the Charter, an article which will ensure recognition of these obligations arising from Article 45 of the Charter.

The U.S.S.R. proposal in this Article deals only with the strength and composition of the specific air force contingents envisaged in Article 45 of the Charter. Whereas this limited consideration will be highly important at the time of the actual establishment of these contingents, it is not considered appropriate in the Chapter dealing with overall national contributions of armed forces.

Article 17

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation upholds this Article because of the following considerations:

1. It cannot be disputed that a Member Nation, when the existence of its legitimate government is threatened, should have the right to use for self-defense its armed forces made available to the Security Council.

2. Some internal disturbances might develop into world conflagrations. For example, an illegal act of force to overthrow a legitimate government might, if not checked immediately, endanger international peace and security. The use by a Member Nation of its armed forces made available to the Security Council in cases like these would be no more than an action designed to nip in the bud a disturbance of international peace, and as such is in perfect consonance with the purpose of the Armed Forces.

3. If in case of national emergency Member Nations are allowed to make use of the Armed Forces which they have made available to the Security Council, the total strength of the armed forces normally maintained in peacetime by some Member Nations may be somewhat reduced, and such possible reduction would be more in conformity with the universally desired ideal of world disarmament.

4. In addition to the cases mentioned above, the Chinese Delegation shares the view of the French Delegation that national emergency likewise covers cases of catastrophes such as floods, fires or others that call for immediate succor from the Armed Forces nearby.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that it would be impossible to employ large bodies of forces, required for operations, without a fairly accurate knowledge on the part of the organ responsible for strategic direction, of either the location of units constituting these forces and their state of readiness, or the date on which they would be moved in combat readiness to a pre-determined location.

Armed Forces to be made available to the Security Council must, obviously, not deviate from this elementary strategic rule. We would be completely defenceless if Member Nations did not conform to this rule and if they contemplated the use, as they saw fit, of the forces they had earmarked to be made available, on call, to the Security Council, until the day when these forces had been placed at the disposal of the Security Council. The French Delegation considers, therefore, that any move of these forces likely to modify their general location or the time limit of their intervention as stipulated by the Special Agreements, should be submitted for the approval of the Security Council. This represents, obviously, a certain surrender of sovereignty with which the French Government is ready to agree, if other Governments act likewise, in order to give to the desired system of security its full measure of effectiveness.

But the above cited provisions should acquire a measure of flexibility in certain cases of emergency when there would be insufficient time for the Security Council to give its consent. These are:—

- a. The case of self-defence, adequately covered by Article 51 of the Charter which consequently deserves, like all others, to be included in the body of our document insofar as its military implementation is concerned.
- b. The case of national emergency by which is understood:

1. Serious natural cataclysms such as floods, fires, or extraordinary atmospheric occurrences, which might compel a Member Nation for a while to immediately make use of the Armed Forces nearest to the cataclysm, it being impossible to give the Security Council any advance notice. Those are all exceptional cases, but which should be envisaged.

2. National emergency likewise covers the case when the Government of a Member Nation, that is by definition, a democratic and legitimate government, whose legal powers and responsibilities to its people or its peoples are derived from its national constitution, would be threatened by a faction which would attempt to seize power by illegal means. It seems impossible not to recognize that this government has the same absolute right of self-defence against an armed aggression from within as that which is granted to it by Article 51 of the Charter against an armed aggression coming from without, and consequently, to employ all the necessary means, and, possibly, the Armed Forces which it intends to make available to the United Nations.

To deny this right would be contrary to all the provisions of Public Law in force in civilized nations. To deny such a possibility would be contrary to actual facts; to fail to envisage frankly the bearing it has on the employment of the Armed Forces to be made available to the Security Council would be not to fulfill adequately our duty to the Security Council.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

There is no necessity to include Article 17 in the General Principles since Article 51 of the Charter adequately protects the rights of Member Nations of the United Nations to use their armed forces for self defense in case of an armed attack.

The United Nations Charter does not give any statement on the cases of "emergencies" as set out in the proposal of the Chinese and French Delegations. The introduction of the idea of "an emergency" might give rise to such an interpretation of Article 51 of the Charter which might differ from its actual meaning.

The U.S.S.R. Delegation considers that the idea reflected in Article 51 of the Charter does not need any additional interpretation.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation maintains that, in case of self-defense, the position of Member Nations is adequately safeguarded under Article 51 of the Charter. It is unable to agree to the inclusion of this Article in the General Principles for the following reasons:—

- (a) The United Nations Charter makes no specific provision for the release of a Member Nation from its obligations under the Charter in the event of a National Emergency.

- (b) It is impossible to define precisely the term "National Emergency"; its inclusion might therefore leave a loophole for Member Nations to evade their responsibilities.

The U.K. Delegation believes that if in the event of an emergency, not strictly within the terms of Article 51 of the Charter, a Member Nation was obliged to commit forces which it had earmarked for the Security Council, that Member Nation should have no difficulty in justifying its action.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation believes that cases of self-defense are adequately covered by Article 51 of the Charter. The term "national emergencies" is indefinite and is difficult to define. This Article, if adopted, presumably would permit a Member Nation in many cases not envisaged in the Charter to withhold armed forces it has agreed to make available to the Security Council on call. In fact the proposed Article would permit unilateral abrogation of an agreement by a Member Nation, since the other party to the treaty, the Security Council, would not have to be consulted. The U.S. Delegation considers that the Security Council and other Member Nations will recognize cases in which a Member Nation might be required to utilize all of its armed forces, including those made available to the Security Council, for the purpose of individual or collective self-defense if an armed attack from any source occurred against a Member Nation. The same would apply if extraordinary and temporary conditions within the domestic jurisdiction of the Member Nation required a nation to make use temporarily of its entire armed forces.

Therefore, the U.S. Delegation cannot agree to the inclusion of this Article in the General Principles.

CHAPTER V

Employment of Armed Forces

Article 20

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation cannot accept the U.S.S.R. texts for Articles 20 and 21 because of the following considerations:—

- (1) After the Armed Forces have accomplished their task, they should be withdrawn to the "general location" which will be defined in the special agreements provided for in Article 43 of the Charter.

(2) The time-limit for the withdrawal of the Armed Forces after operation cannot be predetermined. It should be determined by the Security Council according to the prevailing situation at the time.

Hence, the Chinese Delegation accepts the text as agreed upon by the four Delegations since the term "General Location" is consistent with Article 43 of the Charter and the time for withdrawal is left to the Security Council to decide.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that the best way to define the locations to which Armed Forces would be withdrawn would be by referring to the wording used in Paragraph 2 of Article 43 of the Charter. The troops shall be withdrawn to the "general locations" which will be defined in the Special Agreements provided for in Article 43 of the Charter.

Such a wording presents the advantage of avoiding any confusion and any differences of interpretation since this "general location" will be accurately defined in the Special Agreements.

The French Delegation, whilst agreeing on the advantage that would accrue from the stating of a precise time-limit for the withdrawal of the Forces, is of the opinion, however, that it is practically impossible to determine such a time-limit in advance, either now or at the time of the conclusion of the Special Agreements, in view of the lack of knowledge of the conditions that would prevail at the conclusion of a determined operation.

The French Delegation considers, under these circumstances, that it would be sufficient to state that the Armed Forces should be withdrawn as soon as possible after the fulfillment of their task. The Member Nations would undertake to comply with the time-limits which would be fixed by the Security Council.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The proposal of the U.S.S.R. Delegation with regard to the question of the withdrawal of Armed Forces of Member Nations after the fulfillment of measures undertaken under Article 42 of the Charter provides for concrete time-limits within which these Armed Forces should be withdrawn so that these forces would again be at the disposal of their Member Nations.

Indications in Special Agreements concluded in accordance with Article 43 of the Charter concerning the time-limits for the withdrawal of Armed Forces would serve as a guarantee to Member Nations that Armed Forces which they have made available would not be kept for a longer time than is required by the necessity for their employment by the Security Council.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation considers that in the principle of withdrawal the following two facts should be established:—

(a) that the Armed Forces after they have accomplished their task must be withdrawn to their general locations as governed by Special Agreements;

(b) that the Security Council should determine the time-limit for their withdrawal.

The U. K. Delegation cannot accept the U.S.S.R. text because it considers that it establishes too rigidly the places to which Armed Forces may be withdrawn, and goes beyond the principles which the U.K. Delegation is prepared to accept under Chapter IX—General Location of Armed Forces.

With regard to the time-limit for withdrawal, the U.K. Delegation considers that it is impracticable now or even when Special Agreements are being drawn up to indicate the precise period in which Armed Forces must be withdrawn. It is essential to leave the determination of this time-limit to the Security Council, whose decisions will be taken according to the prevailing circumstances.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U. S. Delegation believes that Armed Forces should be withdrawn to the places specified in the Special Agreements, which places may well be other than a Nation's own national territories if the stationing of the Armed Forces in other areas is specified in the Special Agreements. If it is stated that the Armed Forces must return to the general location governed by the Special Agreement or Agreements under Article 43 of the Charter, these areas certainly will be satisfactory to the Security Council and to the Member Nations concerned.

This Article is in conformity with the principles of the United Nations as the wording is derived from the Charter. It is impossible, either now or at the time the Special Agreements are being negotiated, to set a time-limit for the withdrawal of Armed Forces, as this will depend on the prevailing situation in each case, which cannot be foreseen. The decision regarding the time-limit is a prerogative of the Security Council. The U.S. Delegation feels that the Military Staff Committee should not adopt any principle which might tend to place a restriction on this authority of the Security Council.

Position of the Chinese Delegation

See the Chinese position on Article 20.

Position of the French Delegation

See the French position on Article 20 above.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The principle set out in the proposal by the U.S.S.R. Delegation establishing the time-limit for the withdrawal of Armed Forces from the territories or territorial waters of Member Nations will serve as a guarantee for these Member Nations that Armed Forces of other Member Nations will be withdrawn from their territories and territorial waters within the established time-limit and that these forces would not be held for a longer time than is required by the necessity for the fulfillment of their tasks under Article 42 of the Charter.

The reduction of these time-limits would mean the elimination of extra difficulties for countries—Members of the United Nations in connection with the stationing of Armed Forces of other Member Nations in their territories beyond the required period.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation cannot accept the U.S.S.R. text for this Article for the same reasons that it cannot accept the U.S.S.R. text for Article 20. The U.K. Delegation also considers the U.S.S.R. Article 21 is not necessary for the following reasons:—

(a) A guarantee for the withdrawal of Armed Forces within a time to be decided by the Security Council has already been given in Article 20 accepted by the U.K. Delegation.

(b) It is artificial and redundant to make a rigid distinction between the withdrawal from the territory of the aggressor nation or nations on the one hand and on the other hand from territory or territories in which facilities for the United Nations Armed Forces have been offered by Member Nations.

(c) The whole process of withdrawal will be watched by the Security Council with the advice of the Military Staff Committee to ensure that it takes place as speedily as possible.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation feels that the provisions of this Article are already cared for in Article 20, which is agreed to by four Delegations. The wording of Article 20 does not specify the territory from which the Armed Forces will withdraw but the wording includes not only the territory of a State which has violated the peace but also the territories of other Member Nations in which the Armed Forces may have been stationed for the purpose of carrying out their task.

CHAPTER VI

Degree of Readiness of Armed Forces

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation is of the opinion that in view of the characteristics of the air arm, the principle of the Degree of Readiness would be incomplete without mention of the air force which is particularly dealt with by Article 45 of the Charter.

Hence, the Chinese Delegation believes that the part of the said Article in connection with the degree of readiness of the air force contingents should be given a separate Article, dealing with urgent military measures.

The Chinese Delegation prefers this to the U.S.S.R. text as its wording emphasizes the fact that the degree of readiness of these contingents should be such as to be able to cope with urgent military measures, and therefore it is more in conformity with the idea of immediate availability that is contained in Article 45 of the Charter.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation, during the discussion on Article 16, indicated its position with regard to strength and composition of air force contributions by Member Nations. The French Delegation considers that the degree of readiness of that portion of the air forces intended to carry out the measures envisaged in Article 45 of the Charter must be determined taking into account the obligations arising from this Article.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The General Principles for the Organization of the Armed Forces should refer to all the principal Services, land, sea, and air, and should be based on the provisions of Article 43 of the Charter.

The examination of Article 45 can take place only after the completion of the study of Article 43 and the conclusion of Special Agreements. After the conclusion of such Agreements, the Security Council, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee, shall determine, under Article 45, what portion of the overall number of national air force contingents made available to the Security Council under the Agreements should be held immediately available for the taking of urgent military measures in case of necessity.

The proposals of the other Delegations stated in Article 16 of the General Principles on the furnishing of national air force contributions concern Article 45 of the Charter, and therefore, for reasons stated above, these proposals cannot be justified.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

For the reasons given in the position of the U.K. Delegation on Article 16, the U.K. Delegation considers that special reference should be made in Chapter VI to the degree of readiness of national air force contingents in accordance with the provisions of Article 45 of the Charter.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

As previously stated under Article 16, the U.S. Delegation interprets Article 45 of the Charter as an agreement on the part of the Member Nations to hold immediately available to the Security Council specific contingents of their national air force contributions in order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures. Implicit in this Article of the Charter is the immediate availability of these particular contingents, as distinguished from the state of readiness which would govern the remainder of the national air force contributions. The U.S. Delegation considers it essential that a clear distinction be made as to the special degree of readiness required of the air force contingents provided by Article 45 of the Charter. The U.S. Delegation considers that this distinction is appropriately made in the Chapter dealing with the state of readiness of armed forces.

The proposal by the U.S.S.R. Delegation in this Article fails to distinguish clearly the special state of readiness required of the air force contingents under Article 45 of the Charter. Neither does the U.S.S.R. proposal properly recognize the immediate availability of these contingents as essential in meeting the urgency of the military measures envisaged in Article 45 of the Charter.

CHAPTER VII

Provision of Assistance and Facilities, Including Rights of Passage, For Armed Forces

Article 26

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation believes that bases should be mentioned in the General Principles for two reasons:

(1) The term "bases" is implied in the meaning of the term "assistance and facilities" in Article 43 of the Charter, according to the interpretation of the Chinese Delegation.

(2) Land, sea and air bases are essential in modern operations.

Further, the Chinese Delegation accepts this text because it embodies the following points:

(1) It gives a general guarantee to furnish available bases and rights of passage, thereby operating as a legal basis on which relevant special agreements in accordance with Article 43 of the Charter are made.

(2) It has more flexibility because it covers both cases in which Member Nations would like to list bases in the original agreement and in which they would not.

(3) It provides for requirements of changing world conditions in accordance with which subsequent agreements dealing with all details of bases and other assistance and facilities, including rights of passage, may be more appropriately entered into.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that bases are a vitally important factor in the employment of armed forces. It therefore feels that it is impossible to omit mention of this question in the General Principles.

With regard to the substance of Article 26, the French Delegation considers that:—

1. The Special Agreements should list the bases placed at the disposal of the Security Council by Member Nations.

The Charter does not impose the obligation on Member Nations to place at the disposal of the Security Council their total resources and, particularly, all of their bases. Article 43 of the Charter stipulates that Member Nations of the United Nations undertake to make available to the Security Council, in accordance with a special agreement or special agreements, armed forces, assistance and facilities required for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Member Nations should, obviously, have an exact knowledge of bases which they should maintain in a state of preparedness, in order not to dissipate their efforts. If the bases were not listed in the special agreements, it would be essential to conclude specific agreements at the time of an emergency and the negotiation of such agreements would entail a loss of time which would be to the aggressor's advantage.

However, in the event that the above-mentioned bases, assistance and facilities will prove insufficient for the conduct of operations in a given zone, a guarantee will be given to the Security Council that it will be able to obtain such bases, assistance and facilities which it finds indispensable, in additional special agreements to be concluded with the Member Nations.

The French proposal is consistent with the spirit of Chapter II (Composition of the Armed Forces). All Delegations have, indeed, considered at the time of the consideration of this Chapter, that the overall strength of the United Nations Armed Forces should be limited to a size necessary to carry out successfully measures ordered by the Security Council. Obviously, such a consideration applies to bases and facilities as well as to Armed Forces themselves.

2. The special agreements should not contain detailed provisions with regard to assistance and facilities granted by the Member Nations. The provisions concerning the duration and other conditions in the exercise of rights thus granted to Armed Forces operating under the direction of the Security Council should be included in specific agreements concluded at the appropriate time.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

Article 43 of the Charter obliges Member Nations to make available Armed Forces, assistance and facilities including rights of passage to the Security Council, but this Article does not contain provisions obliging Member Nations to make bases available. The U.S.S.R. Delegation considers that the question of the provision of bases by Member Nations of the United Nations is not connected with the General Principles.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

In the opinion of the U.K. Delegation, this Article should include:—

- (a) a general guarantee to furnish available bases and rights of passage, and
- (b) a provision that details regarding bases and other assistance and facilities, including rights of passage, should be included either in the original agreement or in subsequent agreements to be concluded at the appropriate time.

The U.K. Delegation cannot accept the view of the U.S.S.R. Delegation that the question of provision of bases should not be included in General Principles because bases are not mentioned specifically in Article 43 of the Charter. In the opinion of the U.K. Delegation, the ability of the United Nations Forces to use bases of Member Nations under agreed conditions is one of the essential facilities referred to in Article 43 of the Charter "as necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security", since the United Nations Force would be incapable of effective action unless assured of such facilities.

The U.K. Delegation also cannot accept the proposal of the French Delegation because it envisages an obligation to indicate, in the original agreements, assistance, facilities including right of passage and bases.

Since the assessment of the full requirements of the United Nations Force can only be studied in detail in the light of a specific situation, the U.K. Delegation considers that the original agreements under Article 43 of the Charter should contain a general guarantee with regard to rights of passage and bases but that specific details and conditions of provision could be left to subsequent agreements made at the appropriate time.

The initial special agreements between the Security Council and Member Nations, under Article 43 of the Charter, should include general guarantees providing for rights of passage and for the use of available bases required by the United Nations Armed Forces. This is necessary in order that the Security Council may have the freedom of action in planning for the employment of Armed Forces resulting from assurance as to the availability of existing bases. The guarantee in subparagraph a of Article 26, refers only to available bases and does not require a nation to produce any facility which it does not normally have. Any such additional facilities would be covered in subparagraph b regarding specific provisions.

Details regarding the providing of assistance, facilities and rights of passage, including lists of specific bases, may be specified either in the original agreements or in subsequent agreements, concluded at the appropriate time. Such subsequent agreements may be necessary from time to time as world conditions change. The U.S. Delegation emphasizes the fact that all such agreements, including the subsequent agreements, will be made under Article 43 of the Charter. The Security Council must be assured of the use of available bases of Member Nations by a general guarantee in the initial agreements.

The U.S. Delegation not only considers that bases are included in the term "assistance and facilities" but also considers that bases constitute the major element of this term. Minor elements would be such as communications facilities, weather services, and the like. Therefore, the U.S. Delegation believes that this major element should be clearly and specifically stated in the principle governing assistance and facilities.

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation believes that it is necessary to have an article dealing with the sovereignty of bases and other facilities that are made available to the Security Council. This article accepted by the Chinese Delegation recognizes the right of a Member Nation to retain its sovereignty, command and control over bases and other facilities that it has placed at the disposal of the Security Council.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that it is necessary to introduce this Article in the document on General Principles because it considers that the preservation of national sovereignty is indispensable if it is desired that Member Nations agree to place bases and other facilities at the disposal of the Security Council.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The U.S.S.R. Delegation cannot agree to accept Article 27 for the reasons set out in its position on Article 26.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation supports this Article because it considers it necessary to safeguard the overall rights of sovereignty and control of a Member Nation when it places bases and other facilities at the disposal of the Security Council.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation considers that it is important that each Member Nation is assured that it retains its sovereignty, control, and command over bases and other facilities placed at the disposal of the Security Council and that it is essential that this Article be included in the General Principles.

Article 28

Position of the Chinese Delegation

In view of the fact that facilities and assistance play an important part in operations, their value should be taken into account by the Security Council, on the advice of the Military Staff Committee when additional contributions from the Permanent Members of the Security Council are requested in connection with an enforcement action under Chapter VII of the Charter.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation had already taken a position by accepting Article 8 (Chapter III, Overall Strength of Armed Forces) on the possibility of a considerable increase of the initial contributions provided by Member Nations, should the situation demand it.

It is obvious that the principle of equivalent contributions of Armed Forces might be applied when a comparatively small force is concerned. But the vastly different resources of the five Permanent Members of the Security Council do not allow them to adhere to the same principle, should the extent of these contributions be very appreciably increased.

For this reason, the French Delegation considers that the equivalence of possible additional contributions among the Permanent Members of the Security Council could only be arrived at taking into account together armed forces, bases, assistance and facilities.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The U.S.S.R. Delegation cannot accept Article 28 since it does not take into account the Principle of Equality in the Contribution of Armed Forces by the Permanent Members of the Security Council as set out in its proposal for Article II of the General Principles.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation has recommended in Article 26 that a Member Nation should give a general guarantee to provide available bases as required by the Security Council but realises that it is not practicable to estimate the value of bases and other facilities when assessing the initial contributions of the Five Permanent Members of the Security Council. The U.K. Delegation however considers that their value should be taken into account if and when additional contributions are requested by the Security Council when a specific operation is under consideration, in order to apportion the burden amongst the Five Permanent Members of the Security Council as equitably as possible.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation is in agreement with the principle that assistance and facilities should be taken into account when assessing the contributions of all Member Nations. However, the U.S. Delegation is not aware of a practical method of accomplishing this until such time as the actual need for specific assistance and facilities would arise when enforcement action is either under consideration or taken by the Security Council. The Article to which the U.S. Delegation has agreed states this principle adequately.

CHAPTER VIII

Logistical Support of Armed Forces

Article 31

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation feels that Article 49 of the Charter emphasizes the importance of mutual assistance by Member Nations in the execution of measures designed for the purpose of maintaining universal peace. It seems to the Chinese Delegation that in view of the destructiveness of modern warfare, it is more than probable that some Member Nations may be incapacitated in continuing to supply their troops adequately in operations. When such exigencies occur it is only reasonable that both the Security Council and other Member Nations should do all in their power to succor such unfortunate fellow members in the interest of international peace. It is with such an object in view that this Article is framed. Moreover, the Chinese Delegation believes that the Article ought to be so worded as to give a more definite method of procedure in rendering such mutual assistance.

Hence, the Chinese Delegation accepts the text as agreed upon by the three Delegations.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that the rules set out in Articles 29 and 30 should be rendered more flexible by introducing a paragraph providing for the inability of a Member Nation to fulfil its obligations.

The French Delegation considers it unreasonable to extend this assistance to the defaulting Nation by also providing it with reserves of personnel. Numerous disadvantages would follow and in particular the loss of the national character of contingents made available to the Security Council by Member Nations.

For these reasons the French Delegation prefers the statement of a broad principle, which would leave the Security Council, after it had been notified by a Member Nation, the full initiative of solving on the advice of the Military Staff Committee any special problems which might arise by the default of a Member Nation.

The text favored by the French Delegation appears to express in a satisfactory manner the role of the Security Council in such a case.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

Article 13 of the General Principles states that no Member Nation of the United Nations shall be urged to increase its armed forces for the specific purpose of placing a contribution at the disposal of the Security Council. The Security Council shall also not demand of a Member Nation to make armed forces available of a size which that Member Nation would not be in a position to furnish. Therefore, it is inadvisable to mention beforehand in the General Principles the "inability" of a Member Nation to provide the armed forces which that Member Nation has made available with everything necessary.

The proposal of the U.S.S.R. Delegation makes it possible in individual instances for a Member Nation to request the Security Council for assistance regarding the provision of that Member Nation with supplies and transport of which he is deficient. Such assistance may be rendered by special decision of the Security Council if that Member Nation expresses such a desire.

All Delegations recognize the possibility that any Member Nation may, for reasons beyond its control, require assistance in order to maintain the effectiveness of its contributions to the United Nations Armed Forces. It is logical therefore, that principles should be established to cover such circumstances.

The U.K. Delegation considers that on receipt of a request for assistance by a Member Nation, the Security Council, with the advice of the Military Staff Committee, would decide whether the application was justifiable and, if so, to what extent assistance should be provided. Following a decision to assist the applicant, the Security Council, being itself unable to provide material assistance, would normally help the Member Nation by acting as initiator and intermediary in negotiations with other Member Nations, or, in certain circumstances, by concluding agreements with appropriate Member Nations.

At the same time the U.K. Delegation also recognizes that the integrity of a Member Nation's contribution should not be disturbed without the free consent of the Member Nation.

The U.K. Delegation considers that the Article accepted by the Chinese and U.S. Delegations incorporates all the above principles, whereas the Article accepted by the French and U.S.S.R. Delegations does not indicate the responsibilities of the Security Council following a decision to provide such assistance as it has deemed necessary.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation believes that cases of a Member Nation's inability to discharge its responsibilities under Article 29 must be provided for. It might be, for example, that during the time a Member Nation has armed forces operating under the Security Council, that Nation may be over-run by hostile forces or may suffer severe damage to its industries. Such a condition might make it impossible for that Nation to continue to furnish supplies to its contingents in the United Nations

Armed Forces. The Article agreed to by the U.S. Delegation is intended to provide for such a condition.

The U.S. Delegation particularly stresses the importance of the second sentence of the Article agreed to by the Chinese, U.K. and U.S. Delegations. This sentence serves to protect the tactical integrity of units of armed forces made available to the Security Council. There must be assurance that such units will not be unbalanced by any transfer from the contributions of one Member Nation to make up deficiencies in the contributions of another Member Nation without the agreement of the Member Nations concerned.

The proposal of the U.S.S.R. Delegation provides for deviations from Article 29 by special decisions of the Security Council, but does not provide for the agreement of the Member Nation furnishing the assistance, and is therefore unacceptable to the U.S. Delegation.

CHAPTER IX

General Location of Armed Forces

Article 32

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation considers that the object of the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council is to maintain or restore international peace. This fact should be kept constantly in mind when the "general location" of such Forces is considered. Generally speaking, therefore, these Forces should be so located that prompt action could be taken by the Security Council in the interest of peace. It follows that the Security Council will have a wider choice of locations for these Armed Forces to achieve this purpose if Member Nations are allowed to base their Armed Forces made available to the Security Council in places where they have legal right of access. Hence, the U.S.S.R. proposal is unacceptable as its interpretation of the term "general location" is too restrictive, and, therefore, prejudiced to the effective functioning of the Armed Forces. Further, it is the belief of the Chinese Delegation that the phrase "any territories or waters to which they have legal right of access" in the text is more all-embracing and already inclusive of the list of possible locations as suggested by the French Delegation.

Finally, since the Military Staff Committee has agreed that Armed Forces made available to the Security Council are from the units which form an integral part of the armed forces of Member Nations (Article 3, General Principles) and are under the "exclusive command" of the contributing Nations when not employed by the Security Council (Article 36, General Principles), and since Article 51 of the Charter recognizes the "inherent right" of self-defence in case of an armed attack, it seems logical to the Chinese Delegation that Member Nations should have the right to exercise "discretion", within the terms of Special Agreements under Article 43 of the Charter, in the choice of locations for these Forces.

For the above reasons, the Chinese Delegation accepts the texts for Articles 32 and 33.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation cannot accept either the U.S.S.R. proposal or the proposal supported by the U.S., U.K. and Chinese Delegations.

In the opinion of the French Delegation, the U.S.S.R. proposal is much too restrictive. It takes into consideration the legal and geographical point of view of the U.S.S.R. only, which is territorially and constitutionally united, and the provision of Article 107 of the Charter only, relative to the occupation of ex-enemy territories, to the exclusion of other Articles of the Charter dealing with similar measures, such as Articles 102, 82 or 83. It does not in any way take into consideration the entirely different geographic and legal factors of other federations as, for example, the French Union, in which are associated under various juridical acts—Metropolitan France, its Departments and territories overseas, its associated territories and States geographically spread out throughout the world. In limiting their stationing only in their national territories, the U.S.S.R. proposal also does not take into account the absolute necessity for the strategic world distribution of Armed Forces to be made available to the United Nations, if it is desired that their intervention be speedy and consequently effective.

In the opinion of the French Delegation, the proposal supported by the U.S., U.K. and Chinese Delegations is not sufficiently explicit. The expression "right of legal access" might lead both to misunderstanding and to possible suspicion. This could have been the case before the existence of the United Nations Charter, which deals, in Articles 82-83, 102 and 107, with the legal conditions of occupation of territories outside national boundaries. It appears to the French Delegation not only appropriate but indispensable to refer to them.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

Proposals of other Delegations on the general location set out in Articles 32 and 33 of the General Principles permit the stationing of armed forces of Member Nations which they make available to the Security Council in any territories or waters to which they have the "legal right" of access. Such a principle of location of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council cannot be justified by the interests of maintenance of peace and development of friendly relations among countries. Moreover, experience has shown that the presence of foreign troops on territories of other Member Nations without sufficient grounds does not facilitate the strengthening of international peace and the development of good neighborly relations among states. On the contrary, it gives rise to a feeling of anxiety among Member Nations for their national independence. It is for these reasons that the proposal by the U.S.S.R. Delegation in Article 32 provides for the garrisoning of Armed Forces only in their own territories or territorial waters.

Regarding the stationing of Armed Forces of Member Nations during the fulfillment of measures under Article 42 of the Charter, it will be carried out under the direction of the Security Council and that is spoken of in Article 35 of the General Principles.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation considers that, provided a Member Nation's Armed Forces, when not employed by the Security Council are located or based in the territories or waters to which the Member Nation has legal right of access, there can be no valid objection on the part of any other Member Nation. The U.K. Delegation therefore cannot accept the rigid interpretation contained in the Soviet proposal.

The U.K. Delegation also objects to the French proposal since it attempts to define in detail the "legal right of access", which is not the task of the Military Staff Committee.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation believes that it is essential to the effectiveness of the Armed Forces that they may be based wherever the Member Nation has the legal right of access. The General Principles governing the location of the Armed Forces should be broad and general. The U.S. Delegation does not agree that a special list of authorized locations should be included. Such a list of locations might form part of the Special Agreements under Article 43 of the Charter, but would be out of place in the General Principles, consequently, the U.S. Delegation does not agree with the French Article.

The U.S.S.R. Article restricts the locations where a nation can station its armed forces in time of peace. The U.S. Delegation cannot agree to the incorporation in the General Principles of any restriction upon the legal right which a nation may have to base forces in areas other than its own national territories and consequently cannot accept the U.S.S.R. proposal.

Article 33

Position of the Chinese Delegation

See Chinese position on Article 32.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that an appropriate geographical distribution of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council will enable the latter to undertake prompt action in any part of the world. Such a provision will undoubtedly increase the efficiency of the United Nations Armed Forces.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

Proposals of other Delegations on the general location set out in Articles 32 and 33 of the General Principles permit the stationing of armed forces of Member Nations which they make available to the Security Council in any territories or waters to which they have the "legal right" of access. Such a principle of location of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council cannot be justified by the interests of maintenance of peace and development of friendly relations among countries. Moreover, experience has shown that the presence of foreign troops on the territories of other Member Nations without sufficient grounds does not facilitate the strengthening of international peace and the development of good neighborly relations among states. On the contrary, it gives rise to a feeling of anxiety among Member Nations for their national independence. It is for these reasons that the proposal by the U.S.S.R. Delegation in Article 32 provides for the garrisoning of Armed Forces only in their own territories or territorial waters.

Regarding the stationing of Armed Forces of Member Nations during the fulfillment of measures under Article 42 of the Charter, it will be carried out under the direction of the Security Council and that is spoken of in Article 35 of the General Principles.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation has accepted this paragraph since it will provide useful guidance to the Security Council and the Military Staff Committee when assessing the overall strength of the armed forces and when drawing up the Special Agreements under Article 43 of the Charter.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation believes that it is necessary that the locations of the United Nations Armed Forces should be so distributed geographically that the Security Council can take prompt action in any part of the world. All Delegations have approved a wording similar to this Article in Article 6 relating to Overall Strength. Both factors of Strength and Location are equally important in enabling the Security Council to initiate action promptly, and therefore the U.S. Delegation considers the inclusion of this Article essential.

Article 34

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The object of the Article on "General Location" is to enable the Security Council to know when and where the Armed Forces are available so that plans of operations could be accordingly made when action is considered desirable. It follows, therefore, that any displacement of these Forces that modifies their availability as specified by Special Agreements under Article 43 of the Charter should be brought to the notice of the Security Council. For the above reasons, the Chinese Delegation accepts this text.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation had specified the reasons for the inclusion of such a special Article dealing with movements of Forces, likely to change their delay in intervention, when stating its position with regard to Article 17 above.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

The proposal of the other Delegations provides that Member Nations which have made their Armed Forces available to the Security Council should inform the Security Council of any displacement of these forces which might change their availability.

The proposal of the U.S.S.R. Delegation on Article 32 permits the stationing of Armed Forces made available by Member Nations only within the limits of their own territories or territorial waters with the exception of cases envisaged in Article 107 of the Charter. Within those territories Armed Forces of Member Nations have the full right to change the areas of their garrisoning at the discretion of the Member Nations without informing the Security Council of such changes.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The availability of contributions of Member Nations includes two elements, namely, the time taken to mobilize and the time taken to concentrate in a given area. The U.K. Delegation considers that a Member Nation will undertake to produce its contributions, when called for by the Security Council within a given time. The U.K. Delegation recognizes that a Member Nation will from time to time wish to make changes in location of its forces made available to the Security Council. When such changes affect the time taken to concentrate, the U.K. Delegation considers that the Member Nation should be under an obligation to inform the Security Council immediately.

Although it may be held that such an obligation would exist under the Special Agreements, Article 34 emphasizes this requirement and the U.K. Delegation therefore favors inclusion of this Article.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation is of the opinion that customary international procedure requires a nation which is a party to a treaty or agreement to notify promptly other signatories to the instrument when that nation is unable to comply fully with the terms of the treaty or agreement. For this reason the U.S. Delegation does not consider that Article 34 is essential.

However, since several Delegations have expressed the view that this Article is needed to insure that the Security Council will be informed of any change in the availability of a Member Nation's contribution of Armed Forces, the U.S. Delegation has no objection to the inclusion of Article 34 in the General Principles.

CHAPTER X

Strategic Direction and Command of Armed Forces

Article 41

Position of the Chinese Delegation

The Chinese Delegation considers either the word "supreme" or the word "overall" acceptable. Further, it is the opinion of the Chinese Delegation that while it is desirable to have an Article dealing in a general way with the supreme command of the Armed Forces, it is premature to lay down the chain of command in detail. The text agreed to by the Chinese Delegation is adequate enough as a statement of a general principle since it covers the cases of Overall Commanders of different theatres of operations.

Position of the French Delegation

The French Delegation considers that the experience gained in the last war with regard to the organization of Command, should not be ignored in the General Principles governing the organization of the Armed Forces.

Actually, the problems which confronted the Allied Governments at that time are of a similar character to those which will have to be solved by the United Nations in the near future. It would therefore appear profitable to bring to the attention of the Security Council the advisability of adopting a procedure which, from the point of view of the French Delegation, has given proof of its value.

The French Delegation likewise considers it essential that it be clearly stated in the text of the Article that Commands will be delegated by the Security Council on the advice of the Military Staff Committee. Indeed, only an international authority, with the advice of a technical body, has both governmental and military knowledge as well as the impartiality required to make such decisions.

It seems impossible to the French Delegation to uphold in the face of public opinion a procedure which would invest the Supreme Commander of an operational theatre, whatever may be his authority and capabilities, with the authority of personally nominating the Commander-in-Chief of the land, sea and air forces which will come under his command. It would be difficult to reconcile such an eventuality with the international character which should be retained, from the French point of view, both by the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council as well as to the Command of these Forces.

Position of the U.S.S.R. Delegation

In the view of the U.S.S.R. Delegation at the present stage of the study of Article 43 of the Charter from the military point of view, it is sufficient to provide for in the General Principles that the Security Council on the advice of the Military Staff Committee may appoint an overall Commander or overall Commanders of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council. A detailed study of the questions of Organization of Command can take place at a later stage.

Position of the U.K. Delegation

The U.K. Delegation considers that provision should be made for the appointment by the Security Council of a Supreme Commander of Armed Forces made available to the Security Council or Supreme Commanders should there be more than one theatre of operations.

In addition, the U.K. Delegation considers that circumstances may also require the appointment of Commanders-in-Chief of Land, Sea or Air Forces acting under the Supreme Commander or Commanders and that the provisions of Article 41 should make this possibility clear.

The fact that Article 41 provides for these Commanders does not make their actual appointment mandatory, neither does it anticipate the ultimate structure of command which may be set up to meet a particular situation. The U.K. Delegation, however, considers it essential to state in the General Principles that the Security Council has the power to appoint Supreme Commanders or Commanders-in-Chief without prejudice to the provisions of Article 47 of the Charter.

Position of the U.S. Delegation

The U.S. Delegation believes that the designation of the Commanders for a specific operation under the Security Council cannot be subject to rigidly established criteria. It is sound from the military point of view, and in accordance with the provisions of the Charter, that the Security Council, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee, should be empowered to appoint the Overall Commander for such an operation. However, additional fixed rules concerning the actual number of component Commanders to be appointed by the Security Council might be detrimental to the formation of an efficient Command echelon.

The operation in hand might be one which did not employ all the components of forces, land, sea, and air, made available to the Security Council or simultaneous operations in different regions might present altogether different command situations. It might be desirable at the time to follow the procedure as set out in the wording accepted by the French and U.K. Delegations or it might be more desirable for a component Commander to be designated by the Overall Commander. It is impractical to prejudge all situations which might arise, and to formulate exact and inflexible rules for their solution.

For these reasons, the U.S. Delegation believes that the method of designation of Commanders of mixed contingents of forces made available to the Security Council, other than the overall Commander, must be resolved when the occasion arises. Therefore, the U.S. Delegation adheres to the wording of this Article accepted by the Chinese, U.S.S.R. and U.S. Delegations.

With regard to the minor divergence in wording between the respective first paragraphs of this Article, the U.S. Delegation is agreeable to the use of either wording, "overall commander(s)" or "supreme commander(s)."

ANNEX "B"

GENERAL COMMENTS BY THE FRENCH DELEGATION

The French Military Delegation considers that the Principles of Organization of the Armed Forces to be made available to the United Nations have been formulated in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations in that, in the opinion of the French Military Delegation, they imply unanimity among the five Permanent Members of the Security Council regarding the employment of these Forces. Although the security system which will emerge from those Principles may be strictly limited in its objective and in its means, the French Military Delegation considers that it is not without a positive value for the collective security, because conflicts would thus be confined to their original source and consequently their expansion prevented.

The French Military Delegation considers that some of the Principles of Organization tend to limit the strength of the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council. The French Military Delegation deliberately approved these Principles, thus anticipating in particular the results which would follow with regard to disarmament, and which would endow the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council with a relatively more important position in the entire existing modern armed forces.

It was also considered that "the moral weight and the potential power behind any decision to employ the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council by Member Nations of the United Nations in enforcement action will be very great and this fact will directly influence the size of the Armed Forces required."

In the course of its work the Military Staff Committee did not consider it appropriate to tackle certain problems of a politico-military character, the solutions of which are, however, considered as indispensable by the French Military Delegation. And so, on their solution rests all hope of the effectiveness of Armed Forces to be raised by implementing the General Principles which are the subject of this Report. It follows that the two major problems of determining the aggressor and the setting in motion of measures, taken in pursuance of Articles 41 and 42 of the Charter, must, in the opinion of the French Military Delegation, be solved before any action by the Armed Forces made available to the Security Council can be contemplated.

From a purely military viewpoint, the factor of speed in the setting in motion of these measures is imperative for the success of the action undertaken. The chances of successful intervention will be relatively all the greater in that the comparable strength of the Forces weighs more heavily in favor of the United Nations. Therefore, the French Military Delegation considers that it is of paramount importance that action by the Security Council should be swift and energetic, and with this object in view:

1. The determination of the aggressor must be decided as soon as possible.
2. Economic and political actions envisaged in Articles 40 and 41 of the Charter must be so combined as to prepare and support the military intervention which might ensue.
3. The plans drawn up by the Security Council for the employment of the Armed Forces must provide for the immediate enforcement of measures envisaged in Article 42 of the Charter and may thus prevent any aggression.

In the opinion of the French Military Delegation only under these conditions will it be possible for the Security Council to take really effective measures which will enable it to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Furthermore, the French Military Delegation notes that one of the important problems which the Military Staff Committee did not consider came within its province is the financial problem raised as to the manner of settling the expenses devolving on Member Nations in carrying out the directives of the Security Council. The solution of this problem by the Security Council will undoubtedly have a bearing on the importance of the contribution which each Nation will agree to provide to the Security Council.

The solutions of the problems aforementioned, should, from the viewpoint of the French Military Delegation, be undertaken immediately in order that the negotiation of Special Agreements envisaged in Article 43 of the Charter be commenced.

F. THE ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

Mr. Harry S. Truman, President of the United States; Mr. C. R. Attlee, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom; and Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, met in Washington, D.C., in November 1945 "to consider the possibility of international action: (a) To prevent the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes, and (b) to promote the use of recent and future advances in scientific knowledge, particularly in the utilization of atomic energy, for peaceful and humanitarian ends."¹

On November 15, 1945, the three heads of Governments issued a declaration which stated, among other things, that "in order to attain the most effective means of entirely eliminating the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes and promoting its widest use for industrial and humanitarian purposes, we are of the opinion that at the earliest practicable date a Commission should be set up under the United Nations Organization to prepare recommendations for submission to the Organization."²

Discussion of this problem took place at the meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States held in Moscow in December 1945. On December 27 the three Foreign Ministers issued a communiqué which stated, inter alia, that "the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R., the United States, and the United Kingdom have agreed to recommend, for the consideration of the General Assembly of the United Nations, the establishment by the United Nations of a commission to consider problems arising from the discovery of atomic energy and related matters."³ The Foreign Ministers agreed to invite the other permanent members of the Security Council—France and China—together with Canada, to join with them in assuming the initiative in sponsoring a resolution, drafted in Moscow, relating to the establishment of a commission for the control and use of atomic energy.

Pursuant to the agreement reached in December 1945 at the Moscow Conference, and to subsequent negotiations, the British Government, acting on behalf of the five permanent members of the Security Council and Canada, on January 4, 1946, proposed that the resolution drafted at Moscow relating to the establishment of a commission for the control and use of atomic energy be added to the agenda of the General Assembly at the first part of the first session, scheduled to take place in London.

The General Assembly referred the establishment of the proposed commission to its First Committee (Political and Security), which considered the proposed resolution at its second and third meetings on January 21 and 22, 1946. At the end of the meeting of January 21, the resolution was approved without change by 46 votes to 0, with 1 abstention. After a further brief debate on the following day, the First Committee on January 23 approved unanimously the report of the Rapporteur on the establishment of the commission.

On January 24 the report and resolution authorizing the Commission on Atomic Energy were approved in the General Assembly with no dissenting votes. According to the resolution, the Commission was to be composed of one representative from each of the States represented on the Security Council, and Canada when that State was not a member of the Security Council.

The Commission was required to inquire with the utmost despatch into all phases of the problems, and to submit its reports and recommendations to the Security Council. In the appropriate cases, the Security Council was required to transmit these reports to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations as well as to the Economic and Social Council and other organs within the framework of the United Nations.

The resolution set forth the terms of reference of the Commission as being to make specific proposals:

(a) for extending between all nations the exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends;

(b) for control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes;

(c) for the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons and of all other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction;

(d) for effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying States against the hazards of violations and evasions.

By May 28, 1946, all States entitled to representation on the Commission had appointed their representatives. The Secretary-General convened the first meeting of the Commission on June 14, 1946. A Committee on Rules of Procedure was appointed at the first meeting. The draft Rules submitted by it were approved by the Commission on July 3 and by the Security Council on July 10; they were officially adopted by the Commission at its fifth meeting on July 18.

At the first meeting of the Atomic Energy Commission, the representative of the United States presented a plan for the creation of an International Atomic Development Authority entrusted with all phases of the development and use of atomic energy. Under this plan the Authority would conduct continuous surveys of world supplies of uranium and thorium, and would bring the raw materials under its control. It would possess the exclusive right to conduct research in the field of atomic explosives, and all other research would be open only to nations under license of the Authority, which would provide them with denatured materials. Dangerous activities of the Authority and its stockpiles would be decentralized and strategically distributed. All nations would grant the freedom of inspection deemed necessary by the Authority. The representative of the United States stressed the importance of immediate punishment for infringements of the rights of the Authority. He urged that "there must be no veto to protect those who violate their solemn agreements not to develop or use atomic energy for destructive purposes."

At the second meeting of the Commission on June 19, 1946, the representative of the U.S.S.R. suggested that the first measure to be adopted should be the conclusion of an international agreement to prohibit the production and use of atomic energy weapons. Within three months from the entry into force of the agreement, he urged, all atomic weapons should be destroyed. Violation of the agreement should be severely punished under the domestic legislation of the contracting parties. The agreement should be of indefinite duration, coming in force after approval by the Security Council and ratification by the Council's permanent members. All States, whether or not Members of the United Nations, should be obliged to fulfil all provisions of the agreement.

After various delegations had expressed their views on the two proposals, it was decided to establish a Working Committee to consider the proposals made and to establish, if necessary, sub-committees.

The Working Committee set up: (1) Sub-Committee 1 to study all proposals put forward by the delegations to the Commission and to prepare the framework of a working plan by presenting to the Working Committee a list of headings or topics to be considered; (2) Committee 2 to examine questions associated with the control of atomic energy activities and to make specific recommendations for such control; (3) a Legal Advisory Committee to examine the legal aspects of atomic energy control; (4) a Scientific and Technical Committee to advise on the scientific aspects of the problem.

Sub-Committee 1 held three informal meetings from July 1 to 11, and presented a report to the Working Committee on the results of its discussions. Committee 2 continued the work begun in the Working Committee and Sub-Committee 1 and examined at length the proposals made. At its fourth meeting on July 31, it decided that before proceeding with further discussions it was advisable to clarify the scientific and technical facts underlying control of atomic energy. It therefore requested the Scientific and Technical Committee to prepare a report on the question of whether effective control of atomic energy was possible, together with an indication of the method by which that Committee considered that effective control could be achieved. On August 2, Committee 2 deferred further meetings until it had received the report of the Scientific and Technical Committee.

After eight weeks of intensive study, the Scientific and Technical Committee, on September 26, 1946, unanimously adopted a report for submission to Committee 2. The report stated that the Committee did not find a basis in the available scientific facts for supposing that effective control of atomic energy was not technologically possible. Whether or not it was politically feasible was for the Atomic Energy Commission to decide.

At its sixth meeting on October 2, Committee 2 considered the Report of the Scientific and Technical Committee and decided to continue its discussions on the basis of the report. At its seventh meeting on October 8, Committee 2 unanimously decided to examine and report on the safeguards required at each stage in the production and use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes to prevent the possibility of misuse. In accordance with this decision, a program of work was outlined by the Secretariat and adopted by Committee 2 at an informal meeting on October 14. Under this outline, Committee discussions on safeguards to prevent diversions of materials were to follow a seven-step plan: uranium and thorium mines, concentration plants, refineries, chemical and metallurgical plants, primary reactors and associated chemical separation plants, isotope separation plants and secondary reactors.

On October 15, at an informal meeting of Committee 2, the representative of the U.S.S.R. proposed that atomic energy control should begin at the most basic stage—unmined mineral resources—and he called for a world-wide report on uranium deposits. From that date informal conversations were held about twice weekly to discuss in detail the types of necessary safeguards and to hear statements by experts. The discussions resulted in a draft report, completed on December 13, dealing with safeguards against diversions and clandestine activities.

In the meantime the Legal Advisory Committee held three meetings on June 18 and 30 and August 2. With the assistance of the Secretariat, it drew up a provisional list of topics under these headings: (1) drafting, including ultimately the preparation of a draft treaty or treaties; (2) the study of specific legal questions arising in the course of the work of the Commission and its committees; (3) the study of the relationship between the system of measures of control recommended by Committee 2 and the United Nations. This was submitted to the Working Committee, with a request for a guidance on the next stage of the Committee's work so that it might be co-ordinated with the work of other committees. The Working Committee considered the matter on August 9, and decided that it was not necessary for the Legal Advisory Committee to make recommendations on topics on the provisional list until further advised by the Working Committee.

At its sixth meeting on November 13, 1946, the Atomic Energy Commission decided by 10 affirmative votes, with 2 abstentions, to submit to the Security Council before December 31, 1946, a report on its work, its findings and recommendations. Committee 2 was requested to draft the report.

While this report was being prepared, the second part of the first session of the General Assembly was considering various proposals concerning the regulation and reduction of armaments, including atomic weapons. At the Atomic Energy Commission's seventh meeting on December 5, the Chairman of the Commission stated that he had thought it advisable to ask the First Committee to try not to encroach on the work of the Atomic Energy Commission, and not to prejudice the future course or outcome of that work. The Chairman's action was generally approved by the members of the Commission.

At the same meeting the United States representative offered a resolution on the principles to be included in the findings and recommendations of the report of the Commission to the Security Council. These proposals, based, as were the first United States proposals, on the prospective establishment of an International Atomic Development Authority, were discussed at the eighth and ninth meetings of the Commission on December 17 and 20 respectively.

Meanwhile, the General Assembly on December 14, 1946, approved unanimously a resolution on the principles governing the general regulation and reduction of armaments, which, among other things, urged the expeditious fulfilment by the Atomic Energy Commission of its terms of reference. It also recommended that the Security Council expedite consideration of the reports made to it by the Atomic Energy Commission, that it facilitate the work of the Commission and that the Security Council expedite consideration of a draft convention or conventions for the creation of an international system of control and inspection, these conventions to include the prohibition of atomic and all other major weapons adaptable now and in the future to mass destruction and the control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes.

On December 20 the United States draft resolution was modified by a Canadian amendment, slightly revised at the suggestion of the Mexican representative. According to the Canadian amendment, the Commission resolved that, for drafting purposes, the principles on which the United States resolution was based should be incorporated by the Working Committee in the report and should not necessarily follow the exact text of the United States resolution, in order to conform the wording to the relevant parts of the text of the General Assembly resolution of December 14 on the principles governing the general regulation and reduction of armaments. According to the amendment proposed by the Mexican representative, it was stated in the resolution that these proposals had been made by the United States representative. The United States resolution, as amended, was adopted by the Commission. Poland abstained from voting and the representative of the U.S.S.R. did not participate. The Working Committee was instructed to include these proposals in the draft of the Commission report to be submitted to the Security Council.

A draft report was approved by Committee 2 at a meeting on December 26 and by the Working Committee on December 27. The U.S.S.R. representative did not participate in the Working Committee's meeting of December 27 because, as had been stated at the Commission's meeting of December 20, he was unable to be a party to any decision on the substance of the United States proposal. Furthermore, at the meeting of December 27, the Polish representative had accepted the portion of the draft report as agreed upon by the Working Committee, but had reiterated the view of the Polish delegation that it was not beneficial to proceed with any report before complete agreement on principle had been reached among the permanent members of the Security Council. On December 30 the Commission, with 10 votes in favor and abstentions on the part of the U.S.S.R. and Poland, adopted the draft report of its Working Committee as the report of the Commission and submitted it to the Security Council on December 31, 1946.

The report described the work of the Commission, approved the report of the Scientific and Technical Committee on scientific and technical aspects of control and the report of Committee 2 on safeguards to ensure the use of atomic energy only for peaceful purposes, and made recommendations. In its general findings it stated that scientifically, technically and practically it was feasible: to extend among all nations the exchange of basic scientific information on atomic energy for peaceful ends; to control atomic energy to the extent necessary to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes; to accomplish the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons; and to provide effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying States against the hazards of violations and evasions. It was also stated that an effective system for control of atomic energy must be international and must be established by an enforceable multilateral treaty or convention which in turn must be administered and operated by an international organ or agency within the United Nations. An international agreement to outlaw national production, possession or use of atomic weapons was considered as essential for an international system of control or inspection but would not be sufficient to ensure the use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes or to provide effective safeguards to protect complying States against the dangers of violations and evasions.

On the basis of its findings, the Commission recommended the creation of a strong and comprehensive international system of control and inspection by a treaty or convention in which all Members of the United Nations would participate on fair and equitable terms.

This treaty, it was urged, should include provisions establishing an international authority possessing power and the responsibility necessary and appropriate for the prompt and effective discharge of its duties imposed upon it by the terms of the treaty or convention. The treaty should also provide that the rule of unanimity of the permanent members which governed all substantive decisions of the Security Council should have no relation to the work of the Authority.

The Authority would promote among all nations the exchange of basic scientific information on atomic energy and should have positive responsibilities as regards research and development in order to promote the beneficial uses of atomic energy and eliminate the destructive ones. It would establish safeguards against the dangerous use of atomic energy but would not interfere with the prosecution of pure scientific research or the publication of its results.

Decisions of the Authority should, however, govern the operations of national agencies for atomic energy with the minimum interference.

The treaty or convention would also provide the representatives of the Authority with unimpeded rights of ingress, egress and access for the performance of their inspections. It would prohibit the manufacture, possession, and use of atomic weapons by all nations which were parties to the treaty and would provide for the disposal of any existing stocks of atomic weapons and for the proper use of fissionable materials.

The treaty would also specify the methods of determining violations of its terms and would establish the measures of enforcement or swift and certain punishment for violators. Enforcement and punishment of violators would not be subject to veto.

Finally, the treaty should provide a schedule for the completion of the transitional process leading step by step to the full and effective establishment of international control of atomic energy.

On February 13, 1947, the Security Council adopted a resolution on disarmament which provided, inter alia, that the Council consider as soon as possible the report submitted by the Atomic Energy Commission and take suitable decisions in order to facilitate the Commission's work.

At a meeting of the Security Council on February 18 the representative of the U.S.S.R. proposed twelve specific amendments and additions to the general findings and recommendations contained in the first report of the Atomic Energy Commission. The U.S.S.R. proposals included a provision that inspection, supervision and management by an international agency should apply to all existing atomic plants immediately after the entry into force of an appropriate convention or conventions. Another proposal suggested that an effective system of control of atomic energy must be international in scope and established by an enforceable multilateral convention administered within the framework of the Security Council. Further amendments would provide for the destruction of stocks of manufactured and unfinished atomic weapons, and for elimination of the recommendation in the Commission's report that in case of violation there should be no legal right, by veto or otherwise, whereby a wilful violator of the terms of the treaty or convention should be protected from the consequences of violation of its terms.

On March 10 the Security Council adopted unanimously a resolution which, among other things, stated that the Council would transmit the record of its consideration of the first report of the Atomic Energy Commission to the Commission; urged the Commission to continue its enquiry into all phases of the problem of the international control of atomic energy; and requested the Commission to submit a second report to the Security Council before the next session of the General Assembly.

In order to facilitate its work, the Commission on March 19 resolved that its committees should consider the questions resulting from the Security Council resolution of March 10 and should, in particular, consider the questions relating to the establishment of international control of atomic energy on which the necessary agreement among its members had not yet been reached.

On March 31, 1947, the Working Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission, by a vote of 10 in favor, with Poland and the U.S.S.R. abstaining, adopted the following resolution regarding its future procedure and that of Committee 2 of the Commission:

The Working Committee resolves to consider at its meetings the points of disagreement outlined in the statements of the representative of the U.S.S.R. in the Security Council.

At the same time the Working Committee requests Committee 2 to proceed on its part by means of formal or informal meetings and conversations with the study of the various questions following from the resolutions of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Security Council, in particular, questions outlined in the last paragraph of Part I of the first report of the Atomic Energy Commission and new questions not studied before, in order to implement the requirements of the General Assembly resolutions dated January 24 and December 14, 1946.

The last paragraph of Part I of the Atomic Energy Commission report, referred to in the resolution, as adopted on last December 31, 1946, read as follows:

Many important questions, which have been considered only in broad outline, during the course of its (the Commission's) deliberations remain to be further studied by the Commission. These questions include: the detailed powers, characteristics, and functions of the International Control Agency for which the need is expressed in the 'First Report on Safeguards Required to ensure the use of atomic energy only for peaceful purposes,' including such matters as organization, financing, and staffing; the relationships between the agency, the various organs of the United Nations, and the participating states; powers of the agency in matters of research, development, and planning; the provisions for transition to the full operation of the international system of control; and other specific matters which should be included in the international treaty or convention establishing control over atomic energy.

On April 16, Committee 2 adopted the following resolution on definition of terms:

Resolved: that a standing Sub-Committee be established consisting of the representatives of the U.S.S.R., the United States, China, Colombia and Belgium, representing the five official languages, to assist the committee in the formulation of definitions.

Initially, the Sub-Committee will examine definitions which have been used in the first report of the Atomic Energy Commission, with a view to reaching agreement, and report thereon to the Committee.

Subsequently, the Sub-Committee will examine and define such terms as are used, or likely to be used, in negotiation, along with such other terms as may be specifically referred to it by the Committee.

Further, the Sub-Committee may co-opt any representative to serve on the Sub-Committee.

Committee 2 on June 4 received four working papers which had been drafted by working groups composed mostly of scientific and technical experts of different delegations. The experts were members of the working groups in their individual capacity and not as representatives of their respective Governments. Their findings, therefore, as laid down in the four working papers, in no way prejudged decisions to be eventually taken by the Atomic Energy Commission and did not in any way commit their Governments.

The four working papers dealt with the following subjects:

(1) Functions of the International Agency in relation to research and development activities;

(2) Functions of the International Agency in relation to location and mining of ores;

(3) Functions of the International Agency in relation to processing and purification of source material;

(4) Functions of the International Agency in relation to stockpiling, production and distribution of nuclear fuels and the design, construction and operation of isotope separation plants and of nuclear reactors.

The Committee, before considering the individual working papers, agreed to enter into a discussion on the general principles underlying the papers—ownership, operation and management of dangerous facilities by an international agency. The general discussion on the underlying principles of the four working papers, however, would be confined to such principles as contained a deviation from or a modification of the first report of the Atomic Energy Commission to the Security Council.

On June 10, the Working Committee agreed on the principle of using the wording of the Security Council's resolution on the first report of the Atomic Energy Commission—"treaty or treaties, or convention or conventions"—by which the functions and the scope of the international system of control of atomic energy should be defined. The original wording of the first report spoke in the relevant section of "a treaty or convention."

The representative of the United States entered a reservation, stating that in his opinion the Atomic Energy Commission had already taken the decision that there should be only one treaty or convention.

At the twelfth meeting of the full Atomic Energy Commission on June 11 the representative of the U.S.S.R. submitted eight new proposals for the control of atomic energy. The Commission agreed to refer the U.S.S.R. proposals to the Working Committee for further study.

Following is a list of the proposals:

1. For ensuring the use of atomic energy only for peaceful purposes, in accordance with the international convention on the prohibition of atomic and other major weapons of mass destruction and also with the purpose of preventing violations of the convention on the prohibition of atomic weapons and for the protection of complying States against breaches of violations and evasions, there shall be established strict international control simultaneously over all facilities engaged in mining of atomic raw materials and in production of atomic materials and atomic energy.

2. For carrying out measures of control of atomic energy facilities, there shall be established, within the framework of the Security Council, an international commission for atomic energy control to be called the International Control Commission.

3. The International Control Commission shall have its own inspectorial apparatus.

4. Terms and organizational principles of international control of atomic energy, and also composition, rights and obligations of the International Control Commission, as well as provisions on the basis of which it shall carry out its activities, shall be determined by a special international convention on atomic energy control, which is to be concluded in accordance with the convention on the prohibition of atomic weapons.

5. With the purpose of ensuring the effectiveness of international control of atomic energy, the convention on the control of atomic energy shall be based on the following fundamental provisions:

(a) The International Control Commission shall be composed of the Representatives of States Members of the Atomic Energy Commission established by the General Assembly decision of 24 January 1946, and may create such subsidiary organs which it finds necessary for the fulfilment of its functions.

(b) The International Control Commission shall establish its own rules of procedure.

(c) The personnel of the International Control Commission shall be selected on an international basis.

(d) The International Control Commission shall periodically carry out inspection of facilities for mining of atomic raw materials and for the production of atomic materials and atomic energy.

6. While carrying out inspection of atomic energy facilities, the International Control Commission shall undertake the following actions:

(a) Investigates the activities of facilities for mining atomic raw materials, for the production of atomic materials and atomic energy as well as verifies their accounting.

(b) Checks existing stocks of atomic raw materials, atomic materials, and unfinished products.

(c) Studies production operations to the extent necessary for the control of the use of atomic materials and atomic energy.

(d) Observes the fulfilment of the rules of technical exploitation of the facilities prescribed by the convention on control as well as works out and prescribes the rules of technological control of such facilities.

(e) Collects and analyses data on the mining of atomic raw materials and on the production of atomic materials and atomic energy.

(f) Carries on special investigations in cases when suspicion of violations of the convention on the prohibition of atomic weapons arises.

(g) Makes recommendations to Governments on the questions relating to production, stockpiling and use of atomic materials and atomic energy.

(h) Makes recommendations to the Security Council on measures for prevention and suppression in respect to violators of the conventions on the prohibition of atomic weapons and on the control of atomic energy.

7. For the fulfilment of the tasks of control and inspection entrusted to the International Control Commission, the latter shall have the right of:

(a) Access to any facilities for mining, production, and stockpiling of atomic raw materials and atomic materials, as well as to the facilities for the exploitation of atomic energy.

(b) Acquaintance with the production operations of the atomic energy facilities, to the extent necessary for the control of use of atomic materials and atomic energy.

(c) The carrying out of weighing, measurements, and various analyses of atomic raw materials, atomic materials, and unfinished products.

(d) Requesting from the Government of any nation, and checking of, various data and reports on the activities of atomic energy facilities.

(e) Requesting of various explanations on the questions relating to the activities of atomic energy facilities.

(f) Making recommendations and presentations to Governments on the matters of the production and use of atomic energy.

(g) Submitting recommendations for the consideration of the Security Council on measures in regard to violators of the conventions on the prohibition of atomic weapons and on the control of atomic energy.

8. In accordance with the tasks of international control of atomic energy, scientific research activities in the field of atomic energy shall be based on the following provisions:

(a) Scientific research activities in the field of atomic energy must comply with the necessity of carrying out the convention on the prohibition of atomic weapons and with the necessity of preventing its use for military purposes.

(b) Signatory States to the convention on the prohibition of atomic weapons must have a right to carry on unrestricted scientific research activities in the field of atomic energy, directed toward discovery of methods of its use for peaceful purposes.

(c) In the interests of an effective fulfilment of its control and inspectorial functions, the International Control Commission must have a possibility to carry out scientific research activities in the field of discovery of methods of the use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. The carrying out of such activities will enable the Commission to keep itself informed on the latest achievements in this field and to have its own skilled international personnel, which is required by the Commission for practical carrying out of the measures of control and inspection.

(d) In conducting scientific research in the field of atomic energy, one of the most important tasks of the International Control Commission should be to ensure a wide exchange of information among nations in this field and to render necessary assistance through advice, to the countries parties to the convention, which may request such assistance.

(e) The International Control Commission must have at its disposal material facilities including research laboratories and experimental installations necessary for the proper organization of the research activities to be conducted by it.

The question of the rule of unanimity of the five permanent members of the Security Council in relation to the operations of an international control agency for atomic energy was discussed at the 21st meeting of the Working Committee on June 19.

The representative of the U.S.S.R. declared that the so-called veto should not apply to the day-to-day activities and operations of a control commission. Such a commission could, he explained, only make recommendations to the Security Council in respect to violations of any convention that should be drawn up. Punishments for serious violations should always be subject to decisions of the Security Council. He emphasized that the rule of unanimity was a basic principle of the United Nations Charter and that he could never agree to the violation of such a principle.

He went on to discuss the research functions of a control agency, questioning why, if it was the intention of such a body to prohibit the production of atomic weapons, that same body should carry on research for destructive purposes. If all delegations felt that all members of a convention should be enabled to carry on research for peaceful purposes, then, he added, there was not too great a divergence between the views of others and those of the U.S.S.R. on the subject.

The representative of the United States proposed that both questions raised by the representative of the U.S.S.R. should be taken up by Committee 2 of the Atomic Energy Commission. He declared that he thought most delegations had intended that the control commission should deal only with atomic energy research for destructive purposes, while there should be no limit on research for peaceful uses.

The representative of France stated that there were two questions with regard to the veto: whether the veto should apply to an atomic energy agency, and whether the Security Council should be empowered to exercise its veto over day-to-day operations of that organ of control. He expressed the view that one government, by applying the veto in the Security Council, should not be able to paralyze the operations of an inspection agency.

The representative of Australia argued that any control agency should be autonomous and not in any way subject to the veto. Furthermore, he continued, the Charter of the United Nations provided for the sovereign equality of all nations, while the rule of unanimity was not a principle of the United Nations but applied only to one organ, the Security Council.

Further discussion of the control of atomic energy was to be continued in subsequent meetings of the full Commission and its various committees.

G. COMMISSION FOR CONVENTIONAL ARMAMENTS

Article 26 of the United Nations Charter states that in order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, for formulating plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Although the Security Council has been vested with the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, Article 11 of the Charter permits the General Assembly to consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments. The General Assembly may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

In pursuance of Article 11 of the Charter and with a view to strengthening international peace and security in conformity with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations, the General Assembly on December 14, 1946, on the initiative of the U.S.S.R. delegation, adopted a resolution on the principles governing the general regulation and reduction of armaments. This resolution, among other things, recommended that "the Security Council give prompt consideration to formulating the practical measures, according to their priority, which are essential to provide for the general regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces and to assure that such regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces will be generally observed by all participants and not unilaterally by only some of the participants."

In order to work out the practical measures for giving effect to the General Assembly's resolution and also to implement Article 26 of the Charter, the Security Council at its 105th meeting held on February 13, 1947, established a Commission for Conventional Armaments. The Commission, consisting of representatives of the members of the Security Council, was instructed to submit to the Council, within the space of not more than three months, proposals for:

(a) the general regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces; and

(b) practical and effective safeguards in connection with the general regulation and reduction of armaments which the Commission might be in a position to formulate in order to ensure the implementation of the abovementioned resolution of the General Assembly of December 14, 1946, insofar as this resolution related to armaments within the new Commission's jurisdiction.

The Security Council directed that those matters which fell within the competence of the Atomic Energy Commission as determined by the General Assembly resolutions of January 24 and December 14, 1946, should be excluded from the jurisdiction of the Commission for Conventional Armaments. It also directed the new Commission to make such proposals as it might deem advisable concerning the studies which the Military Staff Committee and possibly other organs of the United Nations might be asked to undertake.

The Commission for Conventional Armaments held its first meeting at Lake Success on March 24, 1947.

At its second meeting, held on March 28, the Commission set up a Sub-Committee, consisting of the representatives of Poland, Belgium and France, to examine the Rules of Procedure of the Atomic Energy Commission and make any necessary modifications with a view to using them as rules of procedure for the Commission. At the fifth meeting of the Commission on April 9, the report of the Sub-Committee was approved. The report stated, inter alia, that the text of the rules of procedure proposed for the Commission for Conventional Armaments was the same as that for the Atomic Energy Commission. The only modifications made concerned the title of the Commission and (in Rules 4 and 50) the reference to the resolution creating the Commission.

The Commission at its fifth meeting also approved a Colombian resolution for the creation of a Sub-Committee to prepare a draft of the plan of work which the Commission would submit for the approval of the Council. The Sub-Committee was to be composed of the representatives of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The Sub-Committee held its first meeting on April 21. It decided that the Secretariat should prepare a draft plan of work for the Commission on Conventional Armaments and also a tabulation of different proposals made by various representatives of the Commission in connection with the plan.

At its fifth meeting, on June 6, 1947, the Sub-Committee submitted two draft plans of work, together with the suggestions of the Secretariat for the approval of the Commission. The first plan had been presented by the United States delegation and amended during the course of the meetings. The second plan had been presented by the delegation of the U.S.S.R. A proposal concerning the organization of the work of the Commission was also submitted.

During the sixth meeting of the Commission, on June 11, 1947, the Belgian representative proposed a resolution to the Commission to submit the draft plan of work of the United States for the approval of the Security Council.

At the seventh meeting, on June 13, the French representative submitted one amendment, and the Polish representative several amendments, to the United States draft plan of work. At the eighth meeting, on June 18, the Commission rejected the French and Polish amendments. It adopted the Belgian motion and rejected the draft plan of work submitted by the delegation of the U.S.S.R.

The plan of work adopted by the Commission was submitted for the approval of the Security Council and the proposal for organization of the work of the Commission was submitted for purposes of information.

PLAN OF WORK ADOPTED BY THE COMMISSION FOR CONVENTIONAL ARMAMENTS

The text of the plan of work was as follows:

1. Consider and make recommendations to the Security Council concerning armaments and armed forces which fall within the jurisdiction of the Commission for Conventional Armaments.

2. Consideration and determination of general principles in connection with the regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces.

3. Consideration of practical and effective safeguards by means of an international system of control operating through special organs (and by other means) to protect complying States against the hazards of violations and evasions.

4. Formulate practical proposals for the regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces.

5. Extension of the principles and proposals set forth in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 above to States which are not Members of the United Nations.

6. Submission of a report or reports to the Security Council including, if possible, a Draft Convention.

It is proposed that under the six headings listed above all of the references by the various Delegations suggested for the Plan of Work will be considered.

It is also understood that this Plan of Work does not limit the freedom of individual Delegations to make additional suggestions at a later time.

PLAN FOR THE ORGANIZATION OF THE WORK OF THE COMMISSION FOR CONVENTIONAL ARMAMENTS

At its ninth meeting 25 June 1947 the Commission for Conventional Armaments agreed to the following proposal concerning the organization of its future work:

Establishment of a working committee of the whole to formulate proposals for the general regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces and to co-ordinate the work of the sub-committees to be established to deal with various aspects of the work including the political aspect of security. These sub-committees shall report to the working committee, which shall submit its proposals to the Commission for consideration.

PROVISIONAL RULES OF PROCEDURE OF THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Adopted by the Security Council at its First Meeting and Amended at its Forty-eighth Meeting, 24 June 1946.

CHAPTER I: Meetings

Rule 1

Meetings of the Security Council shall, with the exception of the periodic meetings referred to in Rule 4, be held at the call of the President at any time he deems necessary, but the interval between meetings shall not exceed fourteen days.

Rule 2

The President shall call a meeting of the Security Council at the request of any member of the Security Council.

Rule 3

The President shall call a meeting of the Security Council if a dispute or situation is brought to the attention of the Security Council under Article 35 or under Article 11 (3) of the Charter, or if the General Assembly makes recommendations or refers any question to the Security Council under Article 11 (2), or if the Secretary-General brings to the attention of the Security Council any matter under Article 99.

Rule 4

Periodic meetings of the Security Council called for in Article 28 (2) of the Charter shall be held twice a year, at such times as the Security Council may decide.

Rule 5

Meetings of the Security Council shall normally be held at the seat of the United Nations.

Any member of the Security Council or the Secretary-General may propose that the Security Council should meet at another place. Should the Security Council accept any such proposal, it shall decide upon the place, and the period during which the Council shall meet at such place.

CHAPTER II: Agenda

Rule 6

The Secretary-General shall immediately bring to the attention of all representatives on the Security Council all communications from States, organs of the United Nations, or the Secretary-General concerning any matter for the consideration of the Security Council in accordance with the provisions of the Charter.

Rule 7

The Provisional Agenda for each meeting of the Security Council shall be drawn up by the Secretary-General and approved by the President of the Security Council.

Only items which have been brought to the attention of the representatives on the Security Council in accordance with Rule 6, items covered by Rule 10, or matters which the Security Council has previously decided to defer, may be included in the Provisional Agenda.

Rule 8

The Provisional Agenda for a meeting shall be communicated by the Secretary-General to the representatives on the Security Council at least three days before the meeting, but in urgent circumstances it may be communicated simultaneously with the notice of the meeting.

Rule 9

The first item of the Provisional Agenda for each meeting of the Security Council shall be the adoption of the Agenda.

Rule 10

Any item of the Agenda of a meeting of the Security Council, consideration of which has not been completed at that meeting, shall, unless the Security Council otherwise decides, automatically be included in the Agenda of the next meeting.

Rule 11

The Secretary-General shall communicate each week to the representatives on the Security Council a summary statement of matters of which the Security Council is seized and of the stage reached in their consideration.

Rule 12

The Provisional Agenda for each periodic meeting shall be circulated to the members of the Security Council at least twenty-one days before the opening of the meeting. Any subsequent change in or addition to the Provisional Agenda shall be brought to the notice of the members at least five days before the meeting. The Security Council may, however, in urgent circumstances, make additions to the Agenda at any time during a periodic meeting.

The provisions of Rule 7, paragraph 1, and of Rule 9, shall apply also to periodic meetings.

CHAPTER III: Representation and Credentials

Rule 13

Each member of the Security Council shall be represented at the meetings of the Security Council by an accredited representative. The credentials of a representative on the Security Council shall be communicated to the Secretary-General not less than twenty-four hours before he takes his seat on the Security Council. The Head of Government or Minister of Foreign Affairs of each member of the Security Council shall be entitled to sit on the Security Council without submitting credentials.

Rule 14

Any Member of the United Nations not a member of the Security Council and any State not a Member of the United Nations, if invited to participate in a meeting or meetings of the Security Council, shall submit credentials for the representative appointed by it for this purpose. The credentials of such a representative shall be communicated to the Secretary-General not less than twenty-four hours before the first meeting which he is invited to attend.

Rule 15

The credentials of representatives on the Security Council and of any representative appointed in accordance with Rule 14 shall be examined by the Secretary-General who shall submit a report to the Security Council for approval.

Rule 16

Pending the approval of the credentials of a representative on the Security Council in accordance with Rule 15, such representative shall be seated provisionally with the same rights as other representatives.

Rule 17

Any representative on the Security Council, to whose credentials objection has been made within the Security Council, shall continue to sit with the same rights as other representatives until the Security Council has decided the matter.

CHAPTER IV: Presidency

Rule 18

The Presidency of the Security Council shall be held in turn by the members of the Security Council in the English alphabetical order of their names. Each President shall hold office for one calendar month.

Rule 19

The President shall preside over the meetings of the Security Council and, under the authority of the Security Council, shall represent it in its capacity as an organ of the United Nations.

Rule 20

Whenever the President of the Security Council deems that, for the proper fulfillment of the responsibilities of the Presidency, he should not preside over the Council during the consideration of a particular question with which the member he represents is directly connected, he shall indicate his decision to the Council. The presidential chair shall then devolve, for the purpose of the consideration of that question, on the representative of the member next in English alphabetical order, it being understood that the provisions of this Rule shall apply to the representatives on the Security Council called upon successively to preside. This Rule shall not affect the representative capacity of the President as stated in Rule 19 or his duties under Rule 7.

CHAPTER V: Secretariat

Rule 21

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the Security Council. The Secretary-General may authorize a deputy to act in his place at meetings of the Security Council.

Rule 22

The Secretary-General, or his deputy acting on his behalf, may make either oral or written statements to the Security Council concerning any question under consideration by it.

Rule 23

The Secretary-General may be appointed by the Security Council, in accordance with Rule 28, as rapporteur for a specified question.

Rule 24

* The Secretary-General shall provide the staff required by the Security Council. This staff shall form a part of the Secretariat.

Rule 25

The Secretary-General shall give to representatives on the Security Council notice of meetings of the Security Council and of its commissions and committees.

Rule 26

The Secretary-General shall be responsible for the preparation of documents required by the Security Council and shall, except in urgent circumstances, distribute them at least forty-eight hours in advance of the meeting at which they are to be considered.

CHAPTER VI: Conduct of Business

Rule 27

The President shall call upon representatives in the order in which they signify their desire to speak.

Rule 28

The Security Council may appoint a commission or committee or a rapporteur for a specified question.

Rule 29

The President may accord precedence to any rapporteur appointed by the Security Council.

The Chairman of a commission or committee, or the rapporteur appointed by the commission or committee to present its report, may be accorded precedence for the purpose of explaining the report.

Rule 30

If a representative raises a point of order, the President shall immediately state his ruling. If it is challenged, the President shall submit his ruling to the Security Council for immediate decision and it shall stand unless overruled.

Rule 31

Proposed resolutions, amendments and substantive motions shall normally be placed before the representatives in writing.

Rule 32

Principal motions and draft resolutions shall have precedence in the order of their submission.

Parts of a motion or of a draft resolution shall be voted on separately at the request of any representative, unless the original mover objects.

Rule 33

The following motions shall have precedence in the order named over all principal motions and draft resolutions relative to the subject before the meeting:

1. to suspend the meeting;
2. to adjourn the meeting;
3. to adjourn the meeting to a certain day or hour;
4. to refer any matter to a committee, to the Secretary-General or to a rapporteur;
5. to postpone discussion of the question to a certain day or indefinitely; or
6. to introduce an amendment.

Any motion for the suspension or for the simple adjournment of the meeting shall be decided without debate.

Rule 34

It shall not be necessary for any motion or draft resolution proposed by a representative on the Security Council to be seconded before being put to a vote.

Rule 35

A motion or draft resolution can at any time be withdrawn, so long as no vote has been taken with respect to it.

If the motion or draft resolution has been seconded, the representative on the Security Council who has seconded it may require that it be put to the vote as his motion or draft resolution with the same right of precedence as if the original mover had not withdrawn it.

Rule 36

If two or more amendments to a motion or draft resolution are proposed, the President shall rule on the order in which they are to be voted upon. Ordinarily, the Security Council shall first vote on the amendment furthest removed in substance from the original proposal and then on the amendment next furthest removed until all amendments have been put to the vote, but when an amendment adds to or deletes from the text of a motion or draft resolution, that amendment shall be voted on first.

Rule 37

Any member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may be invited, as the result of a decision of the Security Council, to participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council when the Security Council considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected, or when a Member brings a matter to the attention of the Security Council in accordance with Article 35 (1) of the Charter.

Rule 38

Any member of the United Nations invited in accordance with the preceding Rule or in application of Article 32 of the Charter to participate in the discussions of the Security Council may submit proposals and draft resolutions. These proposals and draft resolutions may be put to a vote only at the request of a representative on the Security Council.

Rule 46

All resolutions and other important documents shall forthwith be made available in the official languages. Upon the request of any representative any other document shall be made available in any or all of the official languages.

Rule 47

Documents of the Security Council shall, if the Security Council so decides, be published in any language other than the official languages.

CHAPTER IX: Publicity of Meetings, Records.Rule 48

Unless it decides otherwise, the Security Council shall meet in public. Any recommendation to the General Assembly regarding the appointment of the Secretary-General shall be discussed and decided at a private meeting.

Rule 49

Subject to the provisions of Rule 51, the verbatim record of each meeting of the Security Council shall be made available in the working languages to the representatives on the Security Council and to the representatives of any other States which have participated in the meeting not later than 10 A.M. of the first working day following the meeting. The verbatim record of any speech made in any other of the official languages, which is drawn up in accordance with the provisions of Rule 45, shall be made available in the same manner to any of the above mentioned representatives at his request.

Rule 50

The representatives of the States which have participated in the meeting shall, within two working days after the time indicated in Rule 49, inform the Secretary-General of any corrections they wish to have made in the verbatim record.

Rule 51

The Security Council may decide that for a private meeting the record shall be made in a single copy alone. This record shall be kept by the Secretary-General. The representatives of the States which have participated in the meeting shall, within a period of ten days, inform the Secretary-General of any corrections they wish to have made in this record.

Rule 52

Corrections that have been requested shall be considered approved unless the President is of the opinion that they are sufficiently important to be submitted to the representatives on the Security Council. In the latter case, the representatives on the Security Council shall submit within two working days any comments they may wish to make. In the absence of objections in this period of time, the record shall be corrected as requested.

Rule 53

The verbatim record referred to in Rule 49 or the record referred to in Rule 51, in which no corrections have been requested in the period of time required by Rules 50 and 51 respectively or which has been corrected in accordance with the provisions of Rule 52, shall be considered as approved. It shall be signed by the President and shall become the official record of the Security Council.

Rule 54

The official record of public meetings of the Security Council, as well as the documents annexed thereto, shall be published in the official languages as soon as possible.

Rule 55

At the close of each private meeting the Security Council shall issue a communique through the Secretary-General.

Rule 56

The representatives of the Members of the United Nations which have taken part in a private meeting shall at all times have the right to consult the record of that meeting in the office of the Secretary-General. The Security Council may at any time grant access to this record to authorized representatives of other Members of the United Nations.

Rule 57

The Secretary-General shall, once each year, submit to the Security Council a list of the records and documents which up to that time have been considered confidential. The Security Council shall decide which of these shall be made available to other Members of the United Nations, which shall be made public, and which shall continue to remain confidential.

CHAPTER X: Admission of New Members.Rule 58

Any State which desires to become a Member of the United Nations shall submit an application to the Secretary-General. This application shall be accompanied by a declaration of its readiness to accept the obligations contained in the Charter.

Rule 59

The Secretary-General shall immediately place the application for membership before the representatives on the Security Council. Unless the Security Council decides otherwise, the application shall be referred by the President to a committee of the Security Council upon which each member of the Security Council shall be represented. The committee shall examine any application referred to it and report its conclusions thereon to the Council not less than thirty-five days in advance of a regular session of the General Assembly or if a special session of the General Assembly is called, not less than fourteen days in advance of such session.

Rule 60

The Security Council shall decide whether in its judgment the applicant is a peace-loving State and is able and willing to carry out the obligations contained in the Charter, and accordingly whether to recommend the applicant State for membership.

In order to assure the consideration of its recommendation at the next session of the General Assembly following the receipt of the application, the Security Council shall make its recommendations not less than twenty-five days in advance of a regular session of the General Assembly, nor less than four days in advance of a special session.

In special circumstances, the Security Council may decide to make a recommendation to the General Assembly concerning an application for membership subsequent to the expiration of the time limits set forth in the preceding paragraph.

IV. The Economic and Social Council

A. THE CHARTER AND THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL¹

The Charter establishes an Economic and Social Council as a principal organ which, under the authority of the General Assembly, is to devote itself to promoting international economic and social co-operation.

The Council consists of eighteen Members of the United Nations. Its members are elected by the General Assembly for a term of three years. A retiring member is eligible for re-election. In the first election, however, eighteen members were elected—six for one year, six for two years and six for three years. Each member has one representative.

It is realized by the United Nations that peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples cannot be developed and maintained unless conditions of stability and well-being are created. With a view to creating such conditions the United Nations undertakes to promote:

- (a) higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- (b) solutions of international economic, social, health and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- (c) universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion.

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the United Nations for the achievement of these purposes:

The United Nations is conceived to be a centre for harmonizing the action of nations in the attainment of these economic, social and other purposes. In the economic and social fields there are in existence various inter-governmental specialized agencies. The Charter authorizes the United Nations to bring such agencies into relationship with the United Nations and to co-ordinate the policies and activities of such agencies, and furthermore to create such new agencies as it deems necessary for the accomplishment of its economic and social purposes.

The responsibility for the discharge of these functions is vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council.

The principal functions and powers of the Economic and Social Council are:

- (1) to make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related matters and to make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations and to the specialized agencies concerned;
- (2) to make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all;
- (3) to prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence; and
- (4) to call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

As regards the specialized agencies, the Economic and Social Council may:

¹ This Section is a summary of the Charter provisions relating to the Economic and Social Council. The main provisions are contained in Chapter IX, Articles 55-60, which sets forth the objectives and functions of the United Nations in the realm of international economic co-operation, and Chapter X, Articles 61-72, which defines the composition, functions and powers, voting and procedure of the Economic and Social Council. Other provisions are to be found in Articles 1, 7, 17-18, 91, 96, 98, 101 of the Charter.

(1) enter into agreements with any of the specialized agencies, defining the terms on which the agencies shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations, such agreements being subject to approval by the General Assembly;

(2) co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations;

(3) take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies, and make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly; and

(4) communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Any financial and budgetary arrangements with the specialized agencies are to be considered and approved by the General Assembly, which is also to examine the administrative budget of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and is to assist the Security Council upon its request. It is to perform such functions as fall within its competence in connection with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

The Council, when so authorized by the General Assembly, may request advisory opinions of the International Court of Justice on legal questions arising within the scope of its activities.

The Secretary-General is to act in that capacity in all meetings of the Economic and Social Council and is to assign a permanent staff to the Economic and Social Council.

Each member of the Council has one vote. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council are made by a majority of the members present and voting.

The Council shall set up such commissions in economic and social fields as may be required for the performance of its functions.

The Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

The Economic and Social Council may:

(1) make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies;

(2) make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations, international as well as national, which are concerned with matters within its competence.

The Economic and Social Council adopts its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President. It meets as required in accordance with its rules, which include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

B. ESTABLISHMENT AND ORGANIZATION OF THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

1. ELECTION OF MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL

The first election of members of the Council by the General Assembly took place on January 12 and 14, 1946. The following countries were selected:

For one year

Colombia
Greece
Lebanon

Ukrainian S.S.R.
United States
Yugoslavia

For two years

Cuba
Czechoslovakia
India

Norway
U.S.S.R.
United Kingdom

For three years

Belgium
Canada
Chile

China
France
Peru

The second election by the General Assembly of members of the Council to replace those who had been elected in January for one year took place on November 19 and December 7 and 12, 1946. Retiring members were eligible for re-election.

The following countries were elected: Byelorussian S.S.R., Lebanon, New Zealand, Turkey, the United States and Venezuela.

In addition, on December 12 the General Assembly elected the Netherlands to replace Belgium (which had resigned in favor of the Netherlands).

2. RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE PREPARATORY COMMISSION

The General Assembly adopted a number of recommendations made in the Report of the Preparatory Commission concerning the establishment and the initial work and organization of the Council. These included recommendations that at its first session the Council should establish the following Commissions: Human Rights, Economic and Employment, Temporary Social, Statistical, Narcotic Drugs; and that the Council should consider the desirability of establishing at an early date Demographic, Temporary Transport and Communications and Fiscal Commissions; and should also consider, at its first session, the advisability of setting up a co-ordination commission. Further recommendations were that the Council should at once set up standing committees on the organization of the Council, on relationships with specialized agencies and on relationships with non-governmental organizations. Provisional Rules of Procedure were also approved for transmission to the Council.¹

3. SESSIONS OF THE COUNCIL

The first session of the Council was held in Church House, London, from January 23 to February 18, 1946; the second in Hunter College, New York, from May 25 to June 21, 1946; and the third and fourth at Lake Success, New York, from September 11 to October 3, 1946, and from February 28 to March 29, 1947, respectively.

4. OFFICERS OF THE COUNCIL

At its first session the Council elected Sir A.

Ramaswami Mudaliar (India) President; and Dr. Andrija Stampar (Yugoslavia) and Carlos Lleras Restrepo (Colombia) First and Second Vice-Presidents respectively for the first period of office. Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar was unable to be present at the third session, and Dr. Stampar acted as President.

At its fourth session, the Economic and Social Council re-elected Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar President, and Jan Papanek (Czechoslovakia) and Alberto Arca Parro (Peru) First and Second Vice-Presidents respectively for the second period of office.

5. AMENDMENTS TO RULES OF PROCEDURE

At its first session the Economic and Social Council adopted provisionally the rules of procedure proposed for it by the Preparatory Commission. Later, certain amendments and additions were made.²

At its second session the Council adopted a rule permitting an alternate representative of the country represented by the President to take part in the discussions and vote in the Council provided the President did not exercise his vote.

On November 9, 1946, the General Assembly replaced Rule 87 of the Rules of Procedure, relating to the terms of office of members of the Council, by a new rule reading:

The term of office of members shall begin on 1 January following their election by the General Assembly, and shall end on 31 December following the election of their successors.

To bring the rules of procedure of the Economic and Social Council into line with this new rule, the Council at its fourth session amended its Rule 17 as follows:

The President and Vice-Presidents shall hold office until their successors are elected at the first meeting of the Council on or after 1 January in each year, and shall be eligible for re-election.

The General Assembly on December 11, 1946, adopted the following provisional financial regulation:

Regulation 25

No resolution involving expenditure from United Nations funds shall be approved by a Council unless the Council has before it a report from the Secretary-General on the financial implications of the proposals, together with an estimate of the costs involved in the specific proposal.

¹ See pp. 67 ff. See also Chapter III of the Report of the Preparatory Commission.

To give formal effect to this decision the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session adopted the following additional rule of procedure:

Before any proposal which involves expenditure from United Nations funds is approved by the Council the Secretary-General shall prepare and circulate to members (a) a summary report of the financial implications of the proposals; and (b) estimates of costs involved in each proposal.

In accordance with this rule estimates of cost were provided by the Secretariat on the proposals before the Council.

6. CONSULTATION WITH TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

At its fourth session the Economic and Social Council decided that the President of the Council, after consultation with the President of the Trusteeship Council, should be authorized to nominate two other members of the Economic and Social Council to confer with a similar committee of the Trusteeship Council regarding "arrangements that can be arrived at between the two Councils to further the work of both."

7. COMMISSIONS OF THE COUNCIL

At its first session the Council established five commissions in nuclear form, and one temporary sub-commission, each consisting of nine experts appointed in their personal capacity as follows: Human Rights, with a sub-commission on the Status of Women; Economic and Employment; Temporary Social; Temporary Transport and Communications; Statistical. It also established a permanent commission of fifteen members on Narcotic Drugs, and selected the members. The nuclear commissions met in Hunter College, New York, in the latter part of April and the first three weeks in May 1946 and submitted their reports to the second session of the Council.

At its second session the Council determined the terms of reference and the composition of the following commissions: Economic and Employment, Transport and Communications, Statistical, Human Rights, Social, Status of Women. (The Economic and Social Council on June 21, 1946, decided to confer upon the Sub-Commission on the Status of Women the status of a full commission to be known as the Commission on the Status of Women.) It established a Temporary Sub-Commission of the Economic and Employment Commission on the Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas. The Council also empowered the Commission on Human Rights to set up sub-commissions on (a) freedom of information and of the Press, (b) protection of minorities and (c) prevention of discrimination, and the Statistical Commission to set up a sub-commission on statistical sampling.

At its third session the Council determined the terms of reference and composition of the Population and Fiscal Commissions. It selected the States to designate representatives as members of all the permanent commissions (other than the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, which had been elected at the first session). The Council also directed the Economic and Employment Commission to set up sub-commissions on (a) employment and economic stability and (b) economic development.

The Council gave very full consideration to the question of the composition of permanent commissions. Some delegates urged that the commissions should be composed wholly of persons representing their governments, other delegates urged that at least a proportion of the commissions should consist of experts appointed in their personal capacity. The decision taken by the Council at its second session was that the commissions set up should consist of representatives from Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. With a view, however, to securing a balanced representation in the various fields covered by the commissions, the Council directed that the Secretary-General should consult with the governments so selected before their representatives were finally nominated by those governments and confirmed by the Council. The Council decided to hold an ad hoc meeting of the third session later in the year in order to confirm the nominations after the Secretary-General had carried out his consultations.

In accordance with the resolutions passed by the Economic and Social Council on June 21, 1946, and October 1, 2 and 3, 1946, members of commissions were nominated by Member Governments in consultation with the Secretary-General. The Council held an ad hoc meeting on December 10, 1946, and confirmed 106 representatives. Further representatives and also representatives to take the place of those who had resigned, were confirmed by the Council at its fourth session.¹

Except for the initial period, the term of office for members of all Commissions is three years. For the initial period, one third of the members serve for two years, one third for three years, and one third for four years. The Commission on Narcotic Drugs is an exception, for its initial members were all elected for three years.

At its third session the Council considered the question of payment of expenses of members of commissions and sub-commissions and recommended to the General Assembly that in order to equalize the opportunities of Members of the United Nations to participate in the work and activities of the Commissions and to ensure the most effective co-operation of the Members travelling expenses and subsistence allowances should be paid by the United Nations for each member of the Commissions and Sub-Commissions of the Council.

The General Assembly decided that the actual travelling expenses of members of commissions and sub-commissions to and from meetings and the actual expenses for travel on business should be borne by the United Nations.

At its fourth session the Economic and Social Council determined the terms of reference and elected the members of the Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press and the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities. It also established two regional commissions, the Economic Commission for Europe and the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East.

The Commissions held their first sessions as follows:

Commission on Narcotic Drugs — November 27 to December 13, 1946

Social Commission — January 20 to February 4, 1947

Economic and Employment Commission — January 20 to February 5, 1947

Statistical Commission — January 27 to February 7, 1947

Commission on Human Rights — January 27 to February 10, 1947

Transport and Communications Commission — February 6 to 18, 1947

Population Commission — February 6 to 19, 1947

Commission on the Status of Women — February 10 to 24, 1947

Economic Commission for Europe — May 2 to 14, 1947

Fiscal Commission — May 19 to 29, 1947

Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East — June 16 to 25, 1947

The commissions at their first sessions considered their rules of procedure and adopted provisionally draft rules prepared by the Secretariat. They also considered the question of alternates. On the one hand it was felt that alternates should be appointed to enable the commissions to function adequately; on the other hand it was considered that alternates should not be appointed, since members of commissions and sub-commissions were appointed as experts. The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session decided that when members of the Economic and Employment, Transport and Communications, Statistical, Fiscal, Social, Human Rights, Status of Women and Population Commissions were prevented from attending sessions of those Commissions an alternate should be designated by the government of the member, in consultation with the Secretary-General, to serve for that session. An alternate so designated should have the same status as a member of the Commission.

The commissions also considered arrangements for co-ordination with the other commissions and with the specialized agencies. Representatives of the three agencies which had been brought into relationship with the United Nations—the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization, and the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization—attended the sessions of the commissions and the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council and presented the views of their organizations on the subjects under discussion.

8. FUTURE SESSIONS OF THE COUNCIL, COMMISSIONS AND SUB-COMMISSIONS

The various commissions made recommendations concerning the times and places of their next meetings. The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session considered the general question of its own sessions and those of its commissions and sub-commissions and resolved as follows:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

DECIDES to hold its Fifth Session commencing on 19 July 1947;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to arrange that the three sessions of the Council for 1948 should commence: the first not later than 15 January, the second in late April or early May, and the third so that the session of the Council ends shortly before the commencement of the regular session of the General Assembly;

DECIDES that the Economic and Employment, Social, Human Rights and Transport and Communications Commissions should normally hold two sessions annually, and requests the Secretary-General to arrange for a second session for each of these Commissions in 1947;

DECIDES that the Statistical, Population, Status of Women and Fiscal Commissions should hold one session annually, unless otherwise decided by the Council, except that in view of the World Statistical Congress to be held in September 1947, a second session of the Statistical Commission and a second session of the Population Commission should be held in August 1947;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to revise the proposed calendar of meetings for 1947 to correspond with this decision;

DECIDES that sub-commissions of the commissions should normally meet once a year and in any event not more than twice a year;

DECIDES that the reports of commissions (except the Economic Commission for Europe and the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East) will normally not be considered by the Council unless they have been sent to the members of the Council at least six weeks before the session of the Council at which they will be examined.

DECIDES that the commissions and sub-commissions will meet at the headquarters of the United Nations unless the Council decides otherwise;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to submit to the Council at its last session each year a draft calendar, drawn up in consultation with the Co-ordination Committee, concerning the programme of sessions of the commissions and sub-commissions of the Council and of the conferences of specialized agencies for the following year.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

DECIDES that at the last session of each year the Council should give consideration to a provisional programme of work for the following year.

9. COMMITTEES OF THE COUNCIL

Standing Committees of the Council (1) on Organization, (2) on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies, and (3) on Arrangements for Consultations with Non-Governmental Organizations were established at its first session. The Standing Committee on Organization of the Council made many recommendations on the organization of the Council itself and of its commissions, and Rules of Procedure were also submitted, which were adopted by the Council. A separate account of the work of the Committees on Specialized Agencies and Non-Governmental Organizations is given in subsequent sections.

At its fourth session the Council established an Agenda Committee consisting of the officers of the Council and two other elected members, to consider the provisional agenda and make recommendations on it to the Council.

During its four sessions the Council made use of a considerable number of ad hoc committees, notably, the Committee on Refugees and Displaced Persons and the Committee on the Finances of the International Refugee Organization.

C. ECONOMIC AND EMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS

1. ECONOMIC AND EMPLOYMENT COMMISSION

At its first session the Council established an Economic and Employment Commission, with provisional terms of reference, in nuclear form. The Council requested this nuclear commission to make recommendations to the Council on the following matters:

(1) Revision of the Commission's terms of reference;

(2) Composition of the full Commission;

(3) Whether any other sub-commission should be established, particularly a sub-commission on economic reconstruction of devastated areas.

a. Terms of Reference

At its second session the Council considered the report prepared by the nuclear commission, and established the permanent Economic and Employment Commission with the following terms of reference:

(a) The Commission shall advise the Economic and Social Council on economic questions in order to promote higher standards of living.

(b) It shall examine such questions as may be submitted to it by the Council and shall on its own initiative report to the Council on problems which, in its opinion, require urgent attention.

(c) It shall make recommendations to the Council with reference to economic questions involving concerted study and (or) action by more than one specialized agency or commission of the Council and in particular shall draw the attention of the Council to the probable influence of the policies and activities of other commissions of the Council, the specialized agencies or other international organizations on the issues mentioned in paragraph (d) below.

(d) In particular, it shall be the function of the Commission to advise the Council on:

(i) the prevention of wide fluctuations in economic activity and the promotion of full employment by the co-ordination of national full employment policies and by international action;

(ii) problems of the reconstruction of devastated areas and other urgent problems arising from the war, with a view to developing means of giving real help, which is so necessary, to various Members of the United Nations whose territories have been devastated by the enemy as a result of occupation and war activities;

(iii) the promotion of economic development and progress with special regard to the problems of less developed areas.

In carrying out the functions set forth above, the Commission shall take account of the close relationship between the short-term problems and the long-term objectives of an expanding and integrated world economy.

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of fifteen Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

For two years

Belgium
Brazil
France
Poland
United Kingdom

For three years

Canada
China
Czechoslovakia
India
Norway

For four years

Australia
Byelorussian S.S.R.
Cuba
U.S.S.R.
United States

The Council may in addition appoint in their individual capacity from ten to fifteen corresponding members from countries not represented on the Commission, with the approval of their governments.

At its third session the Council directed the Economic and Employment Commission to establish a sub-commission on employment and economic stability and a sub-commission on economic development; it also instructed the Commission to make an early report to the Council on the question of establishing a sub-commission on balance of payments.

The terms of reference of the Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability are:

(i) to study national and international full employment policies and fluctuations in economic activity;

(ii) to analyse the causes of these fluctuations; and

(iii) to advise the Commission on the most appropriate methods of promoting full employment and economic stability.

The terms of reference of the Sub-Commission on Economic Development are:

To study and advise the Commission on the principles and problems of long-term economic development with particular attention to the ~~underdeveloped~~ less developed parts of the world, having the objective of:

(i) promoting the fullest and most effective utilization of natural resources, labour and capital;

(ii) raising the level of consumption; and

(iii) studying the effects of industrialization and changes of a technological order upon the world economic situation.

The composition of these two Sub-Commissions is as follows:

(a) Each Sub-Commission shall be composed of seven persons selected by the Commission in consultation with the Secretary-

General and subject to the consent of the Governments of the countries of which the persons are nationals. Not more than one person shall be selected from any single country.

(b) The terms of office of the members shall be three years. Members shall be eligible for re-election. In the event that a member is unable to serve for the full three-year term, a person selected by the Commission subject to the foregoing provisions should serve in his place for the remainder of the term.¹

After debate as to whether the members of the Sub-Commissions should serve in their individual capacity or as governmental representatives, a majority of the Council members voting on paragraph (a) above supported the proposition that the persons to be selected under this paragraph should serve in their personal capacities and not as governmental representatives.

b. First Session

The Economic and Employment Commission held its first session at Lake Success, New York, from January 20 to February 5, 1947. It elected the following as its officers:
Chairman — Ragnar Frisch (Norway)
Vice-Chairman — Roland Wilson (Australia)
Vice-Chairman — A. P. Morozov (U.S.S.R.)
Rapporteur — Isidor Lubin (U.S.A.)

The Commission considered questions of economic development, employment and economic stability and the balance of payments.

While recognizing that the carrying out of development activities rested with the governments and peoples of the countries or areas concerned, the Commission referred to the obligation of the United Nations under the Charter to aim at the creation of conditions of stability and well-being and to promote higher standards of living. Such improvements in less developed countries or areas would be likely to flow from projects which were an integral part of long-term and balanced programs of development, and these programs should include the social, scientific, health, education and cultural aspects of community life.

The Commission instructed its Sub-Commission on Economic Development:

1) To inform the Commission as early as possible regarding current and planned studies, field surveys,² and provision of technical advice and assistance to Members in the field of economic development both by the Secretariat of the United Nations and by the inter-governmental agencies.

(2) To keep under consideration and to make recommendations to the Commission regarding the general planning and co-ordination of the activities mentioned in paragraph 1 above. Particular attention should be given to the participation of the various inter-governmental agencies in these activities and, where appropriate for the United Nations to participate, to the nature of its participation.

(3) To commence a study, in co-operation with the other Commissions of the United Nations and the specialized agencies concerned, with the view to making recommendations regarding the need for an international code relating to foreign investment which will cover among other things the protection of economic and social interests of the countries in which investments are to be made, as well as the protection of investors, both public and private; and conduct studies into the need for and methods of international incorporation of private business firms conducting business operations on an international or a world scale.

The Council decided to delete these two paragraphs on the understanding that they be put in a footnote to the resolution.

It was agreed to postpone final decision of this issue until the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council after the proceedings in the forthcoming second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

At its first session the Economic and Employment Commission recommended that the Council defer making any decision on the appointment of corresponding members to the Commission until the Commission had had an opportunity to consider the question of such appointments in the light of its own experience and its future needs.

² By "studies" was meant the compilation and collating of information already available or obtainable without field investigation. By "field surveys" was meant the obtaining of information in the area concerned.

(c) The Commission shall invite experts, named by those inter-governmental agencies which are deemed by the Commission to be particularly concerned with the work of each of the Sub-Commissions, to participate regularly in the work of that Sub-Commission. Experts from other inter-governmental agencies may be invited by each Sub-Commission to participate in the discussion within the scope of their activities.

(d) Experts, including experts nominated by non-governmental agencies, may be invited by the Sub-Commission with the consent of the Secretary-General to be present for purposes of consultation on matters within their special competence.

(4) To make recommendations to the Commission relative to:

(a) the organization of international co-operation with respect to scientific, technological and economic research relating to production and development, the conservation of resources, the adoption of improved methods of production and technical processes to stimulate greater productivity, and the implementation of the mutual responsibilities of Members, under relevant international agreements, in relation to the international supply of facilities for economic development including capital funds, capital goods and materials, equipment, advanced technology and trained personnel;

(b) the furnishing of such technical assistance within the resources available, as Members of the United Nations may request, relating to production and development; and to the organization, in co-operation with the governments concerned, of such missions as may be needed to perform this function.

(5) To make recommendations to the Commission relative to any other matter which the Sub-Commission may feel should be drawn to the attention of this Commission, including any modification of these instructions which it may wish to suggest.

The Commission requested the Secretariat to make arrangements, in co-operation with the specialized agencies concerned, to provide on request technical advice to enable governments to plan and carry out balanced development programs. If substantial assistance was required, special agreements should be made between the United Nations and the government requesting the assistance, and these agreements should cover the question of defraying expenses. The Secretariat was also to provide the data necessary for the Commission and the Sub-Commission on Economic Development.

The Commission considered that its interest in the field of employment and economic stability would include the broad economic problems of production, consumption and investments, national incomes and their distribution, and the balance of payments. It felt that there would be no danger of overlapping between the functions of the Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability and the specialized agencies and other commissions if the Sub-Commission concentrated on the general aspects of the problem. It instructed the Sub-Commission:

1. To report to the Commission as early as possible on current world economic conditions and trends, giving particular attention to any factors that are preventing, or are likely to prevent in the near future, the maintenance of full employment and economic stability, together with analyses indicating causal factors involved and recommendations as to desirable action.

2. To report to the Commission at its early convenience on:

(a) The preliminary views of the Sub-Commission concerning the kinds of international action which are likely to be feasible and of assistance in maintaining economic stability and full employment. In this connection the Sub-Commission should bear in mind the important links between stability and development and should examine such proposals as:

(i) The concerted timing, to the extent which may be appropriate and practicable in the interests of employment policy, of national and international measures to influence credit conditions and the terms of borrowing;

(ii) National or international arrangements, in suitable cases, to promote due stability in the real incomes of producers of primary products, taking account both of the interests of consumers and producers regardless of country;

(iii) The timing, to the extent which may be appropriate and practicable in the interests of employment policy, of capital expenditures on projects which are either of an international character or are internationally financed; as well as the expansion of investments in less-developed countries as measures designed to maintain stability of employment during periods of depression in more highly industrialized countries.

(b) Recommended methods and forms of reporting economic conditions and trends, including the definition of specific information to be collected. In this connection, the Sub-Commission should, in co-operation with the Secretariat, give consideration to arrangements for the regular collection, analysis and exchange of information on domestic employment problems, trends and policies, including as far as possible information relating to national income, demand, and balances of payments (including methods of presenting the multilateral aspects of balance of payments problems).

(c) Any other matter which the Sub-Commission may feel should be drawn to the attention of this Commission, including any modifications of these instructions which it may wish to suggest.

The Secretariat, in co-operation with the specialized agencies concerned, was asked to provide necessary data for the Commission and the Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability, and in particular to make periodic reports to the Commission and Sub-Commission on world economic trends and to draw their attention to any specific economic situations requiring consideration. It was also asked to keep abreast of methods of economic and statistical analysis and to consider arrangements for bringing together economists and technicians in related fields to exchange ideas and develop methods of appraising and forecasting economic trends.

The Commission considered that the balance of payments was such a broad subject that the Commission itself and its already established sub-commissions would necessarily have to deal with it. It therefore recommended that no sub-commission on this subject should be established at present, but that the Secretariat in co-operation with the specialized agencies concerned should make regular reports and analyses of balances of payments.

The Commission felt that for the time being adequate co-ordination of its work and the work of its sub-commission with that of the specialized agencies was achieved by the presence of representatives of the agencies at its meetings and by the working arrangements initiated by the Secretariat. It suggested, however, that the Secretariat consider establishing a co-ordination register to maintain a classified file of information on all substantial work in the economic and statistical fields under way or planned in all the commissions, sub-commissions, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations on: collection of data; analysis of data; and operative tasks.

The Council discussed the report of the Commission at its fourth session.

Representatives stressed the inter-relation of full employment and the development of backward countries, and certain delegates felt that the recommendations of the Commission did not go far enough. Draft resolutions and amendments were submitted.

The Council approved the instructions given by the Economic and Employment Commission to its Sub-Commission on Economic Development and its Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability. It requested the Commission:

(a) to investigate and report, taking full account of the responsibilities of the specialized agencies and the inter-governmental organizations regarding the most appropriate forms of international action for facilitating the better utilization of world resources of manpower, materials, labour and capital in order to promote higher standards of living throughout the world, more particularly in undeveloped and under-developed areas;

(b) to initiate regular reports to the Council on world economic conditions and trends, giving particular attention to any factors that are preventing or are likely to prevent in the near future the maintenance of full employment and economic stability, together with analyses indicating the casual factors involved and recommendations as to desirable action; and

(c) to consider and report to the Council as early as practicable regarding the most appropriate forms of international action to maintain world full employment and economic stability, taking full account of any views put forward by the International Labour Organisation, the International Monetary Fund, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Interim Co-ordinating Committee for International Commodity Arrangements, the Preparatory Committee of the Trade and Employment Conference (particularly the draft resolution on international action relating to employment appearing in the report of the first session of this Committee), and by non-governmental organizations in Category A in regard to questions of particular concern to them, and bearing in mind that the action to promote full employment when unemployment or under-employment result from the lack of effective demand may differ from that which is appropriate when, as in devastated areas or undeveloped or under-developed countries, the obstacle is the deficiency of certain factors such as equipment, fuel and raw materials which are necessary to employ productively the available supply of labour.

The Council requested the Secretary-General to make the necessary provisions for carrying out the services suggested by the Commission and to assume the responsibility for drawing to the attention of the Commission and its Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability any economic situations which should receive special consideration and, in particular, such developments as would, in the opinion of the Secretary-General, justify the calling of a session of the Economic and Employment Commission in accordance with its rules of procedure.

The Council also expressed the view that the Commission in carrying out its functions in regard to technical and other assistance to any country should be guided by the principle that such assistance should not be used for the purpose of exploitation or of obtaining political and other advantages exclusively for countries rendering such assistance.

On the question of the balance of payments the Council requested the Secretary-General

(a) to make the necessary arrangements for full and regular reports on and analyses of balances of payments in close co-operation with and using to the fullest extent possible the resources of the International Monetary Fund and other interested inter-governmental agencies in order to assist the Economic and Employment Commission and its Sub-Commissions in considering the economic problems related to or arising out of balances of payments; and

(b) to consult with the International Monetary Fund and other interested inter-governmental agencies with the view to developing standards of reporting data in the field of balances of payments.

c. Second Session

The Economic and Employment Commission held its second session from June 2 to 17, 1947, at Lake Success, New York.

It elected the members of the Sub-Commissions on Employment and Economic Stability and on Economic Development.

The Commission examined various aspects of economic development. It was suggested that development programs should be directed toward making nations less dependent on foreign markets, and that internationally assisted programs should be compatible with agreed international objectives, such as the expansion of world trade and economic stability. The Secretariat was requested to make comparative analyses of the patterns of industrialization. With regard to the means of development, emphasis was placed in the discussion on the availability of loan funds and the provision of technical assistance and advice. It was emphasized that such loans and assistance should be in the interest of the peoples of the countries receiving them, without political or other advantages accruing exclusively to the countries rendering them, and that programs of economic development should proceed in such a way as to promote economic stability and progress in both capital exporting and capital importing countries. The Commission endorsed the principle that small initial projects should be developed without waiting to see whether they could be included in larger projects.

The Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council request the General Assembly to appropriate any additional funds that might be necessary for the Secretary-General to carry out the investigations recommended by the Commission, to provide technical assistance to Member Governments upon their request and to facilitate the co-ordination of the work of the Economic and Employment Commission and its Sub-Commission on Economic Development with the activities of the Economic Commission for Europe, the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East and other commissions interested in economic development or reconstruction and with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and other specialized agencies with responsibilities in this field.

The Commission decided not to draw up a definitive program of reports on world economic conditions and trends but to proceed experimentally. It would make a comprehensive review, once each year, of world economic conditions and trends in the light of recommendations from its sub-commissions and include in its report to the Council its comments and recommendations. The Secretariat was to be left free to prepare, where appropriate in co-operation with the specialized agencies, and publish such reports and analyses as it found necessary and feasible in the light of changing world economic conditions and the consequent changing requirements of the Assembly, the Council, and its commissions and sub-commissions, taking into account suggestions made by members of the Commission, the Commission's instructions to its sub-commissions and the schedule of meetings of the Council, the Commission and its sub-commissions.

The Commission felt that the rehabilitation of the economics disrupted by war was a prerequisite to attaining world economic stability, and that, though considerable efforts had been made in this direction, much remained to be done. The abnormal rise in prices had proved a handicap to recovery. The Commission submitted two resolutions on the subject for the consideration of the Council, as follows:

Resolution I

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

(a) URGES the Members of the United Nations to contribute within their capacities toward achieving the purposes of the Charter relating to the promotion of higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;

(b) RECOMMENDS to Member Nations that have already attained high levels of output that they take appropriate steps to maintain such levels in order to remain in a position to assist the world economy to attain full employment and economic stability;

(c) RECOMMENDS to Member Nations that have commodities which they can make available for the reconstruction of countries disrupted by war that they avoid, to the extent that their resources of foreign exchange permit, measures tending to reduce imports from countries in need of economic reconstruction in order to increase the ability of such countries to purchase their necessary requirements in international markets, and that they continue to make financial and other resources available to assist in providing essential goods to Members in need of economic reconstruction; and

(d) RECOMMENDS to Member Nations whose economies are in need of reconstruction that to the extent their resources permit they (i) direct their attention above everything else to increasing their production to a maximum level, (ii) adopt monetary and fiscal policies which will yield them the maximum assistance in increasing production without compromising economic stability, (iii) make every effort to maximize the use of their manpower in a manner which will afford the greatest possible efficiency, and (iv) avoid such measures restrictive of international trade as will reduce their ability to secure necessary imports and impair economic stability in other parts of the world.

Resolution II

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

(a) CALLS the attention of the Members of the United Nations to the existence of unemployment in a number of countries, which is reaching sizable proportions in some of the countries, and calls upon the Governments of the countries concerned to adopt all measures within their powers for the achievement of full employment;

(b) CALLS upon the Members of the United Nations to take measures towards lowering of abnormally high prices, especially for export goods; and

(c)² FAVORS loans and credits to Member Nations which are directed exclusively towards economic stability and reconstruction in the interests of the peoples of the countries receiving credit.

The Commission asked the Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability to make recommendations on the longer-term problems of economic stability and full employment, taking into account the various suggestions made to the Commission.

The Commission appointed a representative to the Population Commission and suggested that the Economic and Social Council should recommend to the General Assembly that it appropriate such additional funds as might be necessary to carry out the essential secretariat functions relating to economic stability and development which had been requested by the Council.

D. ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION OF DEVASTATED AREAS

On February 2, 1946, the General Assembly had adopted a resolution which asked the Economic and Social Council to place the subject of the economic reconstruction of devastated areas on the agenda of its first meeting, as an urgent matter in the economic and social field.¹

1. TEMPORARY SUB-COMMISSION ON ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION OF DEVASTATED AREAS

The urgent need for international assistance in the economic reconstruction of the devastated areas was discussed at the first session of the Council. The Council resolved that it was the function of the Economic and Employment Commission to advise it on the problems of economic reconstruction of the devastated areas and other urgent economic problems arising from the war, including the methods of meeting short-term situations most consistently with the requirements of long-term economic policy. On the recommendation of that Commission, a Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas was established by resolution of the Council on June 21, 1946, at its second session.

² A motion to add the following words at the beginning of this paragraph was regarded as rejected in accordance with Rule 39 of the Commission's Rules of Procedure after two tied votes of 6 to 6:

"Supplementing the Resolution on Technical and Other Assistance of 28 March 1947."

The terms of reference of the Sub-Commission were to advise on:

(a) the nature and scope of the economic reconstruction problems of those countries which face great and urgent tasks in this field, whether by reason of occupation or physical devastation;

(b) the progress of reconstruction and the measures of international co-operation by which reconstruction in those countries might be effectively facilitated and accelerated.

For these purposes the Economic and Social Council authorized the Sub-Commission to make enquiries, with the consent of the governments concerned, in countries which had been occupied or devastated by war, except Germany and Japan, with a view to making a preliminary report on the problems of economic reconstruction in the countries visited, bearing in mind the special claims of countries which were Members of the United Nations. In considering the reconstruction problems of these countries, the Sub-Commission was instructed to take into account their economic relations with Germany and Japan and to obtain information as required through the governments of the occupying powers. Relations with neutral countries were likewise to be considered.

The Sub-Commission was comprised of the following Members: Australia, Belgium, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, France, Greece, India, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Philippine Republic, Poland, Ukrainian S.S.R., U.S.S.R., United Kingdom, United States, Yugoslavia.

The Sub-Commission met in London on July 29 and concluded its session on September 13, 1946. The Sub-Commission consisted of two Working Groups, one for Europe and Africa and one for Asia and the Far East. It was decided that the Working Group for Asia and the Far East should confine its work in London to a preliminary discussion of the manner in which its enquiries could best be conducted at a later stage, and that the Sub-Commission should be mainly concerned in London with the writing of a preliminary report on Europe.

The Working Group for Europe and Africa appointed three sub-committees which made a detailed analysis of the material submitted by governments, inter-governmental agencies and the United Nations Secretariat, and conducted on-the-spot enquiries in Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Poland and Yugoslavia in order to supplement the information submitted, particularly data on the reconstruction and development programs of the devastated countries. After full discussion the Sub-Commission approved the reports and recommendations of the two Working Groups for transmission to the Council. In addition, the Sub-Commission agreed to refer to the Council a proposal for the establishment of an Economic Commission for Europe which had been presented originally by the representatives for Poland, the United Kingdom and the United States. The representatives for the U.S.S.R. and the Ukrainian S.S.R. reserved their position on the report as a whole.

The report was submitted to the Council at its third session. The report on Europe gave a picture of war devastation and of the progress of recovery in the devastated areas to date, on the basis of the data collected. The short-term and long-term problems concerning man-power, food, agriculture, fuel and power, major industries, housing, transport, finance and currencies and trade, were studied and an attempt was made to envisage the reconstruction of Europe as a whole. For each of the above fields measures of international co-operation were recommended.

A considerable proportion of the representatives on the Council were in general agreement with the report. Certain representatives, however, were of the opinion that the terms of reference of the Sub-Commission directed it to establish the short-term requirements of the devastated areas and that an adequate study of those problems had not been fully carried out. They further disagreed with the various references in the report to long-term problems and insisted that the proposal for the establishment of an Economic Commission for Europe should be examined at a later stage.

The Council adopted the following resolutions:

General Resolution

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL having considered the Preliminary Report of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas of the Economic and Employment Commission;

1. REQUESTS the Secretary-General to transmit to the General Assembly, the Member Governments of the United Nations and to the specialized agencies the preliminary report and this present resolution for their consideration, and to call the attention of those Governments and agencies to the matters with which they are particularly concerned for appropriate action by them;

2. (a) REQUESTS the Secretary-General of the United Nations to undertake forthwith special studies of the needs of the devastated countries of the United Nations for long-term and short-term financing on favourable conditions of urgent reconstruction requirements (including the import of raw materials); to review the existing means of meeting such needs (including inter-governmental loans and credits, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, private and commercial credits); and to draw the attention of the Economic and Social Council to any cases where the existing means of financing these urgent reconstruction requirements appear to be insufficient;

(b) WELCOMES the recent announcement of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development on the progress made in its organization and operations and expresses the hope that devastated countries of the United Nations, requiring funds for reconstruction purposes, will be able to take full advantage of the Bank's operations at the earliest possible date.

3. DRAWS the specific attention of the Member Governments and specialized agencies concerned to the following matters important for the reconstruction of devastated areas:

(a) The part which the International Monetary Fund can play within the framework of its Articles of Agreement to assist in the reconstruction of devastated areas by facilitating exchange of currencies;

(b) The necessity for coal-producing countries to continue their efforts to increase coal exports in order to meet the requirements of the devastated areas, and for countries producing mining equipment and supplies to increase production and exports to the countries in need;

(c) The furnishing of maximum assistance, including technical assistance, to promote the expeditious re-establishment of agricultural production;

(d) The urgent need for international co-operation in the utilization and training of man-power;

(e) The need for rehabilitation of transport;

(f) The widespread need for new machinery and equipment including agricultural equipment and the special need for spare parts including those formerly obtained from ex-enemy countries;

(g) The desirability of exchanging information and experience regarding urgent housing problems;

(h) The importance of reviving and expanding international trade;

(i) The need for increased production of electric power;

Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate action to assist in the promotion of international co-operation on these matters.

(ii)

Resolution Endorsing the UNRRA Council Resolution

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

1. STRONGLY ENDORSES the recommendation made by the UNRRA Council at its Fifth Session in August 1946 that the General Assembly of the United Nations should "forthwith establish or designate such agency or agencies as it may deem appropriate" whose functions shall include:

(a) a review of the needs in 1947 for financing urgent imports of the basic essentials of life, particularly food and supplies for agricultural production, after the termination of UNRRA programmes to the extent that they cannot otherwise be met, and

(b) the making of recommendations as to the financial assistance which might be required to meet such needs as are found to exist as a result of foreign exchange difficulties which cannot be dealt with by existing agencies.

2. RECOMMENDS that the General Assembly, in view of the nature and urgency of the problem in certain countries as indicated in the preliminary report of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas of the Economic and Employment Commission, take appropriate action as soon as possible in connection with the above mentioned UNRRA Council resolution.

3. REQUESTS the Secretary-General to undertake immediately the collection and analysis of information relating to the subjects enumerated in paragraph 1 above with a view to the submission of this data to the agency or agencies to be established or designated by the General Assembly, and recommends that other international organizations and Governments provide all possible assistance to the Secretary-General in the performance of this task.

(iii)

Resolution on Survey of the Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas in Asia and the Far East

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, having taken note of the preliminary report of its Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas and realizing the urgent need of the early carrying-out of a study on Asia and the Far East,

1. REQUESTS the Secretary-General of the United Nations to prepare background material on war devastation and reconstruction needs of the Asiatic and Far Eastern countries.
2. REQUESTS the Secretary-General to arrange a preliminary field survey of the territories concerned to be undertaken by the Working Group or certain Members thereof.
3. REQUESTS the Working Group for Asia and the Far East to reconvene in Nanking at a time designated by the Secretary-General, to study the material prepared by the Secretariat and information received from the preliminary field survey and from governments, and to prepare a preliminary report for submission to the Economic and Social Council at its first session in 1947.

(iv)

Resolution for Continuing the Work of the Sub-Commission on Devastated Areas in Europe

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL instructs the Temporary Sub-Commission (Working Group for Europe and Africa) to reconvene if necessary at a date to be fixed by the Secretary-General for the purpose of preparing its final report with a view of making concrete proposals to further the reconstruction of devastated areas.¹

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL resolves that the proposal for the establishment of an Economic Commission for Europe be considered at the next ordinary or special session of the Council, certain delegations reserving the right to raise the matter at the General Assembly.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL resolves that the following proposal be considered at the next ordinary or special session of the Council:

The status of the Temporary Sub-Commission for Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas be raised to that of a Commission to be called The Temporary Commission for Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas.

(Following the establishment of an Economic Commission for Europe and an Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, the Economic and Social Council decided at its fourth session that the activities of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas should be terminated.)

2. ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE

The General Assembly on December 11, 1946, adopted a resolution noting the preliminary report of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas and the relevant resolution of the Economic and Social Council at its third session. It approved the Council's recommendations and urged the Members of the United Nations, the Economic and Social Council, and the specialized agencies and inter-governmental organizations concerned to take all possible steps which might lead to the early solution of the problems of the economic reconstruction of devastated areas. It also directed the Secretary-General to transmit to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development the Assembly's opinion that the Bank should come into full operation as soon as possible. It recommended that the Economic and Social Council and its commissions should consider undertaking, in co-operation with the specialized agencies concerned, a general survey of raw material resources needed for the economic reconstruction of devastated areas. Finally it recommended that the Council at its next session should give prompt and favor-

¹ The Council agreed that the following proposal should be transmitted to the Temporary Sub-Commission (Working Group for Europe and Africa):

The Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas should undertake the necessary surveys in order to investigate the potential resources of the non-devastated countries with a view to ascertain how the needs of the devastated areas could be met with the products and raw materials available in the former countries.

able consideration to the establishment of an Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East.

The Temporary Sub-Commission on the Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas had submitted to the third session of the Council a detailed draft of the terms of reference of the proposed Economic Commission for Europe. The question was also considered by the Economic and Employment Commission during its first session, from January 20 to February 5, 1947. That Commission suggested that the terms of reference of the proposed Economic Commission for Europe should be formulated by the Economic and Social Council itself, taking into account the following guiding principles:

(a) The proposed Economic Commission for Europe, with the agreement of the respective governments, should initiate and participate in measures for facilitating concerted action for the economic reconstruction of Europe.

(b) The Commission should give prior consideration to measures to facilitate the economic rehabilitation and reconstruction of devastated countries which are Members of the United Nations.

(c) Immediately upon its establishment, the Commission should consult with the member governments of the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe, the European Coal Organization, and the European Central Inland Transport Organization with a view to the absorption or termination of these Organizations, while ensuring that there is no interruption in the essential work performed by them.

(d) In view of the special functions contemplated for the Commission, the Commission should be empowered to make recommendations on any matter within its competence directly to its member governments, governments admitted in a consultative capacity, and specialized agencies concerned, but the Commission should submit for the Council's consideration any of its proposals for activities that might have important effects on the economy of the world as a whole.

(e) Subject to such measures of financial and budgetary control as may be necessary, the Commission should be empowered to establish such subsidiary machinery as it deems appropriate for facilitating the carrying out of its responsibilities.

(f) The Council should consider measures to ensure that the necessary liaison is maintained between the Economic Commission for Europe and other organs of the United Nations, in particular the Economic and Employment Commission and the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East.

The Commission recommended that the Council transfer future work on reconstruction in Europe from the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas to the Economic Commission for Europe. It also recommended that the Council should consider the establishment of an Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East after the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas had submitted its report on the reconstruction needs of these areas. The Commission drew to the Council's attention the fact that the General Assembly had not expressed any views on measures to be taken concerning the economic reconstruction of devastated areas in North Africa and Ethiopia although these areas were included in the scope of the activities of the Temporary Sub-Commission. It recommended that the Council consider the necessary measures.

The Transport and Communications Commission recommended to the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council the creation of a European Transport Organization to succeed the European Central Inland Transport Organization (ECITO).

The Secretary-General presented a memorandum to the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council, outlining a possible procedure for establishing the proposed Economic Commission for Europe, including the formation of a preparatory committee. The Council decided, however, to establish the Economic Commission for Europe forthwith and, after considerable discussion, determined its terms of reference.

The U.S.S.R. representative presented a series of amendments to the draft terms of reference of the Commission with the object of providing: that prior consultations with specialized agencies should not be mandatory on the Commission; that the Commission should not be required to report to the Council on its plan of future activities; that the competence of the Commission should extend only over its members and not over all European countries; that the Allied Control Authorities of the occupied territories should be admitted in a consultative capacity on matters of particular concern to them; that inter-governmental organizations apart from specialized agencies should not be admitted in a consultative capacity; and that transport problems should be handled by the Transport and Communications Commission and should not be the concern of the Economic Commission for Europe. As none of these amendments was accepted by the Council, the U.S.S.R. representative abstained from voting.

a. Terms of Reference

The terms of reference of the Commission, adopted by the Council, were as follows:

1. The Economic Commission for Europe, acting within the framework of the policies of the United Nations and subject to the general supervision of the Council shall, provided that the Commission takes no action in respect to any country without the agreement of the government of that country:
 - (a) initiate and participate in measures for facilitating concerted action for the economic reconstruction of Europe, for raising the level of European economic activity, and for maintaining and strengthening the economic relations of the European countries both among themselves and with other countries of the world;
 - (b) make or sponsor such investigations and studies of economic and technological problems of and developments within member countries of the Commission and within Europe generally as the Commission deems appropriate;
 - (c) undertake or sponsor the collection, evaluation and dissemination of such economic, technological and statistical information as the Commission deems appropriate.
2. The Commission shall give prior consideration, during its initial stages, to measures to facilitate the economic reconstruction of devastated countries of Europe which are Members of the United Nations.
3. Immediately upon its establishment, the Commission shall consult with the member governments of the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe, the European Coal Organization and the European Central Inland Transport Organization with a view to the prompt termination of the first, and the absorption or termination of the activities of the second and third, while ensuring that the essential work performed by each of the three is fully maintained.
4. The Commission is empowered to make recommendations on any matter within its competence directly to its member Governments, Governments admitted in a consultative capacity under paragraph 8 below, and the specialized agencies concerned. The Commission shall submit for the Council's prior consideration any of its proposals for activities that would have important effects on the economy of the world as a whole.
5. The Commission may, after discussion with any specialized agency functioning in the same general field, and with the approval of the Council establish such subsidiary bodies as it deems appropriate for facilitating the carrying out of its responsibilities.
6. The Commission shall submit to the Council a full report on its activities and plans, including those of any subsidiary bodies, once a year and shall make interim reports at each regular session of the Council.
7. The members of the Commission are the European Members of the United Nations and the United States of America.
8. The Commission may admit in a consultative capacity European nations not Members of the United Nations and shall determine the conditions in which they may participate in its work.
9. The Commission shall invite representatives of the Free Territory of Trieste (when it is established) to participate in a consultative capacity in the consideration by the Commission of any matter of particular concern to the Free Territory.
10. The Commission may consult with the representatives of the respective Allied Control Authorities of the occupied territories, and be consulted by them for the purpose of mutual information and advice on matters concerning the economies of these territories in relation to the rest of the European economy.
11. The Commission shall invite any Member of the United Nations not a member of the Commission to participate in a consultative capacity in its consideration of any matter of particular concern to that non-member.
12. The Commission shall invite representatives of specialized agencies and may invite representatives of any inter-governmental organizations to participate in a consultative capacity in its consideration of any matter of particular concern to that agency or organization, following the practices of the Economic and Social Council.
13. The Commission shall take measures to ensure that the necessary liaison is maintained with other organs of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies.
14. The Commission shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its Chairman.
15. The administrative budget of the Commission shall be financed from the funds of the United Nations.

16. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall appoint the staff of the Commission, which shall form part of the Secretariat of the United Nations.

17. The headquarters of the Commission shall be located at the seat of the European office of the United Nations.

18. The first session of the Commission shall be called by the Secretary-General of the United Nations as soon as practicable after the Commission has been created by the Economic and Social Council.

19. Not later than 1951 the Council shall make a special review of the work of the Commission with a view to determining whether the Commission should be terminated or continued, and if continued what modification if any should be made in its terms of reference.

The Council also drew the attention of the Economic Commission for Europe to those parts of the first report of the Transport and Communications Commission relating to functions in the field of European inland transport and requested it to convene at the earliest possible date a meeting of transport experts drawn from its member Governments, from other European Governments admitted in a consultative capacity, and the Allied Control Authorities of the occupied countries and from appropriate European inter-governmental transport organizations, to formulate recommendations which shall form the basis of a report by the Commission to the Council at its fifth session, if possible, on the functions and organizational arrangements within the framework of the Commission required to deal with European inland transport problems in general.

b. First Session

The Economic Commission for Europe held its first session from May 2 to May 15, 1947, at Geneva.

The Commission elected as Chairman E. Warum (Denmark) and as Vice-Chairman J. Rudzinski (Poland).

The Commission decided that it would take the initiative in determining which non-member countries and inter-governmental organizations, as being of assistance to its work, should be admitted in a consultative capacity. As regards transport matters, it was decided to invite to a meeting of transport experts European non-member countries which had direct connections by road, rail or inland waterways with countries in continental Europe.

In addition to constitutional and organizational questions the Commission discussed the question of European inland transport and what functions of the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe and the European Coal Organization should be continued.

It instructed the Executive Secretary to approach the Allied Control Authorities in Germany with a view to ascertaining their views on how to collaborate with the Commission, and to make an immediate study of how to take over, without interruption, those of the functions of the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe which were considered essential.

The Commission also requested the Executive Secretary to convene a meeting of transport experts on May 27, 1947, in Geneva, to frame recommendations with regard to the functions and organizational structure of that part of the machinery of the Economic Commission for Europe which was to deal with transport matters. The meeting of experts was also to recommend practical measures connected with the termination of the activities of the European Central Inland Transport Organization and to outline the essential work in the field of European transport performed until now by ECITO which should be fully maintained in the transfer of activities to the Economic Commission for Europe. The Meeting of Transport Experts was held in Geneva from May 27 to June 6 and submitted recommendations to the Commission on these matters.

The Commission recommended that the European Coal Organization continue its activities until its functions were transferred to the Economic Commission for Europe and in any case not later than the end of 1947. It recommended that the Executive Secretary, after consultations with Member Governments, the Chairman of ECO, and such experts as necessary, present concrete proposals to the second session of the Economic Commission for Europe regarding the structure of the future coal body, its membership and position within the framework of the Commission, its rules of procedure and its terms of reference. The new coal body, the Commission proposed, should not carry out its recommendations without the approval of the interested governments.

ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR ASIA AND THE FAR EAST

The Working Group for Asia and the Far East met at Lake Success on February 14, 1947, for its second session. It was composed of representatives of Australia, Canada, China, France, India, Netherlands, New Zealand, Peru, Philippine Republic, U.S.S.R., United Kingdom and United States, under the chairmanship of China. After a general discussion of preliminary material laid before it by the Secretariat, it divided into two sub-groups: one to study and redraft the factual material on war devastation and the progress of reconstruction in the various countries; and the other to produce a general analysis leading to specific recommendations. The reports of the two sub-groups were then brought together into a single report. This report, which included recommendations formulated and approved by the Working Group, was presented to the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session.

The report stressed the number of people affected and pointed out that the physical devastation and the indirect injuries resulting from disruption of the existing means of livelihood fell upon communities which for the most part even before the war lived at the margin of subsistence. It outlined the particular importance of the economic reconstruction of these countries to the other nations of the world.

The report covered China, the Indo-Chinese Federation, the Malayan Union, Singapore, Siam, Hongkong, Papua and New Guinea, the Philippine Republic, British Borneo, Burma, the Netherlands Indies, the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, the Solomon Islands, India, Portuguese Timor and Korea. It gave a general survey of war damage, and dealt with: living conditions and manpower; food, agriculture, and forestry; industry and mining; transport and communications, foreign trade and balance of payments; finance; and immediate needs for economic reconstruction.

The report also contained an analysis of reconstruction problems and suggested methods of organizing international aid.

It recommended that the Economic and Social Council should establish an Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, and outlined certain guiding principles which it suggested that the Council should take into consideration.

a. Terms of Reference

After considering the report of the Working Group, the Council established an Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East with the following terms of reference:

1. The Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, acting within the framework of the policies of the United Nations and subject to the general supervision of the Council, shall, provided that the Commission takes no action in respect to any country without the agreement of the Government of that country:

(a) initiate and participate in measures for facilitating concerted action for the economic reconstruction of Asia and the Far East, for raising the level of economic activity in Asia and the Far East and for maintaining and strengthening the economic relations of these areas both among themselves and with other countries of the world;

(b) make or sponsor such investigations and studies of economic and technological problems and developments within territories of Asia and the Far East as the Commission deems appropriate;

(c) undertake or sponsor the collection, evaluation and dissemination of such economic, technological and statistical information as the Commission deems appropriate.

2. The territories of Asia and the Far East referred to in paragraph 1 shall include in the first instance, British North Borneo, Brunei and Sarawak, Burma, Ceylon, China, India, Indo-Chinese Federation, Hong-Kong, Malayan Union and Singapore, Netherlands Indies, Philippine Republic and Siam.

3. The members of the Commission shall, in the first instance, consist of Australia, China, France, India, Netherlands, Philippine Republic, Siam, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom and United States of America, provided that any State in the area which may hereafter become a Member of the United Nations shall be thereupon admitted as a member of the Commission.

4. The Commission shall invite any Member of the United Nations not a member of the Commission to participate in a consultative capacity in its consideration of any matter of particular concern to that non-member.

5. The Commission shall invite representatives of specialized agencies and may invite representatives of any inter-governmental organizations to participate in a consultative capacity in its consideration of any matter of particular concern to that agency or organization, following the practice of the Economic and Social Council.

6. The Commission shall take measures to ensure that the necessary liaison is maintained with other organs of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies.

7. The Commission shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its Chairman.

8. The administrative budget of the Commission shall be financed from the funds of the United Nations.

9. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall appoint the staff of the Commission, which shall form part of the Secretariat of the United Nations.

10. The first session of the Commission shall be called by the Secretary-General of the United Nations as soon as practicable after the Commission has been created by the Economic and Social Council.

11. The headquarters of the Commission shall be located at the seat of the office of the United Nations in Asia and the Far East. Pending the establishment of such headquarters, the temporary offices of the Commission shall be located at Shanghai, subject to review by the Economic and Social Council at its first session in 1948.

12. Not later than 1951 the Council shall make a special review of the work of the Commission with a view to determining whether the Commission should be terminated or continued, and if continued what modification if any should be made in its terms of reference.

The Council requested the Commission:

1. to consider at its first session, and prepare for submission to the fifth session of the Council, recommendations concerning:

(a) the membership of the Commission, including the provisions to be made for associating with the work of the Commission any territory or group of territories in the area that may be proposed from time to time by the member Government responsible for the international relations of such territory or group of territories;

(b) its geographical scope;

(c) any other changes in or additions to its terms of reference which the Commission may deem necessary or desirable. The Commission shall, in this connection, take note of all the documents before the Council and its Committee and the discussions thereon.

2. To undertake the collection of further information relating to economic reconstruction, and make such investigations, including enquiries in the field, as it may consider necessary, and to submit a report on the result of these investigations to the next or a subsequent session of the Council.

3. In assuming its work under paragraph 1 and 2:

(a) to meet at Shanghai to inaugurate investigations as stated under paragraph 2, and

(b) to appoint a committee of the whole to meet at the interim headquarters of the United Nations to consider the questions arising under paragraph 1 and to submit its recommendations to the fifth session of the Economic and Social Council.

4. To make recommendations to the Council regarding a temporary headquarters of the Commission.

The Council requested the Secretary-General, in framing an administrative budget for the Commission, to make suitable financial provisions for the cost of investigations and field surveys.

The U.S.S.R. representative abstained from voting on the terms of reference of the Commission as a whole because he objected to the terms of a United Kingdom amendment adopted by the Council by 5 votes to 4 providing for the association with the work of the Commission of any territory or group of territories in the area proposed by the Member Government responsible for the international relations of such territories. He also objected to the provisions concerning the relations between the Commission and the specialized agencies.

The United Kingdom representative regretted that it had not been mentioned in the terms of reference that regard should be taken of existing machinery for international collaboration in the area concerned, as proposed in the report of the Working Group for Asia and the Far East, and instanced in particular the work of economic co-ordination being performed in South-East Asia by Lord Killearn's organization.

b. First Session

The Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East held its first session in Shanghai from June 16 to 25, 1947.

It elected T. F. Tsiang (China) as its Chairman, and Miguel Cuarderno (Philippines) Vice-Chairman.

The session was attended by representatives of specialized agencies.

The Commission considered the Report of the Working Group for Asia and the Far East and agreed that it set forth all the factors of economic reconstruction but that certain gaps existed in it which could be filled in only by detailed study.

The Commission decided that steps should be taken to complete the study of the Working Group and to analyze, in the light of all the information available, the short-term requirements of the countries within the geographical scope of the Commission in respect of essential reconstruction needs. It decided to ascertain how far these requirements could be met and to suggest measures to ensure their being met (a) from domestic sources; (b) from within the region; and (c) from all other sources.

It also decided that steps should be taken:

to suggest the measures necessary to facilitate training in the economic field of administrative and technical personnel of the countries concerned and the obtaining of competent technicians from outside by countries in need of them;

to examine any other matters relating to the reconstruction requirements of the area (such as obstacles to the flow of goods), the early consideration of which is essential for the completion of the above studies.

The Secretariat was instructed to make the necessary investigations with due regard to any investigations already carried out or now being carried out by other organs of the United Nations. The government of each country whose problems were being investigated was to be invited to associate itself with the investigations.

The Secretariat was requested to submit to the Commission's next session a report containing its suggestions, including suggestions with regard to the establishment of field teams where necessary, the character of such teams, their functions and the area wherein it was proposed that they operate.

A Committee of the Whole was set up to prepare a resolution for submission to the Economic and Social Council and to decide on the site for the next meeting of the Commission, which it was agreed should be held in the latter half of November. The Committee of Whole was scheduled to meet in New York on July 10, 1947. The U.S.S.R. representative abstained from voting on the Commission's decisions and objected to the procedure of setting up a Committee of the Whole with the right to report direct to the Economic and Social Council. The Indian representative also questioned the division of functions between the Commission and a Committee of the Whole and gave notice that he would, either at the meeting of the Committee in New York or at a later session of the Commission, move the inclusion on the Commission of other countries in Asia such as Burma, Ceylon, Indonesia and Viet-Nam, and would ask for a complete review of the Commission's present membership.

4. NEEDS OF NORTH AFRICA AND ETHIOPIA

A draft resolution proposing the establishment of a special Economic Commission for North Africa and Ethiopia was proposed by the representative of India at the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council. Certain members of the Council, however, expressed doubt as to whether North Africa and Ethiopia could be regarded as an economic whole and felt that further information was required.

The Economic and Social Council adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL TAKES NOTE of the fact, to which attention has been drawn by the Economic and Employment Commission in its report, that North Africa and Ethiopia were included in the scope of the activities of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas:

CONSIDERS THAT it is essential that the United Nations give simultaneous consideration to all war-devastated areas; and REQUESTS the Secretary-General to make a field survey, with the concurrence of the Governments and administrations concerned and at their request, of the reconstruction problems of Ethiopia and of other devastated territories not included in the reports of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas, and to report to the Economic and Social Council at its next session the measures necessary to effect a speedy reconstruction.

5. SECRETARY-GENERAL'S INTERIM REPORT

As requested by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution of October 11, 1946, the Secretary-General arranged for studies of the needs of the devastated countries of the United Nations for long-term and short-term financing or urgent reconstruction requirements, and for a review of the existing means of meeting such needs. A questionnaire was dispatched to the following Member Governments: Australia (for New Guinea), Belgium, China, Denmark, Ethiopia, France, Greece, India, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Philippines, Siam, U.S.S.R. (for Northern Korea), United Kingdom, United States (for Southern Korea) and Yugoslavia.

The Secretary-General presented an interim report to the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council. The report pointed out that as it was based on information submitted by governments, it did not include countries from which no information had been received; it dealt only with European areas to avoid overlapping with the studies of the Working Group for Asia and the Far East of the Temporary Sub-Commission on Economic Reconstruction of Devastated Areas; certain of the estimates supplied by governments were not on a comparable basis. The report also dealt with certain countries not Members of the United Nations on the grounds that the United Nations Special Technical Committee on Relief Needs after the Termination of UNRRA had considered all countries formerly assisted by UNRRA and that the existing means of international credit had been drawn upon both by Members and by non-members of the United Nations.

The import requirements and estimated balances of payment position for 1947 were estimated as follows:

(Millions of U. S. Dollar Equivalents)

Countries	Relief Reconstruction and Other Needs for 1947	Foreign Exchange Resources Available Against Import Programs for 1947	Deficit (1) (2)
	(1)	(2)
U.N. Member Countries
Belgium-Luxembourg	1,650.0	1,290.0	360.0
Czechoslovakia	757.0	642.0	115.0
Ethiopia	90.2	30.8	59.4
France	3,027.0	1,901.6	621.4 ¹
Greece	501.0	111.5	389.5
Netherlands	1,326.0	1,003.0	323.0
Poland	717.4	348.0	369.4
Yugoslavia	467.5	132.1	335.4
Non-Member Countries
Austria	322.5	100.0	222.5
Finland	332.5	319.8	12.7
Hungary	147.0	50.5	83.0 ¹
Italy	1,506.8	911.0	595.8
TOTAL	10,844.9	6,840.3	3,487.1

In calculating the deficits the following resources were taken into account: gold holdings, foreign exchange balances, and long-term external assets; estimated foreign exchange receipts on current account and equivalent imports under barter agreements; unexpended balances of foreign loans and credits received and available for expenditure in 1947. Gold, foreign exchange balances, and long-term external assets were offset against the requirements only to the extent that governments had stated them to be available to meet these requirements.

The report outlines the following resources as potentially available to meet the deficits: additional relief grants and other contributions; reparations and restitution of property, including monetary gold; loans and credits. It stated that the major potential source of reconstruction loans in 1947 was the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development but that the situation with respect to urgent reconstruction requirements would not become clearer until the Bank had determined the extent to which its resources would be used to meet the applications for its assistance in 1947.

The Economic and Social Council by a majority of 15 for and 2 against passed the following resolution proposed by the Netherlands representative.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL HAVING TAKEN NOTE of the interim report by the Secretary-General on the needs of the devastated countries of the United Nations for long-term and short-term financing of urgent reconstruction requirements, accompanied by a review of the existing means of meeting such needs (document E/228);

RECOGNIZING the importance of continuing the study of the financial needs of the devastated countries of the United Nations;

RECOGNIZING that the financial difficulties which hamper the economic reconstruction of the devastated countries, Members of the United Nations, cannot be fully understood unless the following facts are taken into account:

(a) that at present a substantial part of the goods imported by the devastated countries, Members of the United Nations, for the satisfaction of their most pressing needs, must be paid for in freely convertible foreign currency;

(b) that the limited amount of freely convertible foreign exchange available to these countries is further limited by the fact that the devastated countries of Europe are required to regulate their accounts with Germany in freely convertible foreign currency;

(c) that the foreign exchange receipts of these countries for the goods they export and the services they render are only to a small extent in freely convertible foreign exchange,

REQUESTS the Secretary-General

To continue, in close collaboration with the Governments concerned and with the International Monetary Fund, to study the questions under review in document E/288;

To extend the study to all devastated areas of the United Nations; and

To present to the Economic and Social Council, the Regional Commissions for Europe and for Asia and the Far East, and the Economic and Employment Commission, as early as possible a report indicating the financial needs and resources of the devastated countries of the United Nations in the immediate future, especially in respect of their requirements and receipts of freely convertible foreign currency; and RECOMMENDS that the Governments concerned give the fullest co-operation to the Secretary-General in the performance of the above task.

E. RELIEF NEEDS AFTER THE TERMINATION OF UNRRA

The General Assembly on December 11, 1946, had established a Special Technical Committee consisting of ten experts serving in their individual capacities, designated by the Governments of Argentina, Brazil, Canada, China, Denmark, France, Poland, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States. The Committee was directed by the Assembly:

(a) to study the minimum import requirements of the basic essentials of life, particularly food and supplies for agricultural production of countries which the Committee believes might require assistance in the prevention of suffering or of economic retrogression which threatens the supply of these basic essentials;

(b) to survey the means available to each country concerned to finance such imports;

(c) to report concerning the amount of financial assistance which it believes may be required in the light of (a) and (b) above.

The Committee first met on December 18 and held 30 sessions. It submitted its report to the Secretary-General on January 23, 1947.

The Committee reviewed the data supplied by the Secretary-General in accordance with the General Assembly's resolution on the needs and resources for international payment of the following countries: Austria, Czechoslovakia, Finland, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Korea, Philippine Commonwealth, Poland and Yugoslavia. The Committee also heard additional evidence submitted by representatives of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Finland, Greece, Hungary, Poland and Yugoslavia, the Secretary-General of the International Emergency Food Council and the Chief of the Bureau of Supply of UNRRA. Replies were not received from the Byelorussian S.S.R. and the Ukrainian S.S.R.

The Committee drew up a minimum list of import requirements consisting of the basic essentials of life and of such other imports as were necessary to prevent suffering on the one hand or economic retrogression on the other, under the headings of food, agricultural supplies, textiles and footwear, medical supplies, fuel and industrial supplies; it calculated the foreign currency resources available to the countries under consideration for meeting the minimum import programs.

In calculating import requirements the Committee considered that capital items and imports required for reconstruction and rehabilitation of agriculture and industry damaged or destroyed by the war, or imports intended to increase agricultural and industrial activity, were outside its terms of reference. It also made allowance for the carry-over of assistance from UNRRA during 1947.

In calculating the means of the countries concerned to finance the minimum import requirements out of their own resources, the Committee considered that such requirements should be regarded as a first charge upon the proceeds of exports and other free resources in foreign currency of these countries. At the same time the Committee recognized that certain exports, e.g. those governed by barter arrangements, could not be freely used to finance minimum import requirements and that certain loans were earmarked for other purposes.

The report of the Special Technical Committee was communicated by the Secretary-General to Members, and was noted by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session. The Secretary-General also reported to the Council on activities under the General Assembly resolution on relief needs.

The U.S.S.R. representative on the Committee had made a statement criticizing the Committee's report on the ground that, owing to an inequitable approach to the assessment of relief requirements for various countries, the estimates computed were too high for certain countries and too low for others. Referring to this statement, the U.S.S.R. representative on the Council said that in numerous cases the present economic conditions of a country and the degree of devastation caused by the war were ignored, and that the requirements for fuel, capital equipment, clothing and other articles had been calculated on a purely mechanical basis, and were therefore frequently erroneous.

The Czechoslovak representative pointed out certain deficiencies in that part of the Committee's report which concerned Czechoslovakia, e.g. the statement that no grain deficiency was to be expected from Czechoslovakia, whereas that country had imported grain before the war and still needed to do so.

The resolution adopted by the General Assembly had also called on Members to assist in furnishing relief and had recommended that they should keep the Secretary-General informed concerning their plans for assisting in meeting relief needs in 1947, and concerning the progress of their relief activities.

In his letter of February 7, 1947, transmitting the report of the Special Technical Committee the Secretary-General called the attention of Members to the provisions of the resolution inviting information. The Secretary-General reported to the Council that he had not received official statements from Members concerning their plans, although in response to informal inquiries he had been assured that the matter would be seriously considered by appropriate governments departments and that he would be informed as soon as possible concerning plans for assisting in meeting relief needs in 1947. He would make this information available to Members when he had received it and was arranging for informal consultations among interested governments, in accordance with the General Assembly's resolution.

On February 19, 1947, the Secretary-General received a communication from the Director-General of UNRRA, requesting that the United Nations consider taking over the functions of UNRRA with regard to proceeds in the form of local currency derived from the sale of UNRRA supplies by receiving countries.

The matter was considered by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session, and the Secretary-General was authorized to receive reports on the manner in which the proceeds were used and to transmit a report to the Council. The Cuban and U.S.S.R. representatives abstained from voting on this decision. The Cuban representative felt that the Economic and Social Council was not competent to make such a decision without previous authorization by the General Assembly. The U.S.S.R. representative objected to items being placed on the agenda at the last moment, pointing out that such a procedure made it impossible for representatives to consult competent organizations. He believed that there was no need for the Council to take any decision in the matter.

The General Assembly in its resolution of December 11, 1946, on relief needs after the termination of UNRRA directed the Secretary-General "to consider the ways and means of collecting and utilizing contributions from persons, organizations, and peoples all over the world, equivalent to the earnings of one day's work for the purpose of helping to meet relief needs during 1947" and to report to Member Governments and to the Economic and Social Council. The Economic and Social Council was to take what action it thought appropriate.

The Secretary-General's report estimated that such a collection would materially help in furnishing funds for urgent relief needs, and would have a powerful moral and psychological effect. Countries which had themselves suffered should also participate, it was recommended, and the collection should be linked with an equitable system for the allocation of funds.

The report recommended that the collection be made available for the alleviation of distress among the world's children, adolescents, expectant and nursing mothers, without discrimination because of race, creed, nationality status, or political belief. For this purpose it was suggested that the International Children's Emergency Fund¹ should be the main recipient of the proceeds of the collection.

The Economic and Social Council considered the Secretary-General's report at its fourth session, and approved the "One Day's Pay" collection. Certain representatives left, however, that other forms of appeal might also be used, as being more adaptable to certain countries. The Council passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

HAVING CONSIDERED the report of the Secretary-General in virtue of paragraph 8 of the General Assembly resolution No. 48 (1) of 11 December 1946² and

TAKING NOTE of the General Assembly resolution No. 57 (1) of the same date and the need of the International Children's Emergency Fund for contributions:

1. APPROVES in principle the proposal for a special world-wide appeal for non-governmental voluntary contributions to meet emergency relief needs of children, adolescents, expectant and nursing mothers, without discrimination because of race, creed, nationality status, or political belief, by way of a "One Day's Pay" collection or some alternative form of collection better adapted to each particular country;

2. REQUESTS the Secretary-General to continue his exploration of the most appropriate procedures for carrying forward this work and to make such arrangements as may be necessary for this purpose, taking into account the circumstances, including the foreign exchange position, of each country.

3. REQUESTS the Secretary-General to report to the next session of the Economic and Social Council on the progress of this project;

4. URGES Governments to facilitate this voluntary effort, on the understanding that agreement will be reached between the Secretary-General and each country

(a) as to the disposal of the national collections,

(b) as to the purchase of supplies within the country for use elsewhere; and

5. AUTHORIZES the Secretary-General, after due consultations, to fix a date most suitable for the collection.

F. CONFERENCE ON RESOURCE CONSERVATION AND UTILIZATION

On September 14, 1946, by a letter from the United States representative to the Acting President of the Economic and Social Council, the United States proposed that a scientific conference be held in that country to consider the conservation and effective utilization of natural resources. At the same time the United States submitted a draft resolution recognizing the war's drain on natural resources, their importance to the reconstruction of devastated areas and the need for continuous development of the techniques of resource conservation and utilization, and proposing the establishment of a preparatory committee to prepare and carry through the conference. A letter to the United States representative from the President of the United States expressing his hopes for the approval of the proposed conference by the Council was also appended, together with a tentative program prepared by the departments of the United States Government concerned with resources.

The Council decided to retain the item on its agenda but to postpone decision on it until the fourth session of the Council, so that the interim period could be used for consultations among Member Governments, specialized agencies and the Secretariat.

On December 5, 1946, the Secretary-General wrote to the Governments of the United Nations and to the specialized agencies concerned calling their attention to the proposed scientific conference on resource conservation and utilization and offering his services to assemble any comments they cared to make. Replies were received from twenty governments and from the Food and Agriculture Organization and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Certain replies expressed support of the proposal; others expressed certain reservations such as that it would not be possible to hold the conference in 1947 in view of the already heavy program of international conferences, that preparatory work should be undertaken either by an expert committee or by preparatory meetings on specific subjects, and that the conference should not be intended to lead to any explicit program of government action. The United States submitted an amendment to its original proposal to delete from the items proposed for the agenda the consideration of the major economic uses of atomic energy and to add certain items relating to irrigation problems.

The Council considered the matter at its fourth session, and general agreement with the idea of holding the conference, provided it was not held before 1948, was expressed. The U.S.S.R. representative expressed the view that fundamental emphasis should be laid on encouraging the investigation of the existence of natural resources in Non-Self-Governing Territories, including Trust Territories.

The Council adopted the following resolutions:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

RECOGNIZING the importance of the world's natural resources, particularly due to the drain of the war on such resources, and their importance to the reconstruction of devastated areas, and recognizing further the need for continuous development and wide-spread application of the techniques of resource conservation and utilization,

DECIDES to call a United Nations Scientific Conference on the Conservation and Utilization of Resources for the purpose of exchanging information on techniques in this field, their economic costs and benefits, and their inter-relations; such conferences to be held not earlier than 1948;

DECIDES that the Conference be devoted solely to the exchange of ideas and experience on these matters among engineers, resource technicians, economists and other experts in related fields;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General

(a) to undertake the necessary preparatory work related to the scope and organization of the Conference program and to the consideration of the place and date of the Conference;

(b) in carrying out the task entrusted to him under paragraph (a), to consult with the representatives of the specialized agencies having important responsibilities in the fields related to the Conference program and to consider suggestions which may be submitted to him by Members of the United Nations;

AUTHORIZES the Secretary-General, if he deems it appropriate, to convene a preparatory committee of experts who in his judgment will assist him in carrying out the work described in paragraph (a);

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to keep the Council informed of his activities under the resolution.

G. PREPARATORY COMMITTEE OF THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON TRADE AND EMPLOYMENT

The Council, at its first session, approved a resolution on February 18, 1946, concerning the calling of an International Conference on Trade and Employment in the latter part of 1946. The Council established a Preparatory Committee and appointed as members the representatives of the Governments of the following countries: Australia, Belgium, Luxembourg, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Lebanon, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa, the U.S.S.R., the United States of America and the United Kingdom.

The preparation of an annotated draft agenda, including a draft convention, for consideration by the conference, taking into account suggestions submitted to it by the Council or by any Members of the United Nations, was entrusted to this Preparatory Committee. The Council suggested that the agenda to be discussed by the Preparatory Committee should include the following topics:

- A. International agreements relating to:
 - (a) the achievement and maintenance of high and stable levels of employment and economic activity;
 - (b) regulations, restrictions and discriminations affecting international trade;
 - (c) restrictive business practices; and
 - (d) inter-governmental commodity arrangements.

- B. The establishment of an international trade organization as a specialized agency of the United Nations having responsibilities in the fields of (b), (c) and (d) above.

The Council further requested the Preparatory Committee, when considering the foregoing items, to take into account the special conditions which prevail in countries whose manufacturing industry is still in its initial stages of development, and the questions that arise in connection with commodities which are subject to special problems of adjustment in international markets.

Finally, the Preparatory Committee was requested to make recommendations to a subsequent session of the Council regarding the agenda (including a draft convention), and the date and place of the Conference on Trade and Employment; and also what States, if any, not Members of the United Nations, should be invited.

In connection with the above resolution, the Council was informed that the Government of the United States had invited the Governments of fifteen countries controlling a substantial proportion of world trade to meet for the purpose of negotiating the reduction of specific trade barriers and discriminations in advance of the general Conference.

At the second session of the Council, the Secretary-General made an announcement in which he stated that it would not be possible to hold the International Conference on Trade and Employment until 1948 in view of the scope and complexity of the preparatory work which would be necessary before the Conference could be held. The Secretary-General announced, however, that arrangements were being made for the Preparatory Committee of the Conference to meet in London on October 15, 1946.

The first session of the Preparatory Committee was held in London from October 15, 1946, to November 26, 1946. Its report was considered at the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council. The report contained chapters dealing with: achievement and maintenance of high and steadily rising levels of effective demand, employment and economic activity; industrial development; general commercial policy; restrictive business practices; inter-governmental commodity arrangements; and the establishment of an International Trade Organization. Annexed to it was a draft Charter of the projected ITO.

The Preparatory Committee requested its Executive Secretary:

to draw the attention of the Economic and Social Council to those portions of the Report of the Preparatory Committee which were concerned with the possible performance by the International Trade Organizations of functions in relation to industrial development and to ask the Economic and Social Council to state, before the commencement of the second session of the Committee, whether paragraph (3) of Article II of the Charter included provisionally in the Chapter on Economic Development is in accordance with the Council's views on the appropriate allocation of functions relating to economic development.

The Economic and Employment Commission considered that it was premature to attempt to make a rigid division of functions not yet allocated in the field of economic development amongst specialized agencies, commissions and sub-commissions of the Council, but stressed the desirability of co-ordinating policies and activities in this field with a view to providing complimentary rather than competitive technical services.

It saw no reason to suggest that Article 11 should be omitted from the draft Charter, but assumed that the Conference in formulating it would consider the responsibilities of existing specialized agencies in this field and the terms of reference established by the Council for the Sub-Commission on Economic Development. The Commission expressed its wish to be kept informed of the development of plans for the ITO's activities in this field.

Some members of the Council, however, felt that these recommendations of the Economic and Employment Commission were too negative.

The Council passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

HAVING CONSIDERED the request of the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment contained in annex 8 of the Report of its First Session,

IS OF THE VIEW that it would be appropriate for the International Trade Organization to assume the functions relating to economic development as described in Article 11, paragraph 3 of the draft charter appended to the above-mentioned report. The Council expects that careful consideration will be given by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment to the final formulation of this paragraph in the light of the agreed purposes and functions of the International Trade Organization, bearing in mind

(a) the terms of reference established by the Council for the Economic and Employment Commission and its Sub-Commission on Economic Development, and

(b) the responsibility in this field of inter-governmental organizations which are now, or are qualified to be, specialized agencies under Article 57 of the United Nations Charter.

The Norwegian and U.S.S.R. representatives abstained from voting on the resolution on the ground that advising Members on economic development was a function of the Economic and Social Council and its Commissions rather than of the ITO, and it was important to avoid overlapping.

With regard to inter-governmental consultation and action on commodity problems the Preparatory Committee recommended:

that, insofar as inter-governmental consultation or action in respect of particular commodities is necessary before the International Trade Organization is established, the Governments concerned should adopt as a guide the Chapter on Inter-governmental Commodity Arrangements of the Charter appended to the Report of the Committee.

It requested the Secretary-General of the United Nations, pending the establishment of the International Trade Organization, to appoint an Interim Co-ordinating Committee for International Commodity Arrangements, to consist of the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Committee for an International Conference on Trade and Employment as Chairman, a representative from the Food and Agriculture Organization to be concerned with the agricultural primary commodities, and a person to be selected at the discretion of the Secretary-General to be concerned with non-agricultural primary commodities, this Committee to keep informed of inter-governmental consultation or action in this field and to facilitate by appropriate means such consultation or action.

The Economic and Employment Commission at its first session decided to defer consideration of international commodity controls, and to request the Secretariat to collect and analyze the necessary data.

The Economic and Social Council, at its fourth session, considering the measure of agreement regarding commodity problems and the co-ordination of commodity consultations reached in the first session of the Preparatory Committee on Trade and Employment and the Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals of the Food and Agriculture Organization, decided, the Cuban and U.S.S.R. representatives abstaining, to recommend:

that, pending the establishment of the International Trade Organization, Members of the United Nations adopt as a general guide in inter-governmental consultation or action with respect to commodity problems the principles laid down in chapter VII as a whole, i.e. the chapter on inter-governmental commodity arrangements of the draft charter appended to the report of the first session of the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment, although recognizing that discussions in future sessions of the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference, as well as in the Conference itself, may result in modifications of the provisions relating to commodity problems.

The Council also requested the Secretary-General to appoint an interim co-ordinating committee for international commodity arrangements to keep informed of and to facilitate by appropriate means such inter-governmental consultation or action with respect to commodity problems, the committee to consist of a chairman to represent the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment, a person nominated by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to be concerned in particular with agricultural primary commodities, and a person to be concerned in particular with non-agricultural primary commodities.

In accordance with this instruction the Secretary-General appointed J. R. C. Helmore (Chairman), a member of the United Kingdom delegation to the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment, representing the Preparatory Committee, L. A. Wheeler, of the United States Department of Agriculture, representing the Food and Agriculture Organization, and G. Peter, Director of Economic Affairs at the Ministry of French Overseas Territories, as members of the Interim Commodity Co-ordinating Committee.

At its second session the Economic and Employment Commission requested the Secretariat to prepare a report on the question of how shortages in important commodities constitute obstacles to reconstruction of devastated areas, to economic development of underdeveloped countries and to economic stability and full employment. The report was to be submitted to the Sub-Commission on Employment and Economic Stability and to the Sub-Commission on Economic Development.

H. RESOLUTIONS REGARDING ASSISTANCE TO THE FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION

During its second session, the Council received a communication from the Chairman of a Special Meeting which had been convened by the Food and Agriculture Organization to consider international food problems, particularly those to which reference had been made in the resolution on world shortage of cereals adopted by the General Assembly on February 14, 1946.¹

Following the consideration of the report of the Special Meeting, the Economic and Social Council adopted a resolution, on June 21, 1946, relating to the long-term aspects of the Special Meeting's recommendations. The resolution requested the Secretary-General to offer all possible assistance to the Food and Agriculture Organization at all stages, in making the survey and in preparing proposals concerning longer-term international machinery with reference to food with a view to ensuring that these proposals are in harmony with the broad pattern of the United Nations for international economic organization and co-operation.

During the third session of the Council the Secretary-General reported on the discussions which had taken place on such longer-term proposals, referring particularly to the establishment by the Food and Agriculture Organization of a Preparatory Commission, in which representatives of the Council were invited to participate to consider proposals which had been made for the establishment of a World Food Board or of some other arrangement to achieve the same objectives.

On October 3, 1946, the Council adopted a resolution appointing the Chairman of the Economic and Employment Commission, or an alternate designated by him, to take part in the deliberations of the Preparatory Commission, and requesting the Secretary-General also to appoint a representative to speak especially for the Preparatory Committee of the International Conference on Trade and Employment. By the same resolution the Council requested the Secretary-General to report on these discussions to each session of the Council until the Preparatory Commission had completed its work, and requested the Economic and Employment Commission to "keep itself closely informed of the progress of the deliberations of the Preparatory Commission and to advise the Council as to the nature and timing of further measures that may be required in order to assure progress towards the basis objective."

A report was accordingly presented by the Secretary-General to the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council on the meetings of the Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals from October 28, 1946, to January 24, 1947. Professor W. A. Mackintosh, as chairman of the Nuclear Economic and Employment Commission, represented the Economic and Social Council at the meetings of the Commission, and David Owen, Assistant Secretary-General in charge of Economic Affairs, was appointed by the Secretary-General to speak especially for the Preparatory Committee of the International Conference on Trade and Employment.

The Preparatory Commission established two Committees, the first on development and food programs and the second on price stabilization and commodity policy. Later the two Committees held joint meetings.

In his report the Secretary-General listed nine items in the report of the Preparatory Commission of particular concern to the Economic and Social Council. These concerned:

- (1) Population studies.
- (2) Provision of information and advice on industrialization and general economic development.
- (3) Requests by governments for missions to study the general exploitation of the resources of a country, both agricultural and industrial.
- (4) Industrial development — the problem of selecting industries with reasonable prospects of economic success and of minimizing the dislocation in existing channels of trade.

(5) Finance for development projects and programs.

(6) Wise domestic finance in countries being developed.

(7) Co-ordination of activities of specialized agencies.

(8) Interim co-ordinating committee to facilitate and keep informed of consultation or action in respect of inter-governmental commodity arrangements.

(9) Representation of Economic and Social Council on proposed World Food Council.

The Council agreed to take no action on the report of the Secretary-General until the full Conference of FAO had considered the Report of its Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals.

I. RESOLUTION ON FAO TIMBER CONFERENCE

A resolution was presented by the Czechoslovak representative at the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council recognizing the seriousness of the timber shortage, welcoming the initiative taken by the Food and Agriculture Organization in calling an international timber conference to meet in Czechoslovakia in April 1947 and urging participation in the conference by Members of the United Nations to whose economy the production, import or export of forest products was important.

The resolution was adopted by the Economic and Social Council with certain drafting changes aimed, inter alia, at including the whole problem and not, as in the original draft, merely the European aspects of it.

The resolution as adopted read:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

RECOGNIZING the seriousness of the present timber shortage which is delaying reconstruction and threatening economic recovery in devastated countries,

CONSIDERING the urgent need for international consultation with regard to this problem,

CONSIDERING that in any immediate solutions which may be found, full consideration must be given to the long-range requirements of a sound afforestation policy,

WELCOMES the initiative taken by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in calling an international timber conference to meet in Czechoslovakia on 28 April 1947;

NOTES with satisfaction the decision taken by the FAO that other conferences would be called in various parts of the world in 1947, in order to consider this problem;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to arrange for representation of the United Nations at the conference in response to the invitation of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and URGES the Members of the United Nations to whose economy Europe's production, import or export of forest products is important, whether immediately or from the point of view of longer-range development of potential resources and consumption requirements, to participate in the timber conference.

J. TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS PROBLEMS

1. TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

The Council at its first session established the Temporary Transport and Communications Commission, in nuclear form, to advise it on the adequacy of the structure of international organization in the fields of transport and communication and on substantive problems in these fields. The Commission was directed to make a general review of international organization in the fields of transport and communications, to establish preliminary contacts with inter-governmental agencies, to advise the Council with respect to the disposition of the functions of the Communications and Transit Organization of the League of Nations and to report to the Council after consultation with the appropriate inter-governmental agencies on substantive problems requiring immediate attention.

a. Terms of Reference

The terms of reference adopted by the Council at its second session in the light of the Report of the nuclear Commission were as follows:

The functions of the Commission shall be:

- (a) to assist the Economic and Social Council in its tasks concerned with transport and communications problems;
- (b) to advise the Council on the co-ordination of the work of specialized agencies in the sphere of transport and communications;
- (c) to report to the Council, on its request, on the work of any of the specialized agencies in the sphere of transport and communications;
- (d) to advise the Council in fields where no permanent international organization yet exists and on problems which concern more than one sphere of transport or communications;
- (e) to suggest to the Council the creation of new agencies, or the conclusion of new conventions or the revision of existing conventions;
- (f) on instructions of the Economic and Social Council and when so authorized by convention or agreement between the parties, to perform the task of conciliation in cases of disputes between States and (or) specialized agencies, on problems concerning international transport and communications where not dealt with by other means;
- (g) to perform such other tasks as the Economic and Social Council may require of it on any question concerning international transport and communications;
- (h) to assist the Security Council, if so desired by the Economic and Social Council, in accordance with Article 65 of the Charter;
- (i) to assist the Trusteeship Council, if so desired by the Economic and Social Council, in accordance with Article 91 of the Charter.

In the five individual fields of transport and communications, aviation, telecommunications, postal services, inland transport and shipping, the Council considered the question of what inter-governmental organizations there should be and the suitability of certain existing specialized organizations to be brought into relation with the United Nations. In the aviation field the Council directed that negotiations should begin immediately with the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization for establishing such a relationship. In the case of telecommunications, on the other hand, the Council considered that a world conference was needed to review the organization of the existing International Telecommunications Union and its radio regulations, while in both the telecommunications and postal fields it directed the Secretary-General to convene meetings of experts to draft proposals for bringing the International Telecommunications Union and the Universal Postal Union into relation with the United Nations, such proposals to be submitted by the competent national administrations to the Telecommunications Conference and the Congress of the Universal Postal Union respectively. The Secretary-General had brought the Council's decisions to the attention of the Members of the United Nations and was making arrangements for convening the meetings of telecommunications and postal experts.

The inland transport and shipping fields, in which, as contrasted with the case of the other three fields, there was no existing permanent world organization, were to be the subject of further study by the Transport and Communications Commission. With regard to inland transport, the Commission was to submit recommendations to the Council on the question of the forms of relationship and the organizations with which the Council should establish relationship. In the shipping field the Commission was directed to report the conclusions of its study concerning the question of the establishment of a world-wide inter-governmental organization to deal with technical matters. The Council, in addition, authorized the Secretary-General to seek the views of the United Maritime Consultative Council which was to meet in Amsterdam in June. The Secretary-General in accordance with this authorization requested the views of the United Maritime Consultative Council.

In addition to the organizational matters, the Council dealt with certain substantive questions brought to its attention by the Temporary Commission. It agreed that a commission of experts should prepare the ground for a world conference on passport and frontier formalities. It asked the Transport and Communications Commission to examine the situation and the machinery needed with respect to co-ordination of activities in the fields of aviation, shipping and telecommunications with respect to safety at sea and in the air. The Council furthermore drew the attention of the interested Governments to two specific problems: the re-establishment and re-organization of inter-governmental and other international machinery for the co-ordination of rail problems in Europe, and the need for improvement of the present situation of inland waterways in Europe.

The continuation of the activities of the League of Nations Organization for Communications and Transit was entrusted in some instances to the relevant specialized inter-governmental organizations and in others to organs of the United Nations. In the latter category the Statistical Commission of the Council was to continue the study of the problem of the unification of transport statistics in collaboration with the Transport and Communication Commission and the interested specialized agencies; the Transport and Communications Division of the Secretariat was to publish the monthly summary of important events in the field of transportation and the periodical lists of multilateral conventions, agreements, etc., relating to transport and communications questions.

The Council at its third session recommended adoption by the General Assembly of the agreement with the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization which had been negotiated pursuant to the decision of the Council at its previous session.

The Council supplemented its decision taken at the second session, requesting the Secretary-General to convene a meeting of experts to prepare for a world conference on passport and frontier formalities, by its decision at the third session to ask the Secretary-General to prepare and circulate to the Members of the United Nations the draft agenda of this meeting and in its preparation to take into consideration the discussions and recommendations of the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization, the Conference of Official Travel Agencies meeting in London from October 1 to 7, the International Chamber of Commerce at its meeting in Paris June 20 to 21, 1946, and any other competent international group making recommendations on this subject. The Transport and Communications Commission was asked to report to the Council without delay on the question of the methods by which the Council could best be advised on travel questions.

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of fifteen Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session, the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

Brazil	Chile
India	China
Netherlands	France
Poland	Norway
United Kingdom	Union of South Africa
	For four years
	Czechoslovakia
	Egypt
	U.S.S.R.
	United States
	Yugoslavia

b. First Session

The Transport and Communications Commission held its first session from February 6 to 18, 1947.

It elected the following as its officers:

Chairman—J. J. Oyevaar (Netherlands)

Vice-Chairman—N. Y. Bezroukov (U.S.S.R.)

The Commission recommended that no special new international organization should be created to advise the Economic and Social Council on travel questions, but that this task should be undertaken by the Commission itself.

It took account of the decision adopted at the International Conference of National Tourist Organizations, held in London in October 1946, that an exploratory committee should study the international organization of the official technical tourist bodies and recommend whether the pre-war Union internationale des organes officiels touristiques should be revised and revived or whether a new organization was necessary. The Commission asked the Secretariat to follow developments in this connection and those concerning any other competent international group in this field and report to the Commission at its next session.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session entrusted the Transport and Communications Commission with the task of advising the Council on travel matters and requested it to follow international developments in this field and report to the Council from time to time.

2. UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION¹

As directed by the Economic and Social Council at its second session the Secretary-General called a meeting of governmental experts for the purpose of drawing up proposals on the establishment of relations between the Universal Postal Union and the United Nations.

The meeting was held at the United Nations Headquarters at Lake Success from December 10 to 18, 1946, and was attended by representatives of 39 countries. It adopted a draft agreement between the United Nations and the Universal Postal Union.

The Transport and Communications Commissions expressed pleasure at the results of the meeting of governmental experts and voiced the hope that the agreement would definitely be concluded at the forthcoming Congress of the Universal Postal Union in May.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session authorized the Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies to enter into negotiations "at the appropriate time" with the Universal Postal Union for the purpose of bringing it into relationship with the United Nations, and to submit to the Council a report on the negotiations, including a draft preliminary agreement.

3. INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS UNION²

The Commission took note that the meeting of governmental experts to prepare a draft agreement with the International Telecommunications Union, to be convened in accordance with the decision of the Economic and Social Council at its second session, would be held a few days prior to the forthcoming International Telecommunications Conference itself and in or near its meeting place. The Commission expressed the hope that an agreement bringing the International Telecommunications Union into relationship with the United Nations would be concluded during the Conference.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session authorized the Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies to enter into negotiations "at the appropriate time" with the International Telecommunications Union for the purpose of bringing it into relationship with the United Nations and to submit to the Council a report on the negotiations, including a draft preliminary agreement.

4. TELECOMMUNICATIONS CONFERENCE

The Transport and Communications Commission at its first session examined a U.S.S.R. proposal resulting from the decisions of the Five-Power Conference held in Moscow on October 21, 1946. This proposal urged that the Economic and Social Council ask the United States to call: (a) an administrative conference on May 15, 1947, "for the purpose of revising radio regulations and of redistributing frequencies among services, as well as for the organization of an international committee for the registration of wave-lengths," and (b) a plenipotentiary conference on July 1, 1947, to revise the International Convention on Telecommunications and to reorganize the International Telecommunications Union. The proposal suggested that all nations which were Members of the United Nations as well as other States (excluding Franco Spain) "which possess their own territory and a permanent population, have a government of their own and possess the right of establishing diplomatic relations with other states," should be invited.

The United States representative felt that invitations should be sent only to members of the International Telecommunications Union, with the exception of Franco Spain. He mentioned that the invitations had already been sent and the proposed decision by the Economic and Social Council would only be confirmation of this action. The United Kingdom representative opposed the Soviet proposal on the ground that it would mean that the conference would be held outside of the existing International Telecommunications Union framework and would therefore create a new organization.

The Commission decided, with the United Kingdom representative in opposition and reserving his position, to adopt the points of the Soviet proposal referring to the calling of the two conferences. As regards the countries to be invited, it decided by a majority of 7 to 2, with 3 members abstaining, to suggest that invitations should be extended to all members of the International Telecommunications Union and to those Members of the United Nations not members of the Union, on the understanding that the possibility from the point of view of principle of approaching any government be left to the Economic and Social Council for decision.

² See Part Two, The Specialized Agencies.

When the question was again discussed at the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council, the Council decided, the U.S.S.R. representative abstaining, to adopt an amendment proposed by the United Kingdom representative as follows:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

NOTES that the United States has issued invitations to a Radio-Communications Administrative Conference and to a Plenipotentiary Conference of the International Telecommunications Union on 15 May and 1 July 1947, respectively, and

ENDORSES the action of the United States in not inviting the Franco Government of Spain to these Conferences, in accordance with the resolution of the General Assembly of 12 December 1946.¹

5. CONCILIATION OF DISPUTES

The Commission decided to bring to the attention of the Economic and Social Council the fact that its powers to deal with the conciliation of disputes, as foreseen in its terms of reference, did not include the transfer to the Commission of the task of the League of Nations Committee for Communications and Transit in connection with the settlement of disputes, as foreseen in several conventions in this field concluded under the League's auspices. The Commission decided by a majority vote to adopt provisionally the procedure followed in this respect by the League Committee.

6. PROPOSED SHIPPING CONFERENCE

As requested by the Economic and Social Council at its second session, the Secretary-General sought the views of the United Maritime Consultative Council on the question of establishing a future world inter-governmental organization in the field of shipping.

The United Maritime Consultative Council considered this question at its session in October 1946 and made recommendations, including a draft convention for the establishment of an inter-governmental maritime consultative organization.

The Transport and Communications Commission decided, with the abstention of the U.S.S.R. and Yugoslav members, to suggest to the Council the establishment of a world-wide inter-governmental organization in the field of shipping to deal with technical matters and the convening for this purpose by the Secretary-General of an international conference.

As the draft proposal of the U.M.C.C. was not strictly limited to the technical field, the Commission recommended that it should be used as a working draft to form the basis of discussion at the conference, and stressed the fact that governments would be free to present their views to the Conference. It suggested that governments should be requested to submit their comments and proposed amendments in advance so that these as well as the U.M.C.C. draft could be circulated to all governments participating in the Conference.

The Commission expressed the desirability that delegates to the Conference should have full powers to sign conventions concluded at the Conference so as to avoid the necessity of convening a second diplomatic conference to sign the adopted text.

It considered that the conference should be held in 1947 in Europe and recommended that as many countries as possible should be invited.

The Economic and Social Council discussed the proposal at its fourth session. Certain representatives questioned whether the proposed organization was necessary, and pointed out the burden, particularly for smaller countries, of a multiplicity of international organizations. The Council therefore decided that the proposed conference should consider the establishment of such an organization on the understanding that if it considered this favourably it should draw up the necessary convention. At the suggestion of the Indian representative, supported by other representatives, the Council also decided that the Conference should consider whether the proposed organization should deal with unfair restrictive practices by shipping concerns. The Council passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL
REQUESTS the Secretary-General

(a) to convene a conference of interested Governments to consider the establishment of an inter-governmental maritime organization. The draft convention prepared by the United Maritime Consultative Council on this matter, concerning the scope and the purpose of the proposed organization, will serve as a working paper forming the basis of discussion for the conference. The conference will also consider if the scope and purposes of the organization should include the removal or prevention of unfair restrictive practices by shipping concerns;

(b) to circulate the above-mentioned draft convention to all the Governments invited to the conference;

(c) to inform the Governments which are invited to the conference that any comments which they may wish to make on specific articles of the draft convention or amendments which they may wish to propose in advance of the conference, should be submitted to the Secretary-General for circulation to all Governments participating in the conference and for consideration by the conference itself;

(d) to draw up a provisional agenda for the conference including the items mentioned above;

(e) to invite all the Members of the United Nations, and the following Governments, to participate in the conference: Albania, Austria, Bulgaria, Eire, Finland, Hungary, Italy, Portugal, Roumania, Switzerland, Transjordan, Yemen.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

EXPRESSES the hope that the Governments invited to the conference may give their respective delegations full powers enabling them to sign such convention on the establishment of an inter-governmental maritime organization as may be concluded at the conference.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to invite the specialized agencies, inter-governmental organizations and international organizations in this field, as may be appropriate, to send observers to the conference.

The conference shall meet, if practicable, in the autumn of 1947, at a place to be determined by the Secretary-General after consultation with the President of the Council.

7. CO-ORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES IN AVIATION, SHIPPING AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS IN REGARD TO SAFETY AT SEA AND IN THE AIR

The Transport and Communications Commission at its first session took note of a communication from the United Kingdom Government concerning the conference with a view to revising the International Convention on the Safety of Life at Sea of 1929, on the basis of Article 61 of the Convention.

The Commission by a majority adopted a proposal submitted by the United Kingdom and United States delegations. The proposal provided that the Conference should invite the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization, the Provisional Maritime Consultative Council, the International Telecommunications Union and the International Meteorological Organization to send representatives to the conference to join in the study of the best machinery for co-ordinating the air-sea rescue activities of these four organizations, and that recommendations should be submitted to the Economic and Social Council. The proposal provided that a committee consisting of one representative of each of the four organizations should be set up on the initiative of the Secretary-General to prepare a factual report describing existing measures for co-ordinating safety and rescue arrangements and, if possible, to make recommendations. The report of this committee would be sent to the Secretary-General for the information of the Transport and Communications Commission, and a copy forwarded for the consideration of the Safety of Life at Sea Conference.

The representative of Yugoslavia stressed the desirability of including Albania, Bulgaria and Roumania in the list of countries to be invited to the Conference, and the representative of the ILO expressed the Organization's desire to have its Joint Maritime Commission invited to attend the conference in a consultative capacity. The United Kingdom representative said that the suggestions in question would be brought to the notice of his Government.

The Economic and Social Council accepted the principle of the recommendations and adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

After considering the suggestions of the Transport and Communications Commission concerning the co-ordination of activities in the fields of aviation, shipping and telecommunications, in regard to safety at sea and in the air,

TAKES NOTE of the fact that the United Kingdom Government, having convened the Conference on Safety of Life at Sea, is prepared to invite the necessary experts in the fields mentioned to the Conference, and also, preliminary to the Conference, to convene a preparatory committee of experts to consider the co-ordination of activities in these fields; and INSTRUCTS the Secretary-General to continue the preliminary study of this problem which has already been commenced, to follow and assist the work of the preparatory committee and of the Conference itself, and to keep the Transport and Communications Commission informed of developments in this connection.

The U.S.S.R. representative stated his opposition to inviting representatives of Franco Spain to the Conference or representatives of PICAQ, of which Spain was a member, to the preparatory committee. The United Kingdom Government stated that his Government would pay regard to the Assembly resolution regarding Franco Spain, but doubted whether it would wish to exclude technical experts representing PICAQ from the preparatory committee.

8. PROPOSED INLAND TRANSPORT ORGANIZATION

The Transport and Communications Commission considered the question of un-economic competition between the ports of Western Europe, submitted by the International Labour Organisation. It thought that the long-term aspect of the problem might be considered by a European Transport Body, if and when created, and decided to postpone to its next session consideration of the short-term aspect of the question since a report on the matter was already being prepared by the European Central Inland Transport Organization.

As requested by the Economic and Social Council, the Commission studied the question of inter-governmental agencies in the field of inland transport.

While recognizing that only the Governments composing ECITO should decide its date of termination, the Commission noted the general feeling of its members that ECITO should be terminated before the end of 1947, and preferably before the end of September. It considered that at present there was no suitable existing organization to carry on its general tasks, and that a new international organization for inland transport in Europe should be created to come into operation after the termination of ECITO.

The Commission thought that the new organization should have consultative and advisory functions in the whole field of inland transport, should perform such tasks as the United Nations might require of it in regard to any question concerning inland transport, and deal with the liquidation of any tasks not terminated by ECITO on its dissolution. It suggested the following general functions for the new organization:

1. To provide machinery for the discussion among governments of subjects of common interest in the field of inland transport.
2. To promote agreement on long-term inland transport policy in Europe.
3. To collaborate closely with the proposed Economic Commission for Europe, the exact nature of the relations to be determined when the character of the latter organization has been decided.
4. To promote action by the appropriate bodies in matters requiring their attention in their respective fields.

5. To promote, if necessary, the creation of new inland transport organizations in Europe, and/or the fusion of the organizations already existing in this field.

6. To encourage the removal of all forms of discriminatory action and unnecessary restrictions by governments in the field of international inland transport.

7. To promote the co-ordination of the different forms of international inland transport — rail, waterways, and roads.

8. To undertake the study of technical and economic problems in the field of international inland transport, to collect existing documentation and to promote the standardization and extension of statistics and documentation, and to provide for exchange of information among governments on matters under consideration by the organization.

9. To assist governments in the revision of existing international inland transport conventions and agreements, in the conclusion of such instruments; and to observe and report on their operation.

10. To advise governments on matters of international inland transport requiring conciliation and arbitration.

The Commission recommended that the structure of the proposed organization and its relation to the appropriate United Nations bodies should be examined by a conference of the interested governments. It suggested that the conference be convened by the Economic and Social Council, that it be held as soon as possible, that all countries with a major interest in European transport, including the occupying powers, be invited to participate, and other governments invited to send observers, and that the existing inter-governmental organizations in the field of European inland transport be invited to send representatives to the conference. It suggested that the conference be held in Paris.

Ten members of the Commission concurred in these recommendations, though the United States member stated that he would have preferred to leave the setting up of the European Transport Organization to the Economic Commission for Europe. The U.S.S.R. representative voted against the recommendations as he believed the question should be postponed until the Economic and Social Council had taken a decision concerning the Economic Commission for Europe. He objected in any case to giving the new organization functions other than technical and advisory. The Yugoslav member abstained from voting since he doubted the necessity of creating a new transport body of the type of ECITO owing to the existence of other international bodies in this field.

Differences of opinion were expressed in the Commission regarding the structure of the proposed organization. Two different types of structure were suggested: (a) an inter-governmental agency of the same nature as the world-wide organizations in other fields of transport, with a council, technical committees and its own secretariat and a relationship with the United Nations similar to that of the world-wide organizations in other branches of transport, and absorbing at least some of the existing inter-governmental bodies; and (b) a commission of experts similar to the Transport and Communications Commission meeting occasionally and advising the European Economic Commission as the Transport and Communications Commission advised the Economic and Social Council, the existing regional bodies remaining autonomous bodies related to the Economic Commission for Europe.

The Commission considered three alternatives suggested by the ECITO Council Committee for the relationship of the proposed organization to various United Nations bodies:

- 1) The European Transport Organization to be linked directly to the Economic and Social Council, autonomous as regards the Economic Commission for Europe although closely linked with it;
- 2) The European Transport Organization to be a transport branch of the Economic Commission for Europe.
- 3) The European Transport Organization to be a branch of the Economic Commission for Europe but to have its own Transport Council, consisting of transport representatives of the member governments.

The continental European members of the Commission preferred the first alternative, but there was general agreement among the ten members concurring in the recommendations that it was difficult to determine the proper relationship of the proposed European Transport Organization to the Economic Commission for Europe in view of the lack of information concerning the character of the latter.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session decided to consider the question in connection with the setting up of the Economic Commission for Europe. In establishing the Commission it drew attention to those aspects of the Transport and Communications Commission relating to functions in the field of European inland transport, and requested the Commission to convene a meeting of transport experts to make recommendations on the machinery for dealing with European inland transport problems.¹

After discussing the question of regional organization of inland transport in Asia and the Far East and in the Americas the Commission agreed as a first step to recommend to the Economic and Social Council that the Secretariat be asked to study and report on these matters and that it be authorized to seek the information required to make the study. These recommendations were approved by the Economic and Social Council, which also authorized the Secretary-General in studying the organization of inland transport in the Americas to take account, among other things, "of the views of the appropriate American inter-governmental transport organizations."

9. PASSPORTS AND FRONTIER FORMALITIES

The Meeting of Experts to Prepare for a World Conference on Passports and Frontier Formalities, decided upon by the Council at its third session, took place in Geneva from April 14 to 25, 1947, and was attended by representatives from thirty-one countries and observers from six others, as well as observers from various international organizations. The meeting adopted a report to the Economic and Social Council.

The meeting placed on record its view that the general abolition of the requirement of carrying a passport for purposes of foreign travel was not feasible at present, but that bilateral or multilateral agreements to waive this requirement should be encouraged on the basis of reciprocity. It recommended that the "international type" of passport recommended by the Passport Conferences held in 1920 and 1926, or an improved version which took account of the characteristics of the international type, should be generally used.

The experts also made recommendations designed to ensure the maximum duration and extent of validity of passports, and suggested that formalities for obtaining passports should be simplified as far as possible.

On the question of visas, the meeting, while feeling that in present circumstances the general abolition of visas was not practicable, recommended the universal abolition of exit visas and the reduction of preliminary exit formalities to a minimum. The meeting recommended the conclusion of inter-governmental agreements with the objective of a general abolition of entrance and transit visas. The meeting also made recommendations on the duration and extent of validity of visas, and on the reduction of charges and the simplification of the formalities for obtaining them.

The recommendations on frontier formalities included suggestions for simplifying the existing system: by expediting control; by combining control of passports, luggage, currencies and, where applicable, preliminary sanitary control; by allowing bona fide travelers to import under certain conditions funds in foreign currencies which they could later re-export; by simplifying the formalities for obtaining at frontiers posts the national currency required for the immediate needs of travelers; and by simplifying customs formalities.

The meeting suggested to the Economic and Social Council that it consider convening a further meeting of experts.

10. DANUBIAN VESSELS

The Council at its third session had before it proposals from the Yugoslav and Czechoslovak Governments recommending the restitution of the Danube vessels and barges belonging to Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, which had been removed by the German army, and were under the control of the United States occupation authorities in Austria and Germany. The United States representative and other representatives expressed the opinion that the question of the restitution of these vessels could not be separated from the broader problem of Danubian traffic in general. During the discussion the Greek delegation also submitted a proposal for restitution of Danubian vessels belonging to Greece taken over during the war by Roumania and Germany and now under the control of the U.S.S.R. occupation authorities; a number of the representatives maintained that the circumstances of this case were not sufficiently clear for discussion and the Council decided not to vote on it.

The Yugoslav and Czechoslovak proposals were rejected by the Council, which adopted a United States resolution recommending that a conference of representatives of interested States meet not later than November 1, 1946, for the purpose of resolving the problems of the resumption of international traffic on the Danube and establishing provisional operating and navigation regulations. It was pointed out that the provisions of supplementary rule K of the Rules of Procedure of the General Assembly (requiring due consultation with Members of the United Nations) applied in this case.

On October 8, 1946, the Secretary-General sent telegrams to the Governments of Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, the United Kingdom and the United States, the U.S.S.R. and Yugoslavia asking them for their views on the question of holding a conference to deal with the international traffic on the Danube. Since some States replied opposing the proposal, it was felt that no useful purpose would be served by convoking a conference in the immediate future.

K. FISCAL PROBLEMS

1. FISCAL COMMISSION

a. Terms of Reference

At its third session the Council decided to establish a Fiscal Commission with the following terms of reference:

The Fiscal Commission shall:

- (a) Study and advise the Council in the field of public finance, particularly in its legal, administrative and technical aspects;
- (b) Advise the Council and other Commissions of the Council either upon their request or on its own initiative on the fiscal implications of recommendations made by the Commissions in their fields, and in general, co-operate in matters of common interest with other Commissions of the Council and other organs of the United Nations, including the specialized agencies.

The Council also directed that shortly after its creation, and thereafter when appropriate, the Commission should make recommendations and report to the Council with respect to its terms of reference, organization and program of work.

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of fifteen Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session, the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

Belgium	Colombia
Czechoslovakia	Cuba
India	Lebanon
New Zealand	Poland
United States	U.S.S.R.
	For four years
	China
	France
	Ukrainian S.S.R.
	United Kingdom
	Union of South Africa

b. First Session

The Fiscal Commission held its first session at Lake Success, New York, from May 19 to May 29, 1947, and elected as its officers:

Chairman	— Rodolphe Putman (Belgium)
Vice-Chairman	— Pavel M. Chernyshev (U.S.S.R.)
Rapporteur	— Dr. A. R. F. Mackay (New Zealand)

Owing to the illness of Mr. Putman, Mr. Chernyshev acted as Chairman after the first meeting.

The Commission established two temporary working committees for the duration of its first session: a Committee on Technical Problems of Public Finance in General and Information Required by the Commission for the Accomplishment of Its Tasks; and a Committee on International Tax Relations.

It recommended a program of work which the Secretary-General should be asked to undertake and in which Member Governments should be asked to assist him. The Commission recommended that he should be asked to: build up a fiscal information service, and make appropriate arrangements so as to be equipped to give, on request, technical information and assistance on fiscal matters; report to the Fiscal Commission cases where the programs approved by the Economic and Social Council or other Commissions had fiscal provisions or implications; request Member Governments to submit to the Secretariat for the use of the Fiscal Commission copies of publications issued by them relating to budgets, government revenue and other receipts, appropriations and expenditure, public debt and information on the most significant facts and trends relative to public finance in the course of each year; arrange for the compilation and publication of a Public Finance Survey 1937-1947 in continuation of the series Public Finance formerly published by the League of Nations, and for the publication of the volume "Public Debt 1914-1947", begun by the League of Nations; ascertain from the Economic and Social Council and other commissions whether any special studies of a technical nature should be made by the Fiscal Commission to advise such organs on the fiscal aspects of their inquiries; subject to the policies of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, invite non-members to co-operate in supplying this information.

On the specific question of international tax relations the Commission recommended that the Secretary-General should be requested to:

(a) Make a review and revision of the work which has already been accomplished by the League of Nations in the field of international tax problems with particular reference to further action to be taken for the solution of such problems;

(b) Collect, publish and distribute the text of treaties for the prevention of double taxation, and for mutual assistance in the collection of taxes and the exchange of information;

(c) Obtain from Member Governments and compile information on administrative practices in Member countries, so that countries negotiating treaties may know what techniques are available for securing and exchanging information and for co-operating in the collection of taxes;

(d) Collect information on tax systems (including statutes, regulations and administrative practices) particularly those aspects of such systems which:

(i) in effect impose more burdensome taxes on foreigners than on nationals or on international transactions than on domestic, as for example: impose higher rates on foreigners; tax capital transfers in or out of the country; refuse foreigners the privilege accorded nationals of deducting expenses attributable to income from the taxing country; provide for presumptive or empirical tax assessments on foreigners;

(ii) in effect, make special concessions to foreigners, or to international transactions;

(iii) give taxes extra-territorial applications;

(iv) tax international travel, transport and communications;

(v) make special tax provisions for foreign held public debt.

(e) Collect detailed documentary material on internal tax legislation in every country to the extent to which such legislation covers foreign nationals or resources;

(f) Collect from Member Governments their comments on the model bilateral tax conventions prepared at the Regional Tax Conference held in Mexico City in 1943 under the auspices of the Fiscal Committee of the League of Nations and at the final session of the Fiscal Committee held in London in 1946. The comments should cover the three types of treaties: double taxation of income; double taxation of estates and successions; reciprocal administrative assistance. These comments should be circulated to the members of the Fiscal Commission well in advance of the next session;

(g) Study these problems from the point of view of their effects on international trade and investment.

It further recommended that the Secretary-General should invite Member Governments to report on fiscal problems which in their opinion should be given consideration by the Fiscal Commission.

It was the understanding of the Commission that Members would furnish only such official information as was generally accessible in accordance with applicable internal regulations.

L. STATISTICAL PROBLEMS

1. STATISTICAL COMMISSION

At its first session the Council established a Statistical Commission, in nuclear form, to report back to the Council on the functions and the scope of work which the permanent Statistical Commission should undertake.

a. Terms of Reference

The Council considered the report of the nuclear Commission at its second session and decided that the terms of reference of the Statistical Commission should be as follows:

The Commission was to assist the Council:

(a) in promoting the development of national statistics and the improvement of their comparability;

(b) in the co-ordination of the statistical work of specialized agencies;

(c) in the development of the central statistical services of the Secretariat;

(d) in advising the organs of the United Nations on general questions relating to the collection, interpretation and dissemination of statistical information;

(e) in promoting the improvement of statistics and statistical methods generally.

Further, the Council decided that:

(a) the Statistical Commission should formulate recommendations concerning the methods by which the activities of quasi-governmental and non-governmental statistical organizations may be related to those of the United Nations in fostering international co-operation in the improvement of statistics;

(b) a central statistical unit should be organized within the Secretariat of the United Nations;

(c) arrangements should be made whereby the Secretariat of the United Nations would maintain, without interruption, the statistical activities of the League of Nations.

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of twelve Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

For two years

China
Netherlands
U.S.S.R.
United States

For three years

Canada
India Mexico
Ukrainian S.S.R.

For four years

France
Norway
Turkey
United Kingdom

In addition the Council may appoint in their individual capacities not more than twelve corresponding members from countries not represented on the Commission. Such members are to be appointed with the approval of the Governments concerned.

b. First Session

The Statistical Commission held its first session from January 27 to February 7, 1947. It elected the following as its officers:

Chairman — H. Marshall (Canada)
Vice-Chairman — P. C. Mahalanobis (India)
Rapporteur — S. A. Rice (United States)

The Commission heard statements from representatives of the specialized agencies on their statistical activities, and made recommendations for the co-ordination of these activities with those of the United Nations. These recommendations were adopted by the Economic and Social Council in the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL,
TAKES NOTE of the report of the first session of the Statistical Commission, and

DECIDES as follows:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL,
TAKING NOTE of the recommendation of the Statistical Commission regarding the co-ordination of statistical activities of the United Nations and the specialized agencies relating to the collection, interpretation and dissemination of statistical information,

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to make periodic reports at sessions of the Statistical Commission on progress achieved in developing administrative instruments, procedures, and agreements through which effective statistical co-operation may be secured between the United Nations and the specialized agencies. The initial report should be made at the second session of the Statistical Commission and should include the following items:

(a) A comprehensive inventory of the statistical activities and needs of all the constituent organs of the United Nations, the specialized agencies, and inter-governmental organizations qualified to be specialized agencies under Article 57 of the Charter.

(b) The extent to which complete or partial duplication may exist among these activities and needs.

(c) The proposed distribution of primary responsibilities for the collection and publication of statistics in various specialized fields among the specialized agencies and the Statistical Office of the United Nations, taking into account the agreements reached between the specialized agencies and the United Nations.

(d) The steps taken to co-ordinate the collection and publication of such statistics together with proposed methods of achieving further co-ordination.

(e) Proposals to arrange for the collection and publication of statistical data required for international purposes which may not already be adequately provided through the statistical activities of the United Nations or the specialized agencies.

(f) The extent to which the objectives of the agreements existing between the United Nations and the specialized agencies with respect to statistical services have been realized. The report should point out the difficulties, if any, which have been encountered in carrying out the agreements and the means which should be undertaken to remove such difficulties.

The Statistical Commission at its first session also requested the Statistical Office of the United Nations to consult with the International Monetary Fund and other interested agencies with a view to developing standards of reporting data in the field of balance of payments, and requested the Secretary-General to report on the subject to the Commission at its next session.

The Statistical Commission expressed the view that the appropriate functions of the United Nations and the specialized agencies on the one hand, and those of non-governmental organizations interested in statistics on the other should be:

(a) That the United Nations and specialized agencies have responsibilities for the collection, analysis, and publication of statistics required in the performance of their assigned tasks and for the general development and improvement of an adequate and co-ordinated international statistical system;

(b) That non-governmental international organizations interested in the development of statistics should maintain and develop their scientific and professional character and should direct their activities toward the development of statistical methodology and scientific standards, the interchange and diffusion of knowledge, the training of statisticians, and the maintenance of high professional competence.

The Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council should admit to consultative status international organizations interested in the development of statistics which so requested and which would be guided by this definition of roles, and should request the Secretary-General to be guided by the definition in his discussions with these organizations so as to avoid undesirable duplication, and report periodically on these discussions to the Commission.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session requested the Secretary-General, in developing relationships with such non-governmental organizations, to be guided by the principles set forth by the Statistical Commission, and especially to consider the desirability of:

(a) eliminating duplication in statistical programmes and activities as between such organizations and the United Nations;

(b) assuming responsibility for such statistical activities as might be more appropriately undertaken by the United Nations than by the non-governmental organizations.

The Commission stressed the urgency of securing, so far as possible, comparability in the statistics of different countries with regard to "industrial classification" and recommended:

(a) That the Secretary-General obtain from Governments, copies of their industrial classifications (copies of classifications for statistical nomenclature), covering all branches of economic activity, now in use or under consideration by them, together with any explanatory notes which may be available and that this information be collated;

(b) That a report on the data received be submitted to a Committee of the Statistical Commission in order that it may plan and consider a future program of work in this field;

(c) That the Economic and Social Council authorizes the Statistical Commission in addition to appoint a Committee of Experts, at a date to be specified by the Commission. This Committee shall consist of not more than seven members to serve in their individual capacities and to make proposals to the Statistical Commission on a standard industrial classification.

The Commission elected a Committee on Industrial Classification composed of six members of the Commission.

The Statistical Commission also recommended that the publication of national income and expenditure data should be undertaken promptly in order to provide comparable figures for as many countries as possible.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

HAVING NOTED with approval the recommendations of the Statistical Commission regarding its program for the development of an international standard industrial classification, AUTHORIZES the Statistical Commission to invite individual experts, not more than seven in number, to work with the Committee on Industrial Classification established by the Commission to make proposals to the Commission on a standard industrial classification.

The Statistical Commission expressed the wish to assume formally the functions of the Committee of Statistical Experts set up under the International Convention relating to Economic Statistics (1928) and requested the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the assumption by the United Nations of responsibilities entrusted to the League of Nations under this Convention, for consideration by the Commission at its next session.

On the recommendation of the Commission, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General:

(a) to arrange for the publication of the following technical papers prepared under the direction of the League of Nations Committee of Statistical Experts:

- (i) Measurement of national income and the construction of social accounts,
- (ii) Banking statistics, recommendations on scope and principles of classification,
- (iii) Note on balance of payments statistics;

(b) to collect any comments received or to be received from Governments on the technical papers cited above, and in consultation with the appropriate agencies to make these comments available in connection with any work undertaken in the fields to which these papers relate.

The Commission endorsed the proposal to prepare a Supplement to the Monthly Bulletin of Statistics, and recommended that a revised edition of the Supplement should be endorsed periodically. The Economic and Social Council endorsed these recommendations.

2. SUB-COMMISSION ON STATISTICAL SAMPLING

The Economic and Social Council had authorized the Statistical Commission to establish a Sub-Commission on Statistical Sampling, to consist of not more than nine members. The Commission established the Sub-Commission and nominated its members. It recommended that the Secretary-General should request R. A. Fisher (United Kingdom) to serve as consultant to the Sub-Commission. It directed the Sub-Commission:

(a) To draft recommendations to the Commission concerning its detailed terms of reference and composition in conformity with Chapter VII of the report of the nucleus Commission;

(b) To examine the status of the methods used in applications of statistical sampling in different countries and in different fields of subject matter;

(c) To give special consideration to the use of statistical sampling methods in meeting the actual needs of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations brought into consultative status with the United Nations with a view to filling gaps in the information needed by them;

(d) To examine the possibility of using sampling methods to assess the reliability of complete enumeration;

(e) To give special consideration to those fields in which sampling methods are to be preferred to complete enumeration in respect of reliability, speed, cost and other factors.

3. WORLD STATISTICAL CONGRESS

At the third session of the Economic and Social Council the Lebanese representative drew attention to the expectation that during the latter part of 1947 there would be a number of important international meetings relating to statistical matters in the United States. He made the proposal that the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Statistical Commission, should explore "with those responsible for the organization of such meetings and with the appropriate specialized agencies, the practicability and desirability of co-ordinating the arrangements being made in such a manner as to constitute a World Statistical Congress in September 1947, under the aegis of the Economic and Social Council, and should make a report and recommendations on this matter to the Council at its next meeting." Several representatives, however, preferred that the matter should be referred for consideration to the Statistical Commission. The Council decided to approve the proposal in the form set out above.

In accordance with this resolution the Statistical Commission was asked for its views on this proposal. It recommended that such a conference should be held and expressed the view that:

It would be desirable for the Economic and Social Council to assume responsibility for a limited program of general meetings under its auspices to be known as the World Statistical Congress, focusing attention upon the statistical activities of the United Nations, the specialized agencies, and non-governmental organizations. The arrangements for such meetings should be co-ordinated with those of the international organizations which are scheduled to meet during the same period.

The Statistical Commission also made recommendations concerning participation in the Congress of Members of the United Nations, specialized agencies, non-governmental organizations and officials of the United Nations; co-ordination with the organizations planning statistical meetings; circulation of the agenda. The Population Commission endorsed the recommendations of the Statistical Commission. (The representatives of the U.S.S.R., the Ukrainian S.S.R. and Yugoslavia did not participate in this decision).

The Secretary-General reported to the Economic and Social Council on the estimated cost of holding the Congress and on the practicability of holding it in September 1947.

On the basis of these recommendations the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL
TAKING NOTE of the recommendation of the Statistical Commission regarding the desirability of holding a World Statistical Congress

DECIDES to convene a World Statistical Congress, to be held in Washington, D. C. in September 1947, consisting of a limited programme of general meetings focusing attention upon the statistical activities of the United Nations, the specialized agencies, and non-governmental organizations;

INVITES Members of the United Nations to participate in the World Statistical Congress by naming delegations consisting of an adequate number of leading statisticians of their countries;

INVITES the specialized agencies, inter-governmental agencies, and interested non-governmental organizations to participate by sending to the Congress officials responsible for their statistical activities and by co-ordinating the time and place of their statistical meetings with those of the World Statistical Congress; and

REQUESTS the Secretary-General

(a) to arrange for the participation of appropriate officials of the United Nations in the Congress;

(b) to circulate the agenda for the Congress sufficiently well in advance of the meeting to enable Member Governments to determine the composition of their delegations; and

(c) to work with representatives of organizations planning statistical meetings during the same period, and to take such other action as he may consider necessary and appropriate in connection with the arrangements for the Congress.

M. POPULATION PROBLEMS

1. POPULATION COMMISSION

a. Terms of Reference

The Council decided at the third session to establish a Population Commission (replacing the former name of Demographic Commission) with the following terms of reference:

The Population Commission shall arrange for studies and advise the Council on:

(a) population changes, the factors associated with such changes, and the policies designed to influence these factors;

- (b) inter-relationships of economic and social conditions and population trends;
- (c) migratory movements of population and factors associated with such movements;
- (d) any other population problems on which the principal or subsidiary organs of the United Nations or the specialized agencies may seek advice.

The first task of the Population Commission was to be the drawing up of a specific programme of work based on its terms of reference and taking into account any modifications in those terms of reference which the Commission might wish to recommend to the Council.

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of twelve Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session the Council selected the following States to designate the initial Members:

For two years
China
United Kingdom
United States
U.S.S.R.

For three years
Australia
Canada
France
Ukrainian S.S.R.

For four years
Brazil
Netherlands
Peru
Yugoslavia

In order to maintain close liaison between the Population Commission and other bodies concerned with population problems, the Council decided that the Population Commission should invite representatives from the Economic and Employment Commission, Statistical Commission, Social Commission and, until such time as the World Health Organization should become a specialized agency, from the Interim Commission of the World Health Organization, such representatives to take part in the proceedings but not to be entitled to vote.

b. First Session

The Population Commission held its first session from February 6 to February 19, 1947. It elected the following as its officers:

Chairman — Alberto Arca Parró (Peru)
Vice-Chairman — V. A. Rabichko
(Ukrainian S.S.R.)
Rapporteur — David Glass
(United Kingdom)

The Commission restricted itself to preparing a limited interim program, and recommended that the Secretary-General prepare outlines for certain more comprehensive long-term work. It expressed the view that it was at present desirable to avoid any strict lines of demarcation between the work of the Population Commission and that of other commissions, in particular the Statistical Commission.

The Commission heard statements from the representatives of the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization, and considered questions of collaboration between the Commission and the specialized agencies. It recognized the need of the Food and Agriculture Organization for statistics, estimates and studies relating to population and recommended that the Economic and Social Council should request the Secretary-General to provide means whereby in collaboration with the Food and Agriculture Organization the data needed by that Organization might be supplied.

The Economic and Social Council passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKES NOTE of the report of the first session of the Population Commission and decides as follows:

TAKING NOTE of the report of the Population Commission on the needs of the Food and Agriculture Organization for population statistics, estimates, and studies, in connection with the current activities of that organization; and

RECOGNIZING that statistics, estimates, and studies on these subjects are needed also by other specialized agencies and branches of the United Nations and by Member States;

RECOMMENDS the Secretary-General:

1. to provide means whereby the population statistics, estimates, and studies needed by the United Nations and by the various specialized agencies may be supplied in collaboration with the agencies concerned, taking into consideration the question of appropriate allocation of costs in accordance with the agreements existing between the United Nations and the specialized agencies;
2. to report to the Population and Statistical Commissions at their next sessions on steps taken to this end.

2. INTERNATIONAL CENSUS PLAN

The Statistical Commission at its first session recommended that the Economic and Social Council should (1) welcome the steps which were being taken to conduct co-operatively population censuses of American nations; (2) express the belief that the experience gained in this co-operative project would be of value to Member Governments to their own countries, and serve as a basis for useful conclusions in possible projects in all countries of the world; and (3) request Member Governments taking part in the 1950 Census of the Americas to keep the Secretary-General and the Statistical Commission informed as to the development of the project and furnish to the Secretary-General copies of schedules and basic documents of this census, to be distributed to each Member Government of the United Nations.

The Population Commission at its first session endorsed these recommendations and recommended that the Economic and Social Council should in addition encourage Member States proposing to take censuses in or around 1950 to use comparable schedules, and request the Secretary-General to: (1) offer advice and assistance to Members preparing to take comparable censuses; (2) co-operate with FAO and Member States intending to participate in the proposed World Census of Agriculture; and (3) keep Member States and the Statistical and Population Commissions informed of developments under these heads.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session, passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKING NOTE OF

1. The recommendations of the Statistical Commission regarding the 1950 Census of the Americas;

2. The Population Commission's endorsement of these recommendations;

3. The further recommendations of the Population Commission regarding international census plans;

RECORDS its welcome of the steps which are being taken to conduct co-operatively population censuses of American nations and agricultural censuses of all nations of the world;

EXPRESSES its belief that the experience gained in the preparation and conduct of these co-operative projects will be of great value to Member States in their own countries, and will serve as a basis for useful conclusions in possible population census projects in all countries of the world;

RECOMMENDS that all such Member States as are proposing to take censuses in or around 1950 use comparable schedules, so far as it is possible to do so; and

REQUESTS

1. The Secretary-General to offer advice and assistance to all such Member States as are prepared to take comparable population censuses, whether by complete enumeration or on the basis of a scientific sample.

2. The Secretary-General to co-operate with the Food and Agriculture Organization and with all such Member States as intend to participate in the proposed 1950 world census of agriculture.

3. That Member States taking part in the 1950 census of the Americas and the 1950 world census of agriculture keep the Secretary-General informed as to the development of the projects.

4. That Member States taking part in the 1950 census of the Americas furnish the Secretary-General with copies of schedules and basic documents of this census, as they are prepared, which he shall distribute to all Member States of the United Nations.

5. The Secretary-General to keep Member States and the Statistical and Population Commissions informed on developments under the above heads.

3. DEMOGRAPHIC DATA

The Population Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council should authorize, in addition to any inclusion of population statistics in general annual or other periodic publications of the United Nations, the publication by the Secretary-General of a Demographic Yearbook, on the ground that the quantity and nature of the data desirable for demographic purposes went beyond the scope of general publications published by the United Nations and the specialized agencies. The statistical data contained in the Yearbook, should be taken from official statistics published or supplied by separate governments or calculated by the Secretariat with the consent of the separate governments concerned.

The Commission recommended that the Secretary-General should be requested to prepare for its consideration at its next session an outline of the contents of the proposed Yearbook, taking into account the needs of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies. It also recommended that he should be requested to consider publishing in the Yearbook, or separately, an annual digest of legislation concerning sources of population data, population changes, and migration. It recommended that the first issue of the Yearbook should be published not later than 1948.

These recommendations were approved by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session.

The Population Commission also made recommendations on the need for improving the accuracy, comparability and usefulness of demographic data, and the Statistical Commission emphasized the need for taking steps to make statistics compiled by different countries more comparable.

On the basis of these recommendations, the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL TAKING NOTE OF

1. The report of the Population Commission on the need for improving the accuracy, comparability, and usefulness of demographic data;

2. The concern expressed in the report of the Statistical Commission, regarding the urgency of working towards greater comparability of data through uniformity of definitions and classifications;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to prepare, for consideration by the Population Commission at its next session (in consultation with the Statistical Commission and the specialized agencies concerned), proposals:

(a) for effecting greater comparability of basic data and summary statistical measurements relating to fertility, mortality (including infant mortality), characteristics of the population, international and internal migration and the labour force, whether such data are derived from complete census, sampling, registration, or administrative operations;

(b) For improving the quality of such data;

(c) For increasing their usefulness in relation to the needs of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies.

4. POPULATIONS OF TRUST TERRITORIES

The Population Commission suggested that a study should be made of the populations of Trust Territories. It recommended that the Economic and Social Council should offer its assistance to the Trusteeship Council with respect to population data and population problems of the Trust Territories, and more specifically that it should propose to the Trusteeship Council the collection of data making possible a demographic study for each Trust Territory. Meantime, the Commission proposed, the Secretary-General should be authorized to proceed with such a study within the framework of existing data. The Commission outlined certain questions which should be answered by such a study. It recommended that the Secretary-General should issue on the basis of the studies a series of reports on the demographic characteristics of the populations of individual Trust Territories. It also recommended that he should be asked to prepare, in time for the next session of the Commission, a report on concrete achievements in the fulfilment of the task.

The Commission members from the Ukrainian S.S.R., the U.S.S.R. and Yugoslavia thought that similar studies should also be carried out for other Non-Self-Governing Territories, and the Commission member from Brazil thought it necessary that such studies be made for all areas of the world.

The Economic and Social Council accepted the recommendations of the Population Commission in the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKING NOTE OF the report of the Population Commission on the desirability of studies of the population of Trust Territories;

OFFERS ASSISTANCE to the Trusteeship Council, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations (Chapter XII, Article 75, and Chapter XIII, Articles 88 and 91), with respect to population data and population problems of the Trust Territories;

PROPOSES to the Trusteeship Council the collection of data through the questionnaires provided by Chapter XIII, Article 88, which will make possible a demographic study for each of the Trust Territories, covering the following subjects:

(a) The dynamics of the past population growth and present numbers;

(b) Birth and mortality rates (particularly infant mortality), the mean expectation of life and the prospects of population growth;

(c) The distribution of the population by occupations and educational levels;

(d) The density and distribution of the population in specific areas of the given territory;

(e) Migration of the population.

REQUESTS the Secretary-General:

1. Pending the collection of the above data, to proceed with studies of the population of Trust Territories within the framework of existing data, covering the subjects listed above, elaborating and analyzing them with reference to sex and age groups and to the separate ethnic and racial groups composing the population of each Territory;

(2) Issue, on the basis of these studies, a series of reports on the demographic characteristics of the population of individual Trust Territories;

(3) Prepare, for consideration by the Population Commission at its next session, a report on concrete achievements in the fulfilment of this task.

5. POPULATION GROWTH

On the recommendation of the Population Commission, the Economic and Social Council passed the following resolution concerning population growth in relation to economic conditions:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKING NOTE OF the report of the Population Commission concerning studies of population growth in relation to economic conditions,

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to formulate, for consideration by the Population Commission at its next session, a statement indicating the steps which might be taken to encourage studies by Member States of the most favourable rate of population change from the economic and social points of view.

6. STUDY OF DEMOGRAPHIC PROBLEMS

The Population Commission, while deciding not to prepare at its first session final plans for its future, long-term work, drew attention to the necessity of studying the interplay of the economic, social and demographic factors hindering the attainment of an adequate standard of living and cultural development of the population of certain countries. It also drew attention to certain specific questions. On its recommendations, the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKING NOTE OF the report of the Population Commission regarding the necessity of studying the interplay of the economic, social and demographic factors which hinders the attainment of an adequate standard of living and the cultural development of the population in certain countries,

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to prepare for consideration by the Population Commission at its next session, a plan of study of demographic problems in connection with the subjects listed below, for those countries the Governments of which shall request assistance in the study of these problems:

(a) Size and rate of growth of the population;

(b) Population distribution and density in various parts of the country;

(c) Social conditions among the people;

(d) Degree of industrial development;

(e) Character and conditions of land use;

(f) Social and occupational composition of the population;

(g) Distribution of the people by level of education.

The Population Commission also recommended that the Economic and Social Council should take into consideration the fact that devastated areas had suffered not only material damage, but also losses to their populations through the last two world wars.

It further recommended that the Economic and Social Council should instruct the Secretary-General to take steps to ensure that as soon as possible sufficient qualified staff be provided to implement the Commission's proposals.

7. MIGRATION QUESTIONS

The question of migration was considered by both the Social and Population Commissions at their first sessions. The Social Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the constitution of an ad hoc technical committee composed of members representing the Social and Populations Commissions and such representatives of the appropriate specialized agencies, particularly the ILO, as they might invite, to consider the documentation on migration to be submitted by the Secretariat to this committee.

This recommendation was endorsed by the Population Commission at its first session.

The Economic and Social Council, however, considered that further consideration of the question was necessary and adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

HAVING CONSIDERED the recommendations of the Population and Social Commissions relating to migration questions, and being of the opinion that further consideration of these questions by the Council should be postponed pending further study,

INVITES the Commissions concerned, after appropriate consultations, to report to the Council on a practical plan for the allocation of functions, without duplication of work, among the various organs concerned in the field of migration, and REQUESTS the Secretary-General to make such preliminary studies as would facilitate and expedite the work of the Commissions.

N. SOCIAL PROBLEMS

1. SOCIAL COMMISSION

a. Terms of Reference of Temporary Social Commission

The Council set up a Temporary Social Commission, in nuclear form, at its first session, charged with the following tasks:

(a) to make a general review of international organization in the social field, and of problems not dealt with by existing organizations, with a view to making recommendations to the Council at an early date regarding the structure of commissions and sub-commissions and possibly of new specialized agencies which it appears desirable to maintain or establish.

(b) to report to the Council on the advisability of bringing under the Council the activities in the social field hitherto carried on by the League of Nations, and such other activities as the work on the treatment of offenders now carried on by The International Penal and Penitentiary Commission;

(c) to assume on an interim basis pending the establishment of permanent machinery, the work of the League of Nations on such social questions as traffic in women and children and child welfare;

(d) to report to the Council on substantive problems in the social field requiring immediate attention.

b. Terms of Reference of Permanent Social Commission

In the light of the report submitted by the Temporary Commission to the Council at its second session, the Council decided that the terms of reference of the permanent Commission should be:

(a) to advise the Council on social questions of a general character and in particular on all matters in the social field not covered by specialized inter-governmental agencies;

(b) to advise the Council on practical measures that may be needed in the social field;

(c) to advise the Council on measures needed for the co-ordination of activities in the social field;

(d) to advise the Council on such international agreements and conventions on any of these matters, as may be required, and on their execution;

(e) to report to the Council on the extent to which the recommendations of the United Nations in the field of social policy are being carried out.

The Council also referred the following matters to the Social Commission:

(a) The observations of the Temporary Social Commission concerning provision needed in the social welfare field included in section XI of its report, and its suggestions as to methods by which such work might be carried on are referred to the Social Commission for early study and recommendation to the Economic and Social Council.

(b) The observations and recommendations concerning the activities of the League of Nations in the social field included in Section XIV of the report of the Temporary Social Commission are referred to the Social Commission with the request that, in the light of conditions prevailing in the post-war world

(i) it consider the best way of carrying on the functions undertaken by the League with reference to traffic in women and children and all measures designed to prevent such traffic;

(ii) it consider how work in the child welfare field can be effectively carried out, in co-operation with those international organizations which are concerned with particular aspects of these problems, and take steps to create a sub-commission especially constituted for work in the child welfare field;

(iii) it consider how effective machinery can be developed for studying on a wide international basis the means for the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders, undertake consultation with the International Penal and Penitentiary Commission, and recommend a scheme by which work on this whole subject can be fruitfully dealt with on a broad international basis in close association with other social problems.

(c) The observations of the Temporary Social Commission in section XV of its report concerning social problems requiring immediate attention, especially problems in countries directly affected by war or under enemy occupation to which first priority should be given and in countries which are under-developed, are referred to the Social Commission with the request that it give special attention to these problems and particularly to the urgent need for finding some way of dealing with the important aspects of the work of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, mentioned in the report, after it is brought to a close. The Social Commission is also asked to consider the desirability of setting up international machinery in the fields of housing and town and country planning.

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of eighteen Members of the United Nations selected by the Council.

At its third session, the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

For two years
Czechoslovakia
France
Greece
Union of South Africa
U.S.S.R.
United States

For three years
Colombia
Netherlands
New Zealand
Peru United Kingdom
Yugoslavia

For four years
Canada
China
Denmark
Ecuador
Iraq
Poland

c. First Session of Social Commission

The Social Commission held its first session at Lake Success, New York, from January 20 to February 4, 1947, and elected the following as its officers:

Chairman — Frantisek Kraus
(Czechoslovakia)
Vice-Chairman — David Wilson
(New Zealand)
Rapporteur — Henry Hauck (France)

The Commission took note, as being either directly or indirectly within its terms of reference, of various subjects falling under the headings of: the standard of living; social services; and social policy applying to special areas. It also approved suggestions made by the Secretariat under which the Secretariat would include in a periodical report to the Commission all the documentary material necessary to enable the Commission to advise the Economic and Social Council.

The Commission considered the transfer to the United Nations of the activities, powers and functions formerly exercised by the League of Nations relating to the traffic in women and children, the prevention of crime and treatment of offenders, and child welfare.

2. TEMPORARY SOCIAL WELFARE COMMITTEE

The Economic and Social Council had recommended to the Commission the establishment of a sub-commission on child welfare. The Commission decided to establish a Temporary Social Welfare Committee to determine the best method of providing for work in the field of child welfare and in particular to consider whether a sub-commission should be constituted in the near future, how it should be composed and what terms of reference it should have. The Committee was to submit a report containing concrete proposals to the Commission's next session. The Commission felt that certain other unresolved questions relating to social welfare might be referred to the Temporary Social Welfare Committee.

While the Commission felt that the primary responsibility of the sub-commission on child welfare would be to develop and put into action a general long-range program on behalf of the children of the world, whereas the International Children's Emergency Fund had been created for the benefit of children and countries affected by the war, it recommended that the Temporary Committee should consider the desirability of including in the sub-commission's terms of reference certain particularly urgent matters:

- a. welfare of child war victims, especially in the devastated countries (material, juridical, social and moral welfare measures); practical international mutual aid;
- b. welfare and re-education of children, physically or mentally handicapped, or in moral danger (furnishing of suitable equipment and model institutions);
- c. organization of child welfare work in insufficiently equipped countries.

The Temporary Committee was also to consider how far the study of measures to be taken for the development of a social sense and a spirit of national and international mutual aid amongst the young should be included in the sub-commission's terms of reference.

The Secretariat, the Commission recommended, should proceed immediately to carry on necessary research and provide necessary advisory services to governments and international agencies, relative to activities in the field of child welfare. This recommendation was approved by the Council.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session approved the setting up of the Temporary Welfare Committee and the composition and functions assigned to it.

The Commission suggested a program of future activities for the Secretariat, including a report on how far the various social questions were being studied by the International Labour Office, and measures of co-operation with specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations. The Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General, after consultation with the appropriate specialized agencies and inter-governmental organizations, to report to a future session of the Social Commission on the extent to which social questions within the terms of reference of the Social Commission had been or were being studied by the specialized agencies and inter-governmental organizations and to suggest appropriate measures to enable the Commission effectively to carry out the tasks entrusted to it—in particular the study of standards of living in under-developed countries and areas.

The Temporary Social Welfare Committee met at Lake Success from February 4 to 18, 1947, and from April 16 to 24. Its third session opened on June 30. The report of the Committee was to be submitted to the next session of the Social Commission.

3. SOCIAL WELFARE SERVICE

a. Program of Work

The Commission considered that while certain sectors of the social field came within the province of specialized agencies, welfare work was not within the competence of any agency and should receive special attention from the Commission. It considered particularly: training of social welfare staff, protection of children and adolescents, and transfer to the United Nations of the urgent and important advisory functions exercised by UNRRA in the field of social welfare.

The Commission recognized that the improvement of social welfare services depended essentially on the existence of specially trained staff to administer these services. It believed that the Division of Social Questions should be adequately staffed with technicians experienced in the administration of welfare services, with a view to advising governments in drawing up their national programs in the social sphere. It also believed that there should be supplementary staff to furnish the necessary technical service in connection with the transfer of welfare services from UNRRA and to assist in the administration of important national and international relief and reconstruction programs.

The Commission requested the Temporary Social Welfare Committee established by it to give priority to developing an emergency program to meet urgent needs. Such a program should include (1) consultation to governments on developing training programs; (2) the provision of fellowships to give experienced staff an opportunity to observe new methods in other countries; and (3) the supplying of technical literature. Financial provision was made for continuing these activities under the United Nations. The Commission agreed that the Secretariat should assume the functions exercised by the League of Nations as regards the training of qualified social service personnel, but thought the Secretariat should assume a more positive role than had the League. It thought that a long-range program should include: (1) assistance to governments on the development of training programs; (2) the permanent establishment of an international exchange of students (fellows) and instructors in schools of social work along the lines of the fellowship program being taken over by the United Nations from UNRRA.

In discussing the report of the Social Commission certain members of the Economic and Social Council stressed the importance of avoiding overlapping with the work of the specialized agencies, in particular of the ILO. The representative of the ILO outlined some of the work of the Organisation in the social field, and stressed its willingness to co-operate with the United Nations. Certain members of the Council felt that the recommendations of the Commission were too broad, in particular the recommendations for training social workers.

The Council at its fourth session requested the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the specialized agencies concerned:

1. To arrange for a study of:

- (a) methods of social welfare administration at present in use in different countries;
- (b) methods of furnishing advice and information and providing experts for countries which request such assistance, with a view to helping them to organize the administration of their social services, including the training of social workers; and
- (c) how a long-term training programme of assistance to Governments may be developed, and how international training fellowships may be established.

2. To submit a report to the Social Commission and to the Council on items (b) and (c) above at the next session and item (a) at a subsequent session.

b. Transfer of Welfare Activities of UNRRA

The Council of UNRRA at its meeting in Geneva in August 1946, passed Resolution No. 95, which stated:

WHEREAS UNRRA is now performing functions in the social welfare field such as those concerned with the problems of undernourished and orphaned children, the maimed and the handicapped, the training of skilled personnel, materials and equipment for community services;

WHEREAS the Council is of the view that international action in regard to certain of these functions will be necessary beyond the present emergency period;

WHEREAS the Council has taken note of the establishment by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations of a permanent Social Commission to advise the Economic and Social Council, inter alia, of requirements in the field of social welfare and methods by which such requirements may be met; it is therefore RESOLVED:

1. That the Director-General consult with the appropriate authorities of the United Nations with a view to considering the desirability of transferring to the United Nations the functions being performed by UNRRA in the field of social welfare exclusive of those relating to displaced persons.
2. That the Director-General is authorized to transfer to the United Nations such of those functions now being performed by UNRRA in the social welfare field as the United Nations desires to undertake.
3. That the Director-General is further authorized to transfer to the United Nations from time to time any available records, equipment, materials and personnel of use in the performance of the above-mentioned functions, which the United Nations may desire.

The social welfare functions undertaken by UNRRA, whose continuation by the United Nations was recommended, fell under five headings:

1. Training of social welfare personnel;
2. Rehabilitation of the physically handicapped;
3. Restoration of social welfare activities and institutions;
4. Co-ordination of the activities of voluntary agencies;
5. Child welfare.

After considering the questions raised by the UNRRA Resolution, the Council passed on October 1, 1946, the following Resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKING NOTE of the following resolution adopted at the Fifth UNRRA Council Session in August 1946: Resolution No. 95 on social welfare activities of UNRRA, relating to the desirability of transferring to the United Nations functions being performed by UNRRA in the field of social welfare exclusive of those relating to displaced persons,

1. REQUESTS the Secretary-General with a view to the assumption by the United Nations of certain urgent and important advisory functions in the field of social welfare carried on by UNRRA, special consideration being given to the needs of children:

(a) to consult immediately with the Director-General of UNRRA;

(b) to undertake such studies and investigations and formulate such recommendations as he may deem necessary to assist in reaching a conclusion concerning measures that might be undertaken by the United Nations;

(c) to submit recommendations to the General Assembly regarding any matters requiring its authorization or special financial provisions;

(d) to take such other action as he deems desirable in the light of the abovementioned consultations, studies and investigations and in the light of any action that may have been taken by the General Assembly;

(e) to report on the action taken to the Social Commission at its first session.

2. REQUESTS the Social Commission at its first session to make recommendations for continued action required to carry on essential functions performed by UNRRA in the field of social welfare.

The General Assembly on December 14 passed a resolution¹ providing for funds for four types of services:

- a. expert consultation to governments on welfare services;
- b. fellowships for training of officials in social welfare;
- c. advice, demonstration and instruction in connection with the manufacture of prosthetic appliances, training of handicapped persons and furnishing demonstration equipment;
- d. furnishing technical publications.

The Commission recommended that conferences should be held between the Secretariat and governments receiving UNRRA services and other governments which requested services, on the following points: (1) the number and type of experts requested; (2) selection of candidates for fellowships; (3) local services available to demonstration units; (4) specific type of literature needed and translations required.

The Commission believed that while special consideration should be given to providing advisory social welfare services to those countries which were victims of aggression, and particularly to those which were Members of the United Nations and which had been receiving UNRRA assistance, the basic principle should be that of the need of each country for welfare services. This basic principle was endorsed by the Economic and Social Council.

The Social Commission invited the Temporary Social Welfare Committee to consider:

a. development of criteria for use in reviewing requests from the various governments for advisory welfare services;

b. formulating and recommending to the Social Commission the manner in which the advisory welfare services and activities of a sub-commission on child welfare should be associated with a general long-term program of United Nations activities in the social field, including the question of staff training; and to submit a report containing its recommendations to the Commission's next session.

It invited the Secretariat:

(a) to deal with urgent work connected with social services, such as assumption of the advisory functions performed in this field by UNRRA (Resolution A/255 adopted by the General Assembly on 14 December 1946).

(b) to study the methods of social welfare administration at present in operation in the various countries, and to report to the Commission thereon.

(c) to furnish advice, information and experts in response to requests from countries, in order to assist them in the organization of the administration of their social services, including the training of social work personnel.

The Economic and Social Council authorized the Secretary-General, in co-operation, where appropriate, with the specialized agencies concerned, within the limits of their importance:

(a) to undertake the functions formerly exercised by the League of Nations in the field of child welfare and social services;

(b) to deal with urgent work connected with social services, such as assumption of the advisory functions performed in this field by UNRRA.

4. PROTECTION OF CHILDREN AND ADOLESCENTS

a. Review of Developments in the Field

The Social Commission reviewed new developments in the field of child welfare, and the activities of the League of Nations in this field. It felt that the United Nations should carry on the League child welfare activities, but with a more affirmative approach. The Council approved the recommendation to carry on the child welfare activities of the League pending a more definite recommendation for action by the Social Commission.

The Commission also considered the report of the International Children's Emergency Fund, and, as authorized by the General Assembly, recommended to the Economic and Social Council certain principles for the operation of the Fund.

b. International Children's Emergency Fund

The Council of UNRRA at its August, 1946, meeting in Geneva passed Resolution No. 103 relating to the rehabilitation of the children and adolescents of countries which were victims of aggression. The Council of UNRRA considered that this problem was one of paramount importance for the recovery of these countries and that international assistance in dealing with this problem was desirable. The Council of UNRRA recommended the creation of an International Children's Fund and set up a Standing Committee to prepare the necessary recommendations in agreement with the United Nations.

The Economic and Social Council passed the following resolution on September 30, 1946:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, taking note of Resolution 103 adopted at the Fifth Session of the Council of UNRRA in August 1946, which contemplates the creation of an International Children's Emergency Fund to be utilized for the benefit of children and adolescents of countries which were the victims of aggression, and which set up a Standing Committee of the Council of UNRRA to prepare recommendations in agreement with the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations with a view to the establishment of international machinery for the administration of such a fund,

RECOMMENDS

1. That the General Assembly arrange, during the second part of the first session, for the creation of an International Children's Emergency Fund, subject to the control of the Economic and Social Council. Such fund shall consist of any assets made available by UNRRA and of any voluntary contribution made available by governments, voluntary agencies, individuals and other sources, and shall be utilized to the extent of its available resources for the benefit of children and adolescents of countries which were victims of aggression and in order to assist in their rehabilitation.

2. That the Secretary-General prepare in consultation with the Director-General of UNRRA, the President of the Economic and Social Council, and the UNRRA Standing Committee on the Rehabilitation of Children and Adolescents, a draft resolution for transmission to the General Assembly establishing the necessary international machinery for this purpose.

On the basis of the recommendations of the Council the General Assembly established an International Children's Emergency Fund.¹

The Executive Board of the Fund, consisting of representatives of Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Byelorussian S.S.R., Canada, China, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, France, Greece, Iraq, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Poland, Sweden, the Ukrainian S.S.R., Union of South Africa, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom, the United States and Yugoslavia,² held its first meeting on December 19, 1946, and elected as Chairman Dr. Ludwik Rajchman, the representative of Poland.

On January 8, 1947, the Secretary-General, after consultation with the Board, appointed Maurice Pate (United States) as Executive Director of the Fund. The general services of the United Nations Secretariat were placed at the Fund's disposal.

The Executive Board laid down the Fund's tasks as being:

1. To collect funds,
2. To ascertain the needs of children and adolescents,
3. To draw up programs of action.

An initial contribution of $550,000 was made to the Fund through the Director-General of UNRRA. This represented a contribution made by voluntary agencies and private individuals in the United States. The conditions attached to the gift were that it should be used only for the purchase of food for indigent children and adolescents.

It was not possible, until the UNRRA Central Committee met, to estimate the amount which would become available to the Fund from UNRRA resources. The Executive Board felt that the major part of the resources of the Fund would have to come from contributions made directly by governments and decided to make an appeal to governments for financial aid, and also to study, in co-operation with voluntary agencies, other special means for raising funds. The work of voluntary agencies was to be encouraged.

It would be necessary for each government qualified for assistance to submit proposals, together with the necessary information. The Fund would then be able to make recommendations. These recommendations would fall under the headings: (a) food; (b) special assistance to institutions for the benefit of children and adolescents; and (c) training of personnel.

The Board established the following Committees and Sub-Committees: Program Committee; Sub-Committee of representatives of Latin-America; Committee to review the milk problem; Sub-Committee on finance; Sub-Committee to draw up rules of procedure of the Fund.

The Social Commission at its first session noted with approval the report of the Executive Board, and, as provided in the resolution establishing the Fund, made recommendations to the Economic and Social Council on the principles of operation of the Fund.

These principles were adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session, as follows:

A. Scope of programs

Within the scope of the operations of the Fund, as set forth in the General Assembly resolution No. 59 (I) of 11 December 1946, priorities shall be given to the following types of work:

1. Supplementing the essential food and other supplies needed to alleviate malnutrition and disease in the children of the countries enumerated in paragraph 1 of the General Assembly resolution No. 57 (I) of 11 December 1946, and to safeguard the health of expectant and nursing mothers.
2. Encouraging the re-establishment of children's institutions and services destroyed by the war, aiding in such re-establishment through supplying essential clothing and shoes and the furnishing of cod-liver oil or substitutes, as well as medical supplies.

A. Co-operation of the United Nations and the World Health Organization in giving assistance for fellowships for the training of health and welfare personnel for children's work.

B. Relation of emergency measures to existing problems

Emergency measures shall be so developed and administered as to utilize and strengthen the permanent child health and child welfare programmes of the countries receiving assistance and promote effective co-ordination of official and voluntary services.

C. Relation to other activities

The Fund shall maintain close relations with other relief agencies and in particular with the other activities of the United Nations, including appropriate specialized agencies and the Department of Social Affairs especially staff assigned in accordance with the General Assembly resolution with reference to advisory welfare services performed by UNRRA (document A/255).

D. Co-operation with Governments

The Fund shall not engage in any activity in any country except in consultation with, and with the consent of, the Government concerned.

E. Staff

Provision shall be made for the technical staff needed to ensure effective operation of the Fund, and to supply the technical services necessary to achieve its objectives.

F. Information required

Governments requesting assistance will submit proposals giving information required by the Executive Board or a committee thereof, as to need for assistance and methods by which the programme will be carried out. Such proposals should show how the following requirements will be met:

1. Provision for proper and efficient administration of the program.
2. Utilization, so far as possible, of existing official and voluntary agencies, with provision made for co-ordination of the services of all agencies utilized in carrying out the programme for which assistance is requested.
3. Assurance that supplies and services under the programme will be equitably dispensed or distributed on the basis of need without discrimination on the basis of race, creed, nationality status, or political belief.
4. Provision for reports for such periods and containing such information as the Executive Board may require.

G. Reports to the Economic and Social Council

Reports submitted by the International Children's Emergency Fund should include an annual report and interim reports to each session of the Council in 1947 and 1948. So far as possible, these reports shall be considered by the Social Commission prior to their consideration by the Council.

The Economic and Social Council on March 18 elected Switzerland as a member of the Executive Board of the Fund, and approved the allocation to the Fund of the receipts of the "One Day's Pay" Collection.

On May 31 the United States authorized contributions to the Fund up to the amount of $15,000,000, and further contributions up to a maximum of $40,000,000, provided that in the case of amounts above $15,000,000, they did not constitute more than 57 per cent of the aggregate amount contributed to the Fund by governments not receiving assistance from it.

The report of the Program Committee was adopted at the ninth meeting of the Executive Board on June 19, 1947. The Board decided that the following elements should be considered in determining relative needs:

1. The proportion of undernourished children in each country.
2. The number of homeless and orphaned children in each country in need of care.
3. The capacity of a country to meet its own needs out of its currently available resources.
4. The extent and duration of deprivation of the children of each country experienced during the war.
5. The extent of wartime destruction of children's institutions in each country.
6. The extent to which other international relief supplies are available for the same or similar purposes.

The Executive Board also took the following decisions:

1. All countries eligible for assistance under the General Assembly Resolution will, upon application to the Fund and completion of an agreement between the Fund and the government concerned, receive aid from the Fund.
2. The Executive Director was authorized to proceed with the procurement of supplies out of the $560,000 on hand—composed of $550,000 donated to the Fund through the former Director-General of UNRRA, and approximately $10,000 obtained from individual donors.

3. The Executive Director was authorized to procure supplies as soon as the $15,000,000, or any part of it, authorized by the United States Congress, was made available to the Fund, and out of any other sums made available by governments.

4. The Executive Director was authorized to negotiate with applicant governments to provide supplies of milk, fats, cocoa, etc. in the following countries for approximately six months to the following number of children:

Austria	240,000
Albania
Czechoslovakia	240,000
Finland
Hungary
China	700,000
France	70,000
Greece	340,000
Italy	360,000
Poland	700,000
Yugoslavia	600,000
Total	3,250,000

Shipments were to begin as soon as supplies were available, but the total value of supplies was not to exceed 60 per cent of the total dollar value of the resources available to the Fund. The initial distribution was to provide for approximately 200 calories on an average, but this was not to be a precedent for future allocations. The Executive Director was to report to the Program Committee on these shipments and make proposals for any necessary changes arising out of discussions with the recipient governments.

5. TRAFFIC IN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

The Secretariat was instructed to consider suitable measures for an effective campaign against the traffic in women and children and the provisions to be contemplated for the prevention and suppression of prostitution, and to report to the Commission at its next session. It was to get into touch with the Commission Internationale de la Police Criminelle with a view to co-ordinating their respective efforts.

The Commission recommended that the necessary steps should be taken to transfer to the United Nations the Conventions of September 30, 1921, and October 11, 1933, for the Suppression of Traffic in Women and Children, and the Convention of September 12, 1923, for the Suppression of the Circulation of and Traffic in Obscene Publications. The Commission recommended that the procedure which had been followed in transferring to the United Nations the functions exercised by the League under Conventions on Narcotic Drugs should be followed.

The Secretariat was also instructed to examine the 1937 draft convention regarding the exploitation of the prostitution of others and make any necessary amendments in view of changes in the general situation since 1937. It was also to ascertain from governments whether the convention as amended was likely to meet with their approval. The Commission would consider the proposed amendments at its next session and decide whether the draft convention should be sent to governments.

The Secretariat was also instructed to report on the possibility of implementing the proposal of the League of Nations for the establishment of an Eastern Bureau to take the necessary measures for the suppression of the traffic in women and children in those areas, and the need for other regional bureaus. These recommendations were adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session.

6. PREVENTION OF CRIME AND TREATMENT OF OFFENDERS

The Commission requested the Secretariat to submit a report on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders, showing which suggestions were suitable for international action and how they could be carried out. This request was endorsed by the Council. The Commission decided by 11 votes to 1, with 3 abstentions, not to enter into consultations with the International Penal and Penitentiary Commission, as previously recommended by the Council, so long as this Commission had not severed its relations with the Franco government. The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session approved this action of the Social Commission.

7. ASSISTANCE TO INDIGENT FOREIGNERS

On the recommendation of the Commission, the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session requested the Secretary-General, within the limits of his resources:

(a) to collect from governments the most recent information regarding their administrative practices with respect to assistance to indigent foreigners;

(b) to report to the Social Commission at a future session on the extent to which the Model Convention on Assistance to Indigent Foreigners and Recommendations on Assistance to Indigent Foreigners approved by the Council of the League of Nations at its 101st Session (May 1938) correspond to the exigencies of the present situation and the changes, if any, which should be made.

8. HOUSING AND TOWN PLANNING

The General Assembly on December 14, 1946, recommended to the Economic and Social Council:

That it instruct the appropriate Commissions to expedite their study of housing problems, with special reference to the organization and unification of international exchanges of information relating, in particular, to town planning principles, building techniques and the climatic, economic and financial, legal and legislative aspects of housing and town planning questions; and to consider the desirability of holding an international conference of experts to advise on the need for establishing an international mechanism to collate such information, lay down guiding principles for new technical research on materials, methods of use and prefabrication, and to define standards capable of general application.

The question was considered by the Economic and Employment Commission and the Social Commission at their first sessions. The Chairmen of the two Commissions arrived at an agreement that the Social Commission should undertake to formulate the demand side of the problem, keeping in mind the importance of viewing housing needs in relation to other urgent needs and working out a priority schedule on a quantitative basis. It would then become the responsibility of the Economic and Employment Commission to consider other economic aspects of housing.

The Economic and Employment Commission deferred consideration of the question pending its consideration by the Social Commission. At its second session the Economic and Employment Commission designated an observer to attend the session of the Social Commission when the discussion of the conference of experts on housing took place.

The Social Commission in its discussions drew a distinction between:

a. the needs of the war-devastated areas whose inhabitants had been brutally deprived of their homes and were therefore entitled to priority rights;

b. the needs of the less developed parts of the world, where extensive town planning and building programs ought to be undertaken and combined with economic and social reform.

The Commission recommended the setting up of a housing and town planning service in the Secretariat, and the calling of an international conference of experts on housing and town planning. The New Zealand representative felt that the convening of an international conference was a premature step, and the Netherlands representative thought that the problem should be dealt with by a regional conference.

The importance of a study of housing problems and the value of an international exchange of opinion on such problems was emphasized in the Council's discussions on the question, but some representatives expressed doubt as to the necessity for setting up a permanent international agency. On the basis of resolutions proposed by France and the United States, the Council at its fourth session adopted the following resolution:

Taking into account the resolution of the General Assembly of 14 December 1946,¹ on housing and town planning, and the reports of the Social Commission and of the Economic and Employment Commission,

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

1. INSTRUCTS the Social Commission in collaboration with the Economic and Employment Commission to continue its study of housing problems in close co-operation with each other and with specialized agencies and other inter-governmental organizations concerned with these problems;

2. INSTRUCTS the Secretary-General in co-operation with the specialized agencies and inter-governmental organizations to arrange for a study of housing problems for further consideration by the Social Commission in collaboration with the Economic and Employment Commission, and requests him to make the necessary arrangements to provide facilities which will include the collection and dissemination in the appropriate form of information relating to rural and urban housing and town planning and to report thereon to the Social and Economic and Employment Commissions; and

3. DIRECTS the Secretary-General to submit to the Social Commission a proposal regarding an international conference of experts on housing, including a statement of objectives, scope and composition. In the light of such a proposal the Social Commission in collaboration with the Economic and Employment Commission shall submit recommendations to an early session of the Council as to what further action should be taken.

O. FUNDAMENTAL HUMAN RIGHTS

1. COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS

At its first session, the Council established a Commission on Human Rights in nuclear form, to report on the functions and scope of work of the projected Commission on Human Rights. The nuclear Commission fully realized the great importance of the task entrusted to it under the Charter of the United Nations. The examination of documents submitted by Members of the United Nations led to a general discussion on the necessity of achieving and promoting the recognition of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, in the hope of drawing from the last World War the lessons which would aid the peoples to achieve the highest aspirations of mankind. Moreover, the nuclear Commission paid special attention to plans and suggestions presented to it through hearings by qualified representatives of national and international organizations. It recommended that the full Commission should draft an International Bill of Rights and that the draft, as completed by the full Commission, should be circulated among the Governments of the United Nations for their suggestions.

a. Terms of Reference

The Council considered the recommendations of the nuclear Commission during its second session, and adopted for the full Commission the terms of reference of the "nuclear" Commission with the addition of paragraph (e) below, as follows:

The work of the Commission shall be directed towards submitting proposals, recommendations and reports to the Council regarding:

- (a) an international bill of rights;
- (b) international declarations or conventions on civil liberties, the status of women, freedom of information and similar matters;
- (c) the protection of minorities;
- (d) the prevention of discrimination on grounds of race, sex, language or religion;
- (e) any other matter concerning human rights not covered by items (a), (b), (c), and (d).

The importance of regional conferences of experts was emphasized by the nuclear Commission, and in this connection reference was made to the Inter-American Conference on Problems of War and Peace held in Mexico City in March 1945. On the recommendation of the nuclear Commission, the Council decided that the full Commission be authorized to call in ad hoc working groups of non-governmental experts in specialized fields, or individual experts, without further reference to the Council but with the approval of the President of the Council and the Secretary-General.

On the recommendation of the nuclear Commission, the Council decided that the Secretary-General should be requested to make arrangements for the compilation and publication of a yearbook on law and usage relating to human rights, the collection and publication of information on the activities concerning human rights of all organs of the United Nations, the collection and publication of information concerning human rights arising from the Nürnberg and Tokyo trials of war criminals, and the collection and publication of plans and declarations on human rights by specialized agencies and non-governmental national and international organizations.

The Council also decided that, pending the United Nations should be invited to consider the desirability of establishing information groups or local human rights committees within their respective countries to collaborate with them in furthering the work of the Commission on Human Rights.

The Council also decided that, pending the adoption of an international bill of rights, the general principle should be accepted that international treaties involving basic human rights, including to the fullest extent practicable treaties of peace, should conform to the fundamental standards relative to such rights set forth in the Charter.

The nuclear Commission felt that the promotion and observance of human rights, as defined in the Charter of the United Nations, could be fulfilled only if provisions were made for the implementation of the observance of human rights and of an international bill of rights. The nuclear Commission suggested that, pending the eventual establishment of an agency of implementation, the Commission on Human Rights should be recognized as qualified to aid the appropriate organs of the United Nations. The Council decided to request the Commission on Human Rights "to submit at an early date suggestions regarding the ways and means for the effective implementation of human rights and fundamental freedoms, with a view to assisting the Economic and Social Council in working out arrangements for such implementation with other appropriate organs of the United Nations."

The Council decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of eighteen Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session, the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

For two years	For three years
Byelorussian S.S.R.	Egypt
China	France
Lebanon	India
Panama	Iran
United Kingdom	Ukrainian S.S.R.
Uruguay	U.S.S.R.
For four years
Australia Belgium
Chile
Philippine Republic
United States
Yugoslavia

b. First Session

The Commission on Human Rights held its first session from January 27 to February 10, 1947, and elected the following as its officers:

Chairman—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt
 Vice-Chairman—Dr. P. C. Chang
 Rapporteur—Dr. Charles Malik

The Commission considered the question of the International Bill of Human Rights, the membership and functions of the Sub-Commissions on Freedom of Information and of the Press and on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, and the procedure for dealing with communications concerning human rights.

2. INTERNATIONAL BILL OF HUMAN RIGHTS

a. Drafting Group

The Commission decided that the Chairman, with the Vice-Chairman and Rapporteur, should, with the assistance of the Secretariat, formulate a preliminary draft International Bill of Human Rights to be submitted to the Commission at its next session. In drafting the Bill, the Chairman could enlist the co-operation of any member of the Commission, and the Commission could consult experts chosen with the consent of their governments and any person or document it thought relevant to its work. The drafting group was to study an Australian proposal which had been submitted to the Commission for the establishment of an International Court of Human Rights. It was also to take into consideration the views expressed by the Commission on what should be included in the International Bill of Human Rights. These included such personal rights as the right of personal freedom, freedom of religion, of opinion, of speech, information, assembly and association, and safeguards for persons accused of crime; such social rights as the right of security, the right to employment, education, food, medical care and the right to property; and political rights such as the right to citizenship and the right of citizens to participate in the government; and the right to equality without distinction.

Members of the Commission also expressed the view that the constitutions of Member States should be taken into account; that the Bill should be acceptable to all Members of the United Nations; that it should be short, simple, easy to understand and expressive; and that it should be a reaffirmation of the most elementary rights.

The Commission felt that the draft Bill should be submitted to it by the drafting group as a draft resolution for presentation to the General Assembly.

b. Drafting Committee

When the Commission's Report was considered at the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council, certain members expressed the view that the drafting group should be enlarged and should include the representatives of the European countries. The Social Committee of the Council proposed that the members of the Commission for Australia, Chile, China, France and the U.S.S.R. should, with the members for the United States, Lebanon and the United Kingdom, form a Temporary Sub-Commission to draw up a preliminary draft of an International Bill of Human Rights on the basis of documentation supplied by the Secretary-General. The Chairman of the Commission on Human Rights on March 24, 1947, wrote to the President of the Economic and Social Council stating that in view of the suggestions of the Social Committee she intended to appoint a drafting committee consisting of the members of the Commission for Australia, Chile, China, France, Lebanon, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States.

This was noted with approval by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session. The Council requested the Secretariat to prepare a documented outline concerning an International Bill of Rights, on the basis of which the Drafting Committee was to draw up its preliminary draft, to be submitted to the second session of the Commission on Human Rights.

The Council decided:

(a) that the draft prepared by the above-mentioned drafting committee be submitted to the second session of the Commission on Human Rights; and

(b) that the draft as developed by the Commission on Human Rights be submitted to all States Members of the United Nations for their observations, suggestions and proposals; and

(c) that these observations, suggestions and proposals then be considered as a basis of a re-draft, if necessary by the drafting committee; and

(d) that the resulting draft then be submitted to the Commission on Human Rights for final consideration; and

(e) that the Council consider the proposed international bill of human rights as submitted by the Commission on Human Rights with a view to recommending an international bill of human rights to the General Assembly in 1948; and further

(f) that the Commission on Human Rights invite the officers of the Commission on the Status of Women, the Chairman, the Vice-Chairman and the Rapporteur, to be present and participate without vote in its deliberations when sections of the draft of the international bill of human rights concerning the particular rights of women are being considered.

The Council, pursuant to the resolution of the General Assembly of December 11, 1946, decided to transmit to the Drafting Committee of the Commission on Human Rights and to the Commission the Declaration on Fundamental Human Rights and Freedoms presented by the delegation of Panama, and any other draft declarations received from Member States.

It also transmitted a draft resolution submitted by the World Federation of Trade Unions on "Guarantees for the Exercise and Development of Trade Union Rights" and a memorandum and draft resolution submitted by the American Federation of Labor on the Guarantees for the Exercise and Development of Trade Union Rights to the Commission on Human Rights "in order that it may consider those aspects of the subject which might appropriately form part of the bill or declaration on human rights."

c. First Session of Drafting Committee

The Drafting Committee held its first session from June 9 to June 25, 1947. Its discussions were based on a draft outline prepared by the Secretariat, which included the rights mentioned in various national constitutions and in various suggestions for an International Bill of Human Rights. The Committee also had before it a draft bill of rights proposed by the United Kingdom and certain United States proposals for the re-wording of some items appearing in the Secretariat outline. A representative of UNESCO and consultants from the American Federation of Labor and the International Co-operative Alliance attended the Committee's meeting.

Two views were expressed in the Committee on the form which a preliminary draft might take: that it should take the form of a declaration or manifesto; or that there should also be a convention. The Drafting Committee therefore decided to attempt to prepare two documents, one a working paper outlining a declaration or manifesto setting forth general principles, and the second a working paper containing suggestions as to the contents of one or more conventions flowing from these principles to which Member nations might adhere.

A draft declaration containing a preamble and 44 suggested articles was prepared by Professor Cassin at the request of a temporary working group of the Committee, composed of the Chairman and the representatives of France, Lebanon, and the United Kingdom. The draft declaration was then revised by the temporary working group, and after having been considered in detail by the Committee was again revised by Professor Cassin. The Drafting Committee, after further examining the draft, submitted it to the Commission on Human Rights as a working paper for a preliminary draft of an International Manifesto or Declaration on Human Rights.

The representatives of the United Kingdom, the Lebanon, and the Chairman were asked independently to go over the Secretariat outline and the United Kingdom draft to determine which articles could readily lend themselves to a convention. They agreed that the articles in the convention part of the United Kingdom draft could be submitted to the Commission on Human Rights as forming part of a draft convention, with the addition of the three following subjects:

(a) torture, physical integrity and cruel punishments;

(b) the right to a legal personality; and

(c) the right of asylum.

After discussion, the Drafting Committee suggested that the United Kingdom proposal should form a basis for a draft convention which the Commission on Human Rights might want to elaborate.

The members of the Drafting Committee felt that implementation of the bill might take two forms: (1) some form of punishment of an offending state, the proposals for such punishment ranging from a public request for information concerning the alleged violation to trial before an international tribunal; (2) action on the part of the United Nations and the Member States to educate the peoples of the world with regard to human rights and to create conditions under which respect for and promotion of human rights would be secured. The view was expressed that the only practicable compulsory form of implementation would be an international convention ratified or adhered to by Member Governments. It was thought that the possibility might be studied of creating, within the framework of the United Nations, an organization to receive, sift, examine and deal with communications alleging the violation of human rights, and it was suggested that the Commission on Human Rights might be granted greater responsibility in this field.

3. SUB-COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF INFORMATION AND OF THE PRESS

The Commission on Human Rights at its first session decided to establish a Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press, as empowered by the Economic and Social Council.

It recommended to the Council the terms of reference of the Sub-Commission. It decided that the Sub-Commission should be composed of twelve persons, selected by the Commission in consultation with the Secretary-General and subject to the consent of the governments of which the persons were nationals, that not more than one person be selected from any single country, and that the terms of members should be, in the first instance, one year, subject to reconsideration by the Commission before the end of that period. As the Commission had not had time to select the members of the Sub-Commission, it recommended that they should be selected by the Council from lists of persons submitted by such Human Rights Commission members as cared to make nominations, each member nominating not more than twelve persons from Members of the United Nations.

The Council appointed the members of the Sub-Commission, subject to the consent of their governments, and resolved that the functions of the Sub-Commission should be:

(a) In the first instance, to examine what rights, obligations and practices should be included in the concept of freedom of information and to report to the Commission on Human Rights on any issues that may arise from such examination;

(b) To perform any other functions which may be entrusted to it by the Economic and Social Council or by the Commission on Human Rights.

The U.S.S.R. and Czechoslovakian representatives expressed the view that the Sub-Commission should not be composed of experts but of governmental representatives.

Following the General Assembly's resolution on the calling of an International Conference on Freedom of Information¹, the Commission on Human Rights recommended that the Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press should submit recommendations regarding the program of that Conference and assist in its preparation.

The Economic and Social Council requested: the Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press:

to prepare, guided by resolution No. 59 (1) of 14 December 1946 of the General Assembly, a draft documented agenda for the Conference on Freedom of Information, and to submit this along with proposals concerning preparations for the Conference to the Commission on Human Rights and to the Council. These proposals shall include suggestions concerning the invitation of States, not Members of the United Nations, and plans whereby appropriate specialized agencies, such as the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, and appropriate non-governmental organizations may assist in the preparation of the Conference and attend it.

The Council decided to transmit to the Sub-Commission the draft agenda for the Conference presented by the delegation of France, and any other similar communications received from Member States. It recommended the Sub-Commission to invite a representative of the International Organization of Journalists to be present as an observer at its meetings for purposes of consultation.

It decided that the decision on the date and place of the Conference be deferred to the fifth session of the Council.

The Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press held its first session from May 19 to June 4, 1947.

It recommended that the Conference should be convoked for March or April 1948, and that it be held in Europe. It recommended that the Conference should not be confined to Members of the United Nations, and that non-member States invited should have full rights of participation and voting. It recommended that the four specialized agencies in relationship with the United Nations, the seven inter-governmental organizations with which relationship was contemplated, the eight non-governmental organizations in Category A, and, in Category B, the International Organization of Journalists should be invited to participate in the Conference, the specialized and inter-governmental organizations being granted a status equivalent to that given them by the Economic and Social Council, and the non-governmental organizations being given a status equivalent to that granted by the Economic and Social Council to organizations in Category A.

The Sub-Commission recommended that delegations should be limited to five delegates, from each State, with five alternates, and advisers as required.

It recommended that the Conference should have a general committee (comprising the President of the Conference, the Vice-Presidents and the Chairmen of the principal committees) and four principal committees on which each delegation would be represented. The first would consider the basic tasks of the Press and other media of mass information, the basic principles of information and general problems common to other committees. The second would be a committee on the gathering and international transmission of information. The third would be a committee on implementation of the rights of all peoples to receive accurate and comprehensive information, and the obligations of the press in this connection. The fourth would be a committee on law and continuing machinery.

The Sub-Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council that the Secretary-General be requested to prepare, in consultation with UNESCO, a written request for information concerning freedom of information, which, after submission to the Commission on Human Rights, would be sent to all Members of the United Nations and all other States invited to the Conference. It recommended that the Secretary-General be requested to prepare the necessary documentation for the Conference.

In the discussions of the formulation of the draft agenda there were fundamental differences of opinion, based on the differences of government controls over the gathering, transmission and dissemination of information. A majority of the Sub-Commission thought that the provisional draft agenda opened the way for wide and useful discussion of all the main points contained in the terms of reference of the Conference, but that all agenda items should be considered only as titles or headings of subjects upon which the Conference might be invited to reach its own conclusions.

Items were listed under the following headings: general discussion on the principles of freedom of information; consideration of certain fundamental principles; measures to facilitate the gathering of information; measures to facilitate international transmission of information; measures to implement the right of all persons and peoples to receive accurate, objective, comprehensive and representative information, and the obligations of the workers of the Press, Radio and Films in this connection; consideration of possible continuing machinery, preferably within the framework of the United Nations, to promote the free flow of true information; consideration of the problems involved in the establishment of information services by governments, groups or persons in order to make information available in countries other than their own; consideration of the possible modes of action by which the recommendations and agreements of the Conference could best be put into effect, whether by resolution of the General Assembly, international conventions, bilateral agreements, acceptance by States of model legislation drafted by the Conference, or other means.

The Sub-Commission began an examination of what rights, obligations and practices should be included in the concept of freedom of information, and adjourned discussion on the question until its next session.

The Sub-Commission requested the Secretary-General to ask the International Telecommunications Union to convey to the Sub-Commission any information it believed would help the work of the Sub-Commission, and to inform the Union that the Sub-Commission hoped the Union would be represented at the International Conference on Freedom of Information.

The Sub-Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council study as an urgent matter the situation in regard to the shortage of newsprint and consider measures to alleviate it.

4. SUB-COMMISSION ON PREVENTION OF DISCRIMINATION AND PROTECTION OF MINORITIES

The Commission on Human Rights decided to establish a Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities instead of creating separate Sub-Commissions on the Protection of Minorities and on the Prevention of Discrimination, as empowered by the Economic and Social Council. It decided that the functions of the Sub-Commission should be:

(a) In the first instance, to examine what provisions should be adopted in the definition of the principles which are to be applied in the field of the prevention of discrimination on grounds of race, sex, language or religion, and in the field of the protection of minorities, and to make recommendations to the Commission on urgent problems in these fields.

(b) To perform any other functions which may be entrusted to it by the Economic and Social Council or the Commission on Human Rights.

It decided that the Sub-Commission should be composed of twelve persons selected by the Commission in consultation with the Secretary-General and subject to the consent of the governments of which the persons were nationals, that not more than one person should be selected from any single country, and that the terms of office of members should, in the first instance, be two years.

The Commission recommended that, as it had not had time to select the members of the Sub-Commission, they should be chosen by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session (in consultation with the Secretary-General and subject to the consent of the governments of the countries of which the persons were nationals) from among lists of persons submitted by such Human Rights Commission members as cared to make nominations, each member nominating not more than twelve persons from Members of the United Nations.

The Economic and Social Council appointed the members of the Sub-Commission, subject to the consent of their governments.

The U.S.S.R. and Czechoslovakian representatives expressed the view that the Sub-Commission should not be composed of governmental representatives and criticized the geographical distribution of its membership, in particular that it contained only one representative from the Central European States and four from Western European countries.

5. COMMUNICATIONS CONCERNING HUMAN RIGHTS

The Commission on Human Rights decided to request the Secretary-General to compile a confidential list of communications received concerning human rights before each session of the Commission, and furnish this to members of the Commission on request, enabling them on request to consult the originals. Writers of communications were to be informed that their communications would be brought to the Commission's attention. The Chairman and Vice-Chairman were to meet shortly before each session of the Commission, with one or two co-opted members, to receive communications and to bring to the Commission's attention those which might assist it in its work.

The Economic and Social Council decided to defer consideration of this question until its fifth session.

6. STATUS OF WOMEN

a. Sub-Commission on the Status of Women

At its first session, the Council established a Sub-Commission of the nuclear Commission on Human Rights, on the Status of Women. The functions of the Sub-Commission were to submit proposals, recommendations and reports to the Commission on Human Rights regarding the status of women. The Sub-Commission was also to submit proposals to the Council, through the Commission on Human Rights, regarding its terms of reference.

There was general agreement among the members that the Sub-Commission should study the status of women in all its aspects and make the broadest possible recommendations to the Commission Human Rights on the scope of the work to be undertaken. Improvements in political, civil, educational, social and economic fields were considered especially important and therefore, the Sub-Commission recommended that these problems should be attacked simultaneously.

The report of the Sub-Commission contained proposals for a program of work which inter alia provided for (1) a survey of laws pertaining to the status of women and the practical application of such legislation, (2) polls to sound public opinion, (3) a forum to hear the view of consultative agents, (4) the calling of a United Nations Women's Conference, (5) the international exchange of all categories of manual and intellectual women workers, (6) the collection of records on women's affairs and (7) the creation of a worldwide public opinion through such media as the press, radio, publications, motion pictures.

The Commission on Human Rights made recommendations to the Council for the establishment of a Sub-Commission of fifteen members. It also recommended that a complete and detailed study of legislation concerning the status of women and its practical application be initiated, taking into account all important alterations that had arisen since the first general inquiries made by the League of Nations.

b. Commission on the Status of Women

The Council, having considered at its second session the reports of the nuclear Commission on Human Rights and of the nuclear Sub-Commission on the Status of Women, decided to confer upon the Sub-Commission the status of a full commission to be known as the Commission on the Status of Women.

The Council agreed that:

The functions of the Commission shall be to prepare recommendations and reports to the Economic and Social Council on promoting women's rights in political, economic, social and educational fields. The Commission shall also make recommendations to the Council on urgent problems requiring immediate attention in the field of women's rights.

The Commission may submit proposals to the Council regarding its terms of reference.

The Council referred Sections I and II of the report of the nuclear Sub-Commission, concerning policy and program, to the Commission on the Status of Women for study.

The Council requested the Secretary-General to make arrangements for a complete and detailed study of all legislation concerning the status of women and the practical application of such legislation.

The Council also decided at its second session that the Commission should consist of one representative from each of fifteen Members of the United Nations selected by the Council. At its third session, the Council selected the following States to designate the initial members:

For two years	For three years
Australia	Mexico
Byelorussian S.S.R.	Syria
China	U.S.S.R.
Guatemala	United Kingdom
India	United States
For four years
Costa Rica
Denmark
France
Turkey
Venezuela

c. First Session of the Commission

The Commission held its first session from February 10 to February 24, 1947. It elected the following as its officers:

Chairman — Mrs. Bodil Begtrup (Denmark)
 Vice-Chairman — Mrs. J. Street (Australia)
 Rapporteur — Mrs. E. Uralova (Byelorussian S.S.R.)

The Commission made recommendations for the amendment of its terms of reference. On the basis of these recommendations the Council decided that its terms of reference should be as follows:

The functions of the Commission shall be to prepare recommendations and reports to the Economic and Social Council on promoting women's rights in political, economic, civil, social and educational fields.

The Commission shall also make recommendations to the Council on urgent problems requiring immediate attention in the field of women's rights with the object of implementing the principle that men and women shall have equal rights, and to develop proposals to give effect to such recommendations.

The Commission recommended a procedure for dealing with communications received concerning the status of women, but the Council decided to defer consideration of this question until its next session.

The Commission requested the Economic and Social Council to arrange for the Commission on the Status of Women to be represented by its officers at the session of the Commission on Human Rights when the draft International Bill of Human Rights was being considered, and for copies of the preliminary draft to be circulated to members of the Commission at the same time as to members of the Commission on Human Rights. It also stressed the importance to the Commission on the Status of Women of the work of the Sub-Commission on the Prevention of Discrimination and the Protection of Minorities, and suggested that a representative of the Commission should participate in the work of this Sub-Commission. The Council agreed that the Commission on the Status of Women should be represented at the meetings of the Commission on Human Rights and the Sub-Commission on the Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities when matters affecting the status of women were discussed.

The Commission decided to adopt as a basis for its future work the sections of the Report of the nuclear Sub-Commission on the Status of Women referring to policy and program. It adopted the following guiding principles for its future work:

Freedom and equality are essential to human development and whereas woman is as much a human being as man, she is, therefore, entitled to share them with him;

Well-being and progress of society depend on the extent to which both men and women are able to develop their personality to the full and are cognizant of their responsibilities to themselves and to each other;

Woman has thus a definite role to play in the building of a free, healthy, prosperous and moral society and that she can fulfil this obligation only as a free and responsible member.

Woman must take an active part in the fight for the total elimination of fascist ideology and for international co-operation directed to the establishment of a democratic peace among the peoples of the world and for the prevention of fresh aggression.

In order to achieve this goal, the purpose of the Commission is to raise the status of women, irrespective of their nationality, race, language or religion, to equality with men in all fields of human enterprise, and to eliminate all discriminations against women in provisions of statutory law and under maxims or rules, or interpretations of customary law.

The Commission also recommended a series of aims under four headings: political, civil, social and economic, and educational.

The Council approved the declaration of principles, but certain members felt that some of the aims as enumerated by the Commission were impracticable and other were too broad. The Council therefore resolved:

(b) to reaffirm that it is the fundamental purpose of the Commission to develop proposals for promoting equal rights for women and eliminating discrimination on grounds of sex in the legal, political, economic, social and educational fields,

(c) to recognize that it is desirable for such proposals to be developed on the basis of all relevant information with as little delay as possible.

Members of the Council also felt that the Commission had neglected to propose a concrete future program of work. It therefore requested the Commission at its next session to take as its immediate program of work the examination of existing legal and customary disabilities of women as regards political and social rights, and (subject to consultation with the International Labour Organisation) economic rights and also educational opportunities, with a view to framing proposals for action.

On the basis of recommendations made by the Commission, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General:

1. to consult with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on plans for developing the programme of basic education without distinction of sex, race, or creed and to report to the next session of the Commission on its progress and any assistance which the Commission may be able to render in the development of the programme;

2. to invite Member States to reply as early as possible to the questions in part I, paragraph D (relating to education) of the questionnaire on the legal status and treatment of women in order to provide the Commission with data which will enable it to give early consideration to recommendations for possible action to advance the rights of women in the educational field;

3. to invite each Member Government to complete and transmit to him by 1 July 1947, if possible, replies to the following sections of the questionnaire on the legal status and treatment of women: part I, Public Law:

section A, Franchise (and section B, Eligibility to hold public office), to indicate as far as possible any changes in law or practice concerning these matters since the passage of resolution No. 56 (I) of the General Assembly of 11 December 1946;

4. to make a preliminary report on the political rights of women by 1 September 1947 based on the replies of Member Governments to part I of the questionnaire on the legal status and treatment of women and on such information as may be available from other authoritative sources;

5. to prepare a preliminary report to the Commission on the Status of Women based on accounts of pertinent experience from countries where effective programs have already been undertaken in the field of information on use of the franchise, for the benefit of women who have recently acquired the right to vote, and to report on methods by which the Secretariat might act as a centre for the collection of publications in this field and making them available to the Members of the United Nations;

6. to issue part II of the questionnaire on the legal status and treatment of women and to expedite the preparation of such further questionnaires on the economic rights of women as may be considered necessary, after consultation with the International Labour Organisation;

7. to make arrangements for the presence of observers from regional inter-governmental organizations in the field of women's rights at sessions of the Commission on the Status of Women to act in an advisory and informative capacity, and to arrange for the exchange of information between the Commission and these organizations on subjects relating to the status of women;

8. to consider the appointment of a competent woman as Head of the Status of Women Section of the Division of Human Rights as soon as possible.

The Commission had recommended that the Inter-American Women's Commission should be requested to send an observer to the meetings of the Commission on the Status of Women to act in an advisory and informative capacity. The Council, however, after considering the question of this and other organizations, decided to frame its decision in the form given above.

On the recommendation of the Commission, the Economic and Social Council recommended:

1. that UNESCO consider the desirability of paying special attention in its educational, social program to those countries and regions where women have no voice in political affairs and to those countries and regions where women have the franchise but have not been granted full political rights; and further to consider the steps to be taken to promote an effective program of basic education for women in such countries and regions and to send reports on the progress of such a program to the Economic and Social Council for transmission to the Commission on the Status of Women;

2. that the Trusteeship Council be invited to take note of the importance attached by the Council to the inclusion in the questionnaire required by Article 88 of the Charter of questions relating to the status of women, to the nature and form of such questions and to the methods whereby the rights of women in political, economic, social and educational fields may be promoted in the Trust Territories.

The Commission recommended that arrangements should be made for one or more of its members to visit Member States to stimulate interest in the work of the Commission and assist in compiling the information required by the Secretariat. The Commission also recommended a tentative program of regional conferences, the first of which, it suggested, might be held during 1948. The Council decided that further consideration should be given to these two recommendations.

The General Assembly on December 11, 1946, passed a resolution affirming that genocide was a crime under international law and, inter alia, requesting the Economic and Social Council "to undertake the necessary studies, with a view to drawing up a draft convention on the crime of genocide to be submitted to the next regular session of the General Assembly."

The Council felt that the necessary studies should be undertaken in consultation with the Committee for the Codification of International Law established by the General Assembly and with the Commission on Human Rights. In view of the urgency of the question and the heavy program of the Commission on Human Rights, the Council decided to instruct the Secretary-General:

(a) to undertake, with the assistance of experts in the field of international and criminal law, the necessary studies with a view to drawing up a draft convention in accordance with the resolution of the General Assembly; and

(b) after consultation with the General Assembly Committee on the Development and Codification of International Law and, if feasible, the Commission on Human Rights and, after reference to all Member Governments for comments, to submit to the next session of the Economic and Social Council a draft convention on the crime of genocide.

The Secretariat accordingly submitted a draft convention to the Committee on the Codification of International Law at its first session.¹

P. CONTROL OF NARCOTICS

1. COMMISSION ON NARCOTIC DRUGS

The Council decided at its first session to establish a Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the following terms of reference:

The Commission shall:

(a) assist the Council in exercising such powers of supervision over the application of international conventions and agreements dealing with narcotic drugs as may be assumed by or conferred on the Council;

(b) carry out such functions entrusted to the League of Nations Advisory Committee on Traffic in Opium and other Dangerous Drugs by the international conventions on narcotic drugs as the Council may find necessary to assume and continue;

(c) advise the Council on all matters pertaining to the control of narcotic drugs, and prepare such draft international conventions as may be necessary;

(d) consider what changes may be required in the existing machinery for the international control of narcotic drugs and submit proposals thereon to the Council;

(e) perform such other functions relating to narcotic drugs as the Council may direct.

The Council requested the following Governments to designate one representative each to constitute the Commission (all for three years):

Canada	Peru
China	Poland
Egypt	Turkey
France	U.S.S.R.
India	United Kingdom
Iran	United States
Mexico	of America
Netherlands	Yugoslavia

The Commission was also authorized by the Council to appoint, in a consultative capacity and without the right to vote, representatives of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body, which were created under the terms of the International Conventions on Narcotic Drugs of 1925 and 1931 respectively.

a. First Session

The Commission held its first session from November 27 to December 13, 1946. It elected the following as its officers:

Colonel C. H. L. Sharman (Canada)—Chairman

Dr. S. Tubiasz (Poland)—Vice-Chairman

Dr. Szeming Sze (China) — Rapporteur

In addition to organizational questions, the Commission discussed the following general questions: limitation of production of raw materials, abolition of opium-smoking in the Far East, illicit traffic, drug addiction, re-establishment at its pre-war level of the international control of narcotic drugs, and future narcotics control in Japan and Korea.

The Commission noted the preparatory work for a Conference on the Limitation of the Production of Opium which had been begun in this field by the League of Nations Opium Advisory Committee and continued by the United States Government, but realized that changed circumstances made it necessary to collect further information to continue this preparatory work. It therefore proposed, subject to the approval of the Economic and Social Council, to issue a questionnaire on opium, the questionnaire to be prepared by the Secretariat in the light of the views expressed during the session of the Commission and after the approval of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Rapporteur. It proposed to ask the Secretariat to draw up a questionnaire on coca leaves for consideration by the Commission at its next session.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session approved the issue of the questionnaire on raw opium prepared by the Commission, and requested the Secretary-General to transmit it to the governments concerned, asking them to communicate the information called for by August 15, 1947. The U.S.S.R. representative made a reservation concerning the questionnaire on the ground that, since the question of narcotics was a specialized one, it was difficult to judge of the accuracy of a questionnaire which had not been discussed by the Narcotics Commission as a whole. The Council also approved the decision of the Commission to draw up a questionnaire on the coca leaf.

In accordance with the decision of the Council a "Questionnaire on the Limitation and Control of the Cultivation of the Opium Poppy and the Production of Raw Opium and the Control of other Raw Materials used in the Manufacture of Opium Alkaloids" was communicated by the Secretary-General to the governments of 68 countries on April 14, 1947. Copies of the note sent to governments and of the questionnaire were also sent to the Chairman of the Control Council for Germany and to the Political Advisor to the Supreme Commander for Allied Powers in Tokyo with a request for information concerning Germany and Japan.

The Commission reviewed the situation in the Far East as regards opium smoking, which had been changed by the recent abolition of most of the previously existing opium monopolies. Various members of the Commission reported the measures their governments were taking to prohibit smoking. On the recommendation of the Commission, the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session requested the Secretary-General: "to invite, on behalf of the Council, all countries where the use of opium for smoking is still legal, to take immediate steps to prohibit the manufacture of, internal traffic in, and the use of opium for this purpose."

The Commission reviewed in detail the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs throughout the world during and as a result of the war. The Commission heard reports from various members and urged members to bring to its next session reports on illicit traffic similar to those furnished annually to the Opium Advisory Committee. The Secretariat was asked to prepare in printed form quarterly summaries on reports of seizures, communicated by governments under the 1931 Convention, and an annual analytical study of the world trends of illicit traffic. The Secretariat was also requested to communicate with all governments which had not yet ratified the 1936 Convention for the Suppression of Illicit Traffic, with a view to securing their early ratification of this Convention.

The Commission considered addiction to drugs derived from opium and the coca leaf, to cannabis, to new synthetic drugs and to barbiturates. It discussed the social, legal and medical aspects of drug addiction. It approved a questionnaire to be sent to governments on drug addiction. On the recommendation of the Commission, the Council at its fourth session adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, HAVING NOTED that under the Convention of February 19, 1925 Governments have undertaken to send the Permanent Central Opium Board statistics of drugs, whether synthetic or not, which are brought under control in virtue of article 10 of this Convention, REQUESTS the Secretary-General to remind the Governments concerned of the obligation above-mentioned, and to ask them to send for the information of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body, estimates of requirements of these drugs, together with the estimates to be furnished under articles 2 to 5 inclusive of the Convention of 1931.

(1) Re-establishment of Control

The Commission noted that seventeen countries in Europe and five in Asia had not submitted annual reports during all or part of the period 1939-1945, the great majority of these countries having been directly affected by the war, and decided that governments which had not submitted annual reports in recent years should be urged to do so. With regard to those countries which had not yet resumed full collaboration with the international organs of control, it further decided:

(i) to request them to furnish, as soon as possible, information on conditions during the war and on the present state and functioning of their national narcotic administrations;

(ii) to ask them to resume, at the earliest date possible, collaboration with the international organs of control in accordance with the narcotic conventions to which they are parties; and

(iii) to offer them such technical assistance as they may require with a view to re-establishing their national controls at pre-war levels (e.g. in some countries all statistical records, archives, etc., relating to drug control were destroyed).

It was also suggested that members of the Narcotic Division of the United Nations should study on the spot the re-establishment and, if necessary, the improvement of national control in countries directly affected by the war and give such technical advice as the circumstances required.

The Council approved the decision of the Commission to ask the countries directly affected by the war to resume as soon as possible full collaboration with the international organs of control and to offer them any technical advice needed to re-establish national control at pre-war levels.

With a view to assisting it in supervising the application of the conventions and agreements on narcotic drugs the Commission asked the Secretariat to prepare a list of narcotic laws and regulations now in operation in the various countries parties to the Conventions, an annual summary of new laws and regulations and a digest "giving an analytical survey of national legislation in all countries with a view to ascertaining that this legislation is in accordance with the Conventions in force and thus facilitating the more effective application of these Conventions." The Commission also asked the Secretariat to obtain from governments certain information concerning the application of the system of control, and to make a study for further consideration at the next session of the question of adding new drugs to the international list.

The Council noted the opinion of the Commission that the revision of the list of drugs falling within the scope of the Conventions should not be delayed. It approved the Commission's decision to initiate the preparation of a digest of laws.

(2). Conditions in Japan, Korea and Germany

The United States representative made statements in the Commission on Narcotic Drugs regarding conditions found in Japan and Korea by the United States military authorities, showing how no organized control had been exercised over the distribution of narcotic drugs and how illicit traffic had not been suppressed. The Commission took note of the report of the Permanent Central Opium Board that the United States occupying authorities had established a strict centralized supervision of narcotics in Japan and Korea, requesting reports and other information to be furnished in accordance with the narcotics conventions.

A proposal was submitted by the Chinese delegation on the future control of narcotic drugs in Japan with a view to preventing Japan from again becoming a center of illicit traffic. In addition to questions of Japanese import, export and distribution of narcotic drugs, the proposal suggested that a stockpile of narcotic drugs should be established at the proposed Far Eastern Regional Office of the United Nations, or some suitable center designated by the Economic and Social Council on the recommendations of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and that import of narcotic drugs into Japan should be permitted only from this stockpile. Control measures should be supervised by United Nations inspectors. The Chinese delegation also proposed the establishment of an ad hoc committee to study this proposal and the possibility of similar control in Korea, and to recommend how such control could be incorporated in the peace treaties between Japan and the powers concerned and in the agreements for establishing a government in Korea. The Committee should also consider the potentialities of establishing other regional systems of control which might be united within a single global system.

The ad hoc committee was established and submitted two alternative proposals. The one provided for a stockpile; the other provided that all imports of narcotic drugs into Japan should receive the prior sanction of an inspectorate appointed by the United Nations. Both proposals were submitted by the Commission to the Economic and Social Council, the majority of members of the Commission being in favor of the second alternative.

The Commission, on the basis of the Chinese proposal, also recommended that the production of raw materials for the purpose of manufacturing narcotic drugs and the manufacture or conversion of narcotic drugs should be prohibited in Japan, that the import of narcotic drugs into Japan should not exceed the total of the estimates of the Supervisory Body for medical and scientific needs and that the export of narcotic substances should be forbidden. The distribution of narcotic drugs within Japan should, the Commission recommended, be controlled by the Japanese Government, which should submit regular reports to the United Nations, and government stocks, except a reserve stock for normal consumption, should be prohibited. Similar control measures were advocated for Korea.

The Economic and Social Council adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL HAVING CONSIDERED the problem of the control of narcotic drugs in Japan, and the recommendations of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on this subject.

APPROVES the decision of the Commission to approach the competent authorities at Pacific Supreme Headquarters through the proper channels, with the request to supply to the Secretary-General, and through him to the parties to the narcotics conventions, reports and other information to be furnished in accordance with the conventions of 1912, 1925, 1931 and 1936, and

HAVING NOTED that the most stringent measures for the control of narcotic drugs should be incorporated in the peace treaties to be concluded with Japan, RECOMMENDS to the Governments responsible for negotiating these treaties that provision should be made in them for the most stringent control in the period after the conclusion of the treaties of all transactions concerning narcotic drugs in Japan, and that to ensure effective operation this control should be under the supervision of such control authorities as may be established by the peace treaties and of the United Nations, whose expert bodies will be available to give such information and advice as may be requested.

The representative of the United States made a statement regarding the steps taken in the United States Zone in Germany for the re-establishment of narcotics control. A Narcotics Control Working Party with representatives from each of the four zones was established on September 23, 1946, to study the question of collecting statistics on narcotic drugs for submission to competent authorities designated by the United Nations. The representatives of the Permanent Central Opium Board drew attention to the necessity of a centralized or co-ordinated control of narcotics in Germany.

On the recommendation of the Commission, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General on its behalf

....to inform the Governments of France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom, and the United States of the special importance which the Council attaches to the establishment of an effective control of narcotic drugs in Germany, and to invite them, on behalf of the Council, to recommend to the Allied Control Authority to take the necessary measures at the earliest possible moment for the establishment of an effective control of narcotic drugs throughout Germany.

Following the decision, notes concerning the control of narcotics in Germany and Japan were addressed to the U.S. Secretary of State on May 7, 1947, with the request that he bring the matter before the Allied Control Council for Germany, and the Political Advisor to the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, in Tokyo. Tables of the specific obligations undertaken under the Narcotics Conventions by the German and Japanese authorities were annexed.

(3). Appointments to Permanent Central Opium Board

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its first session considered the procedure to be followed in making future appointments to the Permanent Central Opium Board. It decided to recommend that the Economic and Social Council should follow a procedure similar to that followed by the League of Nations under Article 19 of the Geneva Convention of February 19, 1925. The Commission suggested that after the entry into force of the amendments to this Convention, the Secretary-General should invite the parties to it each to submit to him the names of two persons satisfying the conditions, which included a technical competence, impartiality and disinterestedness. In making appointments consideration was also to be given to the importance of including on the Central Board, in equitable proportions, persons possessing a knowledge of the drug situation both in the producing and manufacturing countries on the one hand, and in the consuming countries on the other hand, and connected with such countries. Members of the Board might not hold any office putting them in a position of direct dependence on their governments.

In extending the invitations the Secretary-General should also be guided by the Economic and Social Council and General Assembly resolutions regarding Franco Spain.

The Secretary-General should inform governments in full detail of the nature of the appointments and governments should inform candidates of these, and should state the qualifications of their nominees. The Commission suggested that governments should be asked, in nominating candidates, to make a statement that these candidates would normally be able to attend three meetings a year. The list of candidates should be communicated to members of the Economic and Social Council before the session at which elections were to take place.

The Commission pointed out that governments were not obliged to nominate their own nationals. It drew the attention of the Council to the fact that a certain number of parties to the 1925 Convention were not Members of the United Nations, and that the Council might consider appointing one member of the Board who was a national of a State not a Member of the United Nations. The Commission stated that while geographical considerations should be taken into account, the primary consideration in appointing members of the Board should be the qualifications and technical competence of the candidate. The Chinese member of the Commission pointed out that the number of persons who were not dependent on their governments and who possessed sufficient independent means and leisure to become members of the Board was very limited.

The Commission authorized the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Rapporteur to forward to the Economic and Social Council one or more nominations for the vacancy on the Permanent Central Opium Board. Professor J. Bougault (France) was nominated.

The Economic and Social Council approved the procedure outlined by the Commission and instructed the Secretary-General to invite the governments concerned to send, so as to reach him by or on August 1, 1947, their nominations in accordance with these provisions. The Council also invited the Secretary-General to study the question of amending or deleting the requirement that members of the Permanent Central Opium Board should not hold any office putting them in a position of direct dependence on their governments. The U.S.S.R. representative expressed the opinion that the composition of the Board should be determined on the same principles as that of the commissions of the Council.

The Council appointed Professor Bougault to the vacant post on the Board.

On April 25, 1947, the Secretary-General wrote to the governments of 65 states requesting them to submit to him by August 1, 1947, the names of two candidates for the Permanent Central Opium Board.

The Council recommended that, in view of the numerous functions which had to be performed, the urgency of the full-establishment of narcotic control and the need for resuming the preparatory work for the limitation of the production of raw materials, the General Assembly should make adequate provisions so that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Secretary-General should be able to discharge efficiently the functions and duties of the United Nations in the field of narcotic drugs.

2. TRANSFER TO THE UNITED NATIONS OF THE ACTIVITIES OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS IN THE FIELD OF NARCOTIC DRUGS

By resolution of February 12, 1946 the General Assembly decided that:

...the (Economic and Social) Council should, on or before the dissolution of the League (of Nations), assume and continue provisionally the work hitherto done by... the Opium Section (of the League of Nations)¹ and the secretaries of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body²..

The General Assembly considers that it would also be desirable for the Secretary-General to engage for the work referred to in paragraph 1 above, on appropriate terms, such members of the experienced personnel by whom it is at present being performed as the Secretary-General may select.

The Council accordingly, by its resolution of February 16, 1946, empowered the Secretary-General, acting in accordance with the above-mentioned resolution of the General Assembly, to take the steps necessary for the provisional assumption and continuance of the work of the Opium Section of the League and the secretariats of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body.

² These two international control bodies, set up under the 1925 and 1931 Conventions on Narcotic Drugs, met regularly throughout the war and carried on their work of control with the assistance of their respective secretariats. To ensure the continuation of international drug control during the war, centres outside Switzerland had to be created from which the work could be carried on to the fullest extent possible. Thanks to the courtesy and interest of the Government of the United States of America, it was possible to establish, in February, 1941, branch offices of the secretariats of the Permanent Central Board and the Supervisory Body at Washington, D.C., where they functioned until 1946.

In pursuance of the decisions of the General Assembly and the Council, the Secretary-General informed the Secretary-General of the League of Nations that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs of the United Nations had been established and that under its terms of reference it had, inter alia, to carry out the functions entrusted to the Advisory Committee on the Traffic in Opium and Other Dangerous Drugs of the League; that a Narcotics Division had been established within the Department of Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat, its task, inter alia, being to continue the work hitherto done by the Opium Section of the League, and that consequently the Secretary-General had decided to assume, as from August 1, 1946, responsibility for the work of the Opium Section of the League.

The Secretary-General further asked the Secretary-General of the League to give the Narcotics Division of the United Nations such information concerning current work and such other assistance as it might need in carrying out the functions entrusted to it and to request all Governments that were parties to Agreements and Conventions on Narcotic Drugs concluded in 1912, 1925, 1931 and 1936 to address to the Secretary-General of the United Nations all reports and communications which they undertook to furnish under those Agreements and Conventions, except statistics and estimates which, under the 1925 and 1931 Conventions, should continue to be sent to the President of the Permanent Central Opium Board.

The Secretary-General also informed the Secretary-General of the League of Nations of his intention to simplify, within the provisions of the existing Conventions, the administrative machinery of the international drug control by fusing the secretariats of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body and requesting the secretary of the Board to assume also the secretaryship of the Supervisory Body.

In reply, the Secretary-General of the League informed the Secretary-General that a circular letter had been sent to all governments which were parties to Narcotics Conventions requesting them to address henceforth to the Secretary-General of the United Nations all reports and communications referred to above, and to the President of the Permanent Central Opium Board the statistics and estimates under the 1925 and 1931 Conventions. He further stated that the competent services of the League Secretariat had been instructed to give the Narcotics Division of the United Nations all assistance it might need in the performance of its duties.

The Secretary-General advised the President of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Chairman of the Supervisory Body of provisional administrative and financial arrangements which he proposed to make in order to ensure the continuance, under the auspices of the United Nations, of the work of these two bodies and their respective secretariats. He also suggested the abovementioned fusion of the two secretariats and, as this measure, if adopted, would affect the staff of the Permanent Central Opium Board, the Secretary-General, following the provisions of Article 20 of the 1925 Convention, requested the President of the Board to inform him whether this arrangement would meet with the approval of the Board. If so, the Secretary-General would request the secretary of the Board to assume also the secretaryship of the Supervisory Body.

In reply, the President of the Permanent Central Opium Board informed the Secretary-General that the measures he proposed in respect of the appointment of the Board's secretary and staff and the fusion of the Board's secretariat with that of the Supervisory Body met with the Board's full approval. In accordance with Article 20 of the 1925 Convention, the President of the Board nominated for appointment by the Secretary-General the secretary and staff of the Board, whereupon the Secretary-General informed the President of the Board of the terms and conditions of appointment to be offered to them. These terms and conditions were accepted by the Board and its staff.

In reply to the Secretary-General's letter concerning the provisional administrative and financial arrangements required to ensure continuance of the Supervisory Body's work, the Chairman of the Supervisory Body stated that he agreed with the measures proposed by the Secretary-General and with the principle of the fusion of the secretariats of The Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body, but he added that this change would need to be carefully worked out in consultation with the two bodies concerned. He also suggested that the fusion should become effective as from January 1, 1947. In the exchange of letters which followed, the Secretary-General assured the Chairman of the Supervisory Body that the two bodies would have an opportunity of working out in consultation the arrangements concerning the fusion of their secretariats; he also stated the reasons which, from an administrative point of view, made it necessary to fuse these secretariats as from September 1, 1946.

Agreements having been reached with the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body on the provisional administrative and financial measures referred to above, the Secretary-General was in a position to report that as from September 1, 1946, all "the steps necessary to the provisional assumption and continuance of the work hitherto done by... the secretariats of the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body" had been taken in accordance with the resolution of the Economic and Social Council of February 16, 1946.

3. TRANSFER TO THE UNITED NATIONS OF POWERS AND FUNCTIONS EXERCISED BY THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS UNDER THE CONVENTIONS ON NARCOTIC DRUGS

On February 12, 1946, the General Assembly decided, with certain reservations, to take the necessary measures to ensure the continued exercise of the functions and powers of a technical and non-political character vested in the League by virtue of international agreements, including those relating to the international control of narcotic drugs,¹ and referred the matter to the Economic and Social Council.

When the Council considered the matter at its third session, it had before it a memorandum prepared by the Secretary-General to which were appended two draft resolutions (one for the Council and one for the General Assembly) as well as the Draft Protocol intended to give effect to the decision taken by the General Assembly on February 12, 1946.

Some members took the view that it would be inappropriate for the United Nations to invite the present Spanish Government to become a party to the new Protocol. Other members thought that the right course was not to exclude any country from the system of international control of drugs.

It was generally agreed, however, that if the Council decided to exclude Spain, effect could be given to this intention by adding to the draft resolution to be submitted to the General Assembly a paragraph the effect of which, if passed by the General Assembly, would be to relieve the Council and the Secretary-General from sending any communication on the subject of narcotic drugs to the Franco Government, whether Spain was referred to in the Conventions and Protocols as a contracting party or under any other designation.

On October 3, 1946, the Council adopted its Report to the General Assembly containing its own resolution as well as a draft resolution and a Draft Protocol with Annex for submission to the General Assembly, as follows:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

To ensure continuity in the international control of narcotic drugs,

RECOMMENDS that the General Assembly approve the assumption by the United Nations of the functions and powers exercised by the League of Nations in respect of narcotic drugs, as provided in the attached draft Resolution and draft Protocol;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General to inform the Members of the United Nations of this recommendation in order that their representatives at the next Session of the General Assembly may be given authority to sign the Protocol;

¹ The following four international Conventions and two Agreements relating to narcotic drugs are at present in force:

General Drug Conventions:

- (1) The Hague Convention of January 23, 1912.
- (2) The Geneva Convention of February 19, 1925.

- (3) The Limitation Convention of July 13, 1931.

Special Drug Convention:

- (4) The Convention for the Suppression of the Illicit Traffic of June 26, 1936.

Opium-Smoking Agreements:

- (5) The Geneva Agreement of February 11, 1925.
- (6) The Bangkok Agreement of November 26, 1931.

CONSIDERS that, in view of the Resolution of the General Assembly on the relations of the Members of the United Nations with Spain, adopted on 9 February 1946, the Franco Government should not be invited to become a party to the Protocol;

INVITES the present members of the Permanent Central Board and of the Supervisory Body to continue for the time being in office, to ensure the continuance of the control of narcotic drugs;

REQUESTS that the necessary financial provisions may be made by the General Assembly to enable the Permanent Central Board and the Supervisory Body to carry on their functions under the Conventions; and INVITES the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to advise the Council as to the procedure to be followed in making future appointments to the Permanent Central Board.

The General Assembly on November 19, 1946, duly approved the Protocol amending the Conventions and Agreements on Narcotic Drugs. Under the Protocol the amendments were to come into force in respect of each international instrument when the majority of the parties to it became parties to the Protocol. The Commission on Narcotic Drugs passed a resolution expressing the hope that Members of the United Nations which had signed the Protocol, subject to approval followed by acceptance, would approve or approve and accept it as soon as possible, and that other Members would become parties to it at an early date. The Commission requested the Economic and Social Council to consider the measures to ensure the participation in the Protocol of parties to the Agreements and Conventions on Narcotic Drugs which were not Members of the United Nations.

On December 11, 1946, representatives of 36 countries signed the Protocol, and it was later signed by representatives of further countries.

The Economic and Social Council at its fourth session adopted the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKES NOTE of the first report of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and decides as follows:

HAVING NOTED that forty-nine Members of the United Nations have now signed the Protocol transferring to the United Nations the functions previously exercised by the League of Nations under international conventions, agreements and other instruments relating to the narcotic drugs, and

HAVING NOTED that a certain number of parties to such conventions, agreements and other instruments are not Members of the United Nations, REQUESTS the Secretary-General to invite all those parties to the conventions, agreements and other instruments above-mentioned which are not Members of the United Nations, with the exception of Spain so long as the Franco Government remains in power in that country, to become parties to the said Protocol at an early date.

Invitations to become parties to the Protocol on Narcotic Drugs were sent by the Secretary-General on May 9, 1947, to the governments of thirteen countries.

Q. AUTHORIZATION TO THE COUNCIL TO REQUEST ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 96, paragraph 2, of the Charter empowers the General Assembly to authorize "other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies to request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities." The Economic and Social Council, as one of the principal organs of the United Nations, and by virtue of the functions and powers conferred upon it under Chapter X of the Charter of the United Nations, has wide responsibilities in diverse fields of economic and social co-operation in the fulfilment of which it may have necessarily to request advisory opinions of the International Court of Justice. In addition, by virtue of the terms of Article 63 of the Charter, the function of co-ordinating the activities of specialized agencies brought into relationship with the United Nations has been conferred upon the Council. To enable the Council to discharge its co-ordinating responsibility adequately, it was felt that it should be authorized to request advisory opinions on all legal questions within its scope, including legal questions concerning mutual relationships of the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

Accordingly, the Council passed the following resolution on September 21, 1946:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL RECOMMENDS that in accordance with Article 96 (2) the General Assembly authorize the Council to request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal questions arising within the scope of the activities.

This authorization was granted by the General Assembly on December 11, 1946.

R. EXPERT ASSISTANCE TO MEMBER GOVERNMENTS

In order to give effect to the resolution passed by the General Assembly on December 14, 1946, regarding the provision of expert advice to Member Governments¹ the delegations of Chile, Cuba, India, Lebanon, Peru and Venezuela submitted jointly to the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council a draft resolution instructing the Secretary-General to establish within the Secretariat a section on expert assistance to Member Governments.

The attention of the Council was drawn to the fact that the provision of expert assistance might involve the work of one or more of the commissions of the Council and the specialized agencies, and it was suggested that the Co-ordination Committee² might be asked to report to the Council on the question.

The Council decided to instruct the Secretary-General to establish machinery within the Secretariat designed to perform the following services:

1. Assistance to Member Governments in obtaining information on expert personnel, research facilities and other resources that the United Nations and specialized agencies can make available to Member Governments on request, and especially to the less-developed countries for aiding them in their development;

2. Elaboration of plans and programmes for the most efficient utilization of such personnel, facilities and resources;

3. Assistance to Member Governments which seek expert advice in securing, on terms mutually agreed upon, such advice, particularly in the form of teams of experts who would study specific problems and recommend appropriate practical solutions for the consideration of the Member Governments concerned.

It further instructed the Secretary-General to work in close co-operation with the specialized agencies in implementing these instructions and to obtain a report on the subject from the Co-ordination Committee for submission to the Council at its fifth session. The Secretary-General was also to study, in co-operation with the Co-ordination Committee, the general procedures and terms, including financial arrangements, which might be followed by the United Nations and specialized agencies in providing technical assistance to Member Governments.

S. NATIONAL RED CROSS SOCIETIES

On the proposal of the Belgian representative, the Council passed the following resolution on September 21, 1946:

WHEREAS the Economic and Social Council is empowered by Article 62 of the Charter to make recommendations to the General Assembly with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters,

AND WHEREAS the work of international solidarity achieved by the National Red Cross societies effectively assists the idea of understanding and peace between nations,

THEREFORE THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL RECOMMENDS to the General Assembly that it should draw the attention of Members of United Nations to the fact that the following purposes are of special concern, namely:

1. That the said Members should encourage and promote the establishment and co-operation of duly authorized voluntary national Red Cross and Red Crescent organizations;

2. That at all times the independent and voluntary nature of national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies be respected in all circumstances provided they are recognized by their governments and carry on their work according to the principles of the Geneva and Hague Conventions, and in the humanitarian spirit of the Red Cross;

3. That the necessary steps be taken to ensure that in all circumstances contact may be maintained between the national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies of all countries so as to enable them to carry out their humanitarian task.

These recommendations were approved by the General Assembly on November 19, 1946.

T. UNITED NATIONS RESEARCH LABORATORIES

At the third session the French delegation brought forward a proposal regarding the establishment of United Nations research laboratories. Many representatives stressed the fact that in several fields of science international laboratories would greatly add to the effectiveness of scientific research; such international co-operation also would make for equality of means between large and small countries. Several members while in favor of international co-operation in scientific research thought that the establishment of research laboratories should be deferred at present.

The text of the resolution adopted by the Council on October 3, 1946, was as follows:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, CONSIDERING

1. That a certain number of research activities can only be conducted in a rational manner on an international scale, and

2. That many branches of scientific research connected with the promotion of human knowledge, and especially with public health, would yield considerably more effective results if they were conducted on an international plane, INVITES the Secretary-General to consult UNESCO and the other specialized agencies concerned and to submit to the Economic and Social Council, if possible during the next session, a general report on the problem of establishing United Nations Research Laboratories.

U. TRANSLATION OF THE CLASSICS

The General Assembly on December 14, 1946, referred to the Economic and Social Council for reference to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization the question of the translation of the world's classics into the languages of Members of the United Nations. The Assembly outlined certain principles which it recommended should be taken into consideration by the Economic and Social Council and UNESCO in their study of the question¹.

To give effect to this resolution, the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TAKING NOTE of the resolution No. 60 (1) of the General Assembly of 14 December 1946 whereby the question of the translation of the world's classics into the languages of the Members of the United Nations was referred to the Economic and Social Council for reference to the United Nations Educational, Cultural, and Scientific Organization, and of the principles recommended therein for consideration in the study of this question; and

CONSIDERING

(a) That the translation of the classics is a project of international concern and of great significance for the promotion of international cultural co-operation;

(b) That the successful implementation of this project is linked closely with all the activities of UNESCO which tend to raise the general level of culture among the people of the world;

(c) That certain nations do not have sufficient facilities and resources for the authentic translation of numerous classics into their languages;

(d) That such translation is greatly conducive to their cultural development; and

DECIDE TO REQUEST UNESCO to submit by 1 June 1948, to the Economic and Social Council a report giving recommendations for needed action, and including particularly data on objective methods of selection of great books, the needs of various cultural regions, and suggestions for general assistance in translation, publication and distribution.

V. TRANSFER OF CERTAIN NON-POLITICAL FUNCTIONS OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

The General Assembly adopted, on February 12, 1946, a resolution on the "transfer of certain functions, activities and assets of the League of Nations."² Section II of that resolution requested the Economic and Social Council to survey the non-political functions and activities of the League other than those belonging to it under international agreements in order to determine which of them should, with such modifications as might be desirable, be assumed. At the same time it was indicated that pending this examination the Council should assume and continue the work of certain League services. The services mentioned were the Economic, Financial and Transit Department, the Health Section, the Opium Section and the Secretariats of the Permanent Central Opium Board and Supervisory Body.

Acting upon these recommendations, the Economic and Social Council on February 16, 1946, requested the Secretary-General to undertake the survey called for by the General Assembly and to take the necessary steps for the provision of assumption and continuance of the work of the League departments mentioned above.

The Economic and Social Council was apprized of the action taken in compliance with these resolutions by a memorandum from the Secretary-General dated September 26, 1936, of which it took note of on October 20, 1946.

This document contained a brief survey of the League committees, commissions, departments and publications relating to economic and social questions. It referred to the action taken by the Secretary-General to assume and to continue, provisionally and with such modifications as were necessary, the work of the League of Nations in those fields. It also mentioned the action taken as regards League activities by various commissions of the United Nations. It stated that "once the Commissions and Secretariat of the United Nations and the specialized agencies are fully organized, it is probable that the Economic and Social activities of the League will have been absorbed..." In conclusion, it suggested that "in such cases where this has not yet been done, the Commissions and specialized agencies should study and, if required, report on conditions under which the functions of the League of Nations formerly exercised within their field of competence, might be assumed, insofar as it is desirable and does not involve any overlapping of activities."

The Report of the Economic and Social Council and the Report of the Secretary-General on the Transfer of Certain Functions and Activities of the League of Nations were submitted to the second part of the first session of the General Assembly. On December 14 the Assembly passed a resolution recognizing that it was desirable for the United Nations to assume and continue the non-political functions and activities of the League described in the Secretary-General's report and authorizing him to assume and continue such activities except those exercised under international agreements or those entrusted to specialized agencies. It authorized the Economic and Social Council to assume and continue, with the same exceptions, the functions of the League committees and commissions.

W. TRANSFER OF THE PROPERTY RIGHTS IN THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF INTELLECTUAL CO-OPERATION

The Council passed the following resolution on October 3, 1946:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL, in view of the future transfer to UNESCO of the functions and activities of the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation,

RECOMMENDS that:

1. The Preparatory Commission of UNESCO and the Institute be requested to undertake negotiations for the purpose forthwith.
2. The Secretary-General be authorized to study and to report to the next meeting of the General Assembly concerning the conditions under which it will be appropriate to utilize the assets of the League of Nations in the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation, bearing in mind the respective requirements of the United Nations and of UNESCO.

The General Assembly on November 19 invited the Secretary-General to authorize UNESCO to utilize the assets of the Institute transferred by the League of Nations to the United Nations¹.

X. SPECIALIZED AGENCIES

1. COMMITTEE ON NEGOTIATIONS WITH SPECIALIZED AGENCIES

The Council appointed a Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies during the first session and directed it:

(a) to enter into negotiations as early as possible with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organisation, the International Monetary Fund, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization;

(b) to submit a report of the negotiations to the second session of the Council, including therein a draft preliminary agreement based upon the negotiations with the above-mentioned agencies;

(c) to arrange for the inclusion in the preliminary draft agreements with each of these agencies of appropriate provisions on the subjects, based on the relevant paragraphs of Chapter III, Section 5, of the Report of the Preparatory Commission.

The Committee was composed of representatives of Belgium, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, France, Norway, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States, under the chairmanship of the President of the Council.

2. NEGOTIATIONS WITH ILO, UNESCO, FAO AND PICAQ

During the second session of the Council, negotiations took place with the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. As a result the Council passed the following resolution on June 21:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL,

HAVING CONSIDERED the draft agreements entered into between its Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies and the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, RECOMMENDS to the General Assembly that these agreements be approved by it.

At the third session, negotiations took place with the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization, in accordance with a decision taken by the Council at its second session.

Some members of the Council maintained that the negotiations with the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization should be postponed so long as Spain remained a member of this Organization. They referred to the resolution of the General Assembly of February 9, 1946. The majority of the Council felt, however, that the question of relations between the United Nations and Spain was not involved in the establishment of relationships with the International Civil Aviation Organization and that an agreement should be entered into with that Organization in accordance with Articles 57 and 63 of the Charter.

The Council adopted on October 3, 1946, the resolution quoted in section 5 of this chapter, recommending the approval of the draft agreement negotiated with PICAQ by the Assembly.

3. MAIN PROVISIONS OF THE AGREEMENTS

Provisions were included in the draft agreements in the light of the principles set out in the Report of the Preparatory Commission. The most important of them were as follows:

Reciprocal Representation. The United Nations might send a representative to the meetings of the conferences and executive bodies of specialized agencies, and these in turn might be represented in an official character at the meetings of the organs in which they have an interest.

Admission of States not Members of the United Nations. In the agreement with UNESCO the admission of States not Members of the United Nations to the membership of the Organization was subject to certain procedures which enabled the Economic and Social Council to recommend the rejection of the applications for admission. A similar provision was included in the agreement with PICAQ; with the difference that the General Assembly, and not the Economic and Social Council, would review the applications for membership of the Organization.

Proposal of Agenda Items. The Economic and Social Council and the Trusteeship Council undertook to insert in their agenda items proposed by the specialized agencies, and in turn the specialized agencies undertook to insert in the agenda of their respective bodies the items proposed by the United Nations.

Recommendations of the United Nations. Under the agreements, the specialized agencies agreed to submit to their policy-making or executive bodies all formal recommendations which the United Nations might make to them. They agreed to enter into consultation with the United Nations, upon request, with respect to such recommendations, and to report to the United Nations on the action taken to give effect to such recommendations. This clause provided a principal means by which the United Nations could perform its functions of co-ordination in accordance with Articles 58 and 63 of the Charter.

Exchange of Information and Documents. The fullest and promptest exchange of information and documents was to be made between the United Nations and each agency. The agencies undertook to supply reports to the United Nations including both regular and special reports.

Assistance to the Security Council. The agencies agreed to render assistance to the Security Council in carrying out its decisions.

Assistance to the Trusteeship Council and Co-operation with Regard to Non-Self-Governing Territories. The agencies agreed to co-operate with the Trusteeship Council in carrying out its functions and to co-operate with the United Nations in the discharge of its obligations with respect to the development of the peoples of non-self-governing territories.

Relations with the International Court of Justice. Under the agreements, the specialized agencies were authorized to request advisory opinions of the International Court of Justice on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities other than questions of mutual relations of the organizations and the United Nations or other specialized agencies. The draft agreement with the International Labour Organisation contained a general authorization to request advisory opinions from the International Court of Justice, within the above mentioned limitations, whereas the draft agreement with UNESCO contained a clause providing for the possibility that the Council might withhold the request until the General Assembly has made a final decision.

At the third session the Council decided to include in the draft agreements with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization the same clause for obtaining advisory opinions from the International Court of Justice as was contained in the draft agreement with the International Labour Organisation, and recommended that the General Assembly authorize the Secretary-General to offer to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization the same clause.

Headquarters and Regional Offices. Since the headquarters of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization had already been established in Paris, no provision was included in the Agreement with this Organization. With respect to the other three organizations, centralization was recognized as the guiding principle in the eventual determination of their headquarters.

Personnel Arrangements. The agreements stressed the desirability of securing as much uniformity and co-ordination as practicable in matters relating to personnel and administrative services. The draft agreements provided for the development of common personnel standards and methods designed to avoid unjust differences in terms and conditions of employment as well as to avoid competition in the recruitment of personnel and to facilitate interchange of personnel.

Statistical Services. A provision to co-ordinate the statistical services of the United Nations and those of the specialized agencies was included in the agreements on the basis of the recommendations made by the "nuclear" Statistical Commission to the Council.

Budgetary and Financial Arrangements. This article contemplated the establishment of a general budget of the United Nations within which the budget of the specialized agencies would be included. In order to establish this system of "consolidated budgets" as envisaged in the Report of the Preparatory Commission, supplementary agreements would have to be negotiated at a later date. In the meantime, specialized agencies were to enter into consultation with the United Nations in the preparation of their budgets, and were to transmit their proposed budgets annually to the General Assembly for examination and recommendations and to conform as far as practicable to the standards recommended by the United Nations in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2 of the Charter.

Public Information. In order to co-ordinate the activities of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in advancing the mutual knowledge and understanding of people, through all means of mass communication, with the operations of information services of the United Nations, a subsidiary agreement was to be concluded with this Organization.

4. RELATIONS WITH THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND AND THE INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT

At the request of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund, the Council decided, at its second session, to postpone negotiations with these organizations, and instructed the Secretary-General to continue exploratory discussions so as to prepare for negotiations during the third session of the Council. Conversations were entered into with both organizations accordingly on problems involved in the relationships between the United Nations and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund. Practical co-operation was established, consisting mainly of mutual attendance at meetings as well as the joint planning of economic research and statistical work. The International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development informed the Secretary-General of their desire to continue and intensify practical co-operation with the United Nations. They considered, however, that pending further development of their organization and activities, it would be premature to negotiate formal agreements under Article 57 of the Charter; they preferred to wait until experience had more clearly indicated the appropriate character and scope of their future relations with United Nations.

The Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies after a full discussion reached the conclusion that every possible effort should be made to negotiate with the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development at an early session of the Council draft agreements which should take into account the special characteristics of these institutions and to submit these draft agreements to the second session of the General Assembly in 1947.

5. RESOLUTIONS OF THE COUNCIL

The Council passed the following resolutions at its third session:

1. THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

INSTRUCTS the Secretary-General to insert the draft agreement with the FAO, which the Council at its second session recommended for the approval of the General Assembly, an additional article granting the same procedure for obtaining advisory opinions from the International Court of Justice as is specified in Article IX of the draft agreement with the ILO and recommends to the General Assembly that it approve the draft agreement with the Food and Agriculture Organization as amended by the addition of this article.

2. THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

HAVING CONSIDERED the draft agreement entered into between its Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies and the Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization, instructs the Secretary-General to insert in the draft agreement with the ICAO an additional article granting to the ICAO the same procedure for obtaining advisory opinions from the International Court of Justice as is specified in article IX of the draft agreement with the ILO and, recommends to the General Assembly that it approve the draft agreement with the addition of this article.

3. THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

RECOMMENDS to the General Assembly that it authorize the Secretary-General to offer to UNESCO to replace article XI of the draft agreement with that organization, which deals with the question of access to the International Court of Justice, by an article which will extend to UNESCO the same procedure in this respect as is specified in the agreement with the ILO (article IX).

4. THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

DIRECTS the Secretary-General to strengthen and extend working relationships between the United Nations and the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and to continue consultations with the representatives of these organizations with a view to initiating formal negotiations as soon as practicable.

5. THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

DIRECTS the Secretary-General to initiate as soon as possible conversations with the Interim Commission of the World Health Organization for the purpose of preparing an agreement to be negotiated at an early session of the Economic and Social Council.

The General Assembly approved the agreements bringing the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Civil Aviation Organization into relationship with the United Nations.¹

It recommended, however, that the Franco Government of Spain be debarred from membership in the international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations, and made its approval of the agreement with ICAO contingent on that Organization's compliance with this decision.²

The Council at its fourth session authorized the Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies to enter into negotiations with the Universal Postal Union and the International Telecommunications Union with a view to bringing these organizations into relationship with the United Nations as specialized agencies.³

³ See p. 499.

6. CO-ORDINATION COMMITTEE

At its third session the Council passed the following resolution:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Being desirous of discharging effectively its responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations to co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies,

1. Undertakes, after reference, if necessary, to an appropriate commission or to an ad hoc committee,

(a) To consider and to make recommendations or decisions, as may be suitable, regarding matters referred to it by the Secretary-General from the Committee established under paragraph 2, below, and matters arising outside the area of the agreements between the United Nations and the specialized agencies which are or may become the subject of difference of view between the specialized agencies and the United Nations, or between the specialized agencies, or between the specialized agencies and commissions or other subsidiary organs of the Council, and

(b) To make recommendations concerning ways and means of improving relations between these bodies; and

2. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to establish a standing committee of administrative officers consisting of himself, as chairman, and the corresponding officers of the specialized agencies brought into relationship with the United Nations, for the purpose of taking all appropriate steps, under the leadership of the Secretary-General, to ensure the fullest and most effective implementation of the agreements entered into between the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

This Co-ordination Committee held its first meeting on February 4, 1947, at Lake Success. It was attended by the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Assistant Secretary-General for Economic Affairs, and by the Directors-General of ILO, FAO and UNESCO.

The Committee discussed questions regarding the implementation of the agreements entered into with the specialized agencies—in particular budgetary and financial arrangements, technical advice to member nations, headquarters and regional offices and co-ordination of conferences.

To follow up agreements reached in the Co-ordination Committee, a Working Committee composed of senior members of the secretariats of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies was established. It first met on February 5. It will report to the Co-ordination Committee.

The Secretary-General reported to the Economic and Social Council on the meeting of the Co-ordination Committee. In his report he stated that inter-agency consultative committees at the secretariat level had been or would be set up on public information, personnel matters, budgetary and financial matters and statistical services. These committees would report to the Co-ordination Committee concerning the agreements which they reached. The Co-ordination Committee agreed that ad hoc working groups composed of officials of the United Nations and specialized agencies should be established as occasion arose to consider problems of common concern.

The Secretary-General's report was noted by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session.

7. APPLICATIONS BY STATES NOT MEMBERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP IN UNESCO

Under the agreement between the United Nations and UNESCO applications submitted by States not Members of the United Nations for membership in UNESCO are transmitted to the Economic and Social Council, which may recommend their rejection. Any such recommendation must be accepted by UNESCO.

Accordingly the Director-General of UNESCO sent to the Secretary-General of the United Nations for submission to the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council applications received from Italy, Austria and Switzerland. The Council voted to approve the admission of these three countries to UNESCO.

The Council decided to defer until its next session consideration of the application of Hungary, which was submitted later.

8. PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL REFUGEE ORGANIZATION

The General Assembly adopted on February 12, 1946, a resolution recommending that the Economic and Social Council examine the problem of refugees and displaced persons and report on it to the second part of the first session of the General Assembly, and that the Council establish a special committee for the purpose of carrying out promptly the examination and preparation of the report.¹

Pursuant to these recommendations, the Council, by a resolution adopted on February 16, 1946, established a Special Committee on Refugees and Displaced Persons, to carry out promptly a thorough examination of the problem and to make a report thereon to the Council at its second session.

The Special Committee met in London from April 8, to June 1, 1946. The Committee first decided on the necessity of establishing an international body to deal with the problem of refugees and displaced persons, such international body to be a specialized agency of non-permanent character. Working through four sub-committees, the Special Committee considered and reported on the following aspects of the problem:

(a) definition of the categories of persons entitled to international protection and assistance;

(b) numbers and location of refugees and displaced persons as well as the conditions preventing speedy repatriation, general problems raised by refugees and displaced persons in the Far East, and ascertainment by enquiry from countries of reception of the possibilities of resettling non-repatriables;

(c) form of the new international body and its relationship to the United Nations, and its constitution and internal administration;

(d) the examination of the various statements and memoranda submitted by private organizations.

The report of the Special Committee on Refugees and Displaced Persons was presented to the Economic and Social Council at its second session in June. The Council concentrated its discussions on the suggestions of the Special Committee for a draft constitution for a new international body to be called the International Refugee Organization, and on the definition of persons coming within the mandate of the new organization, which it was agreed must be an integral part of the constitution.

By resolution of June 21, 1946, the Council recommended to the General Assembly the establishment of a non-permanent organization to be called the International Refugee Organization, a specialized agency to be related to the United Nations. Having in mind the urgency of bringing the International Refugee Organization into being at the earliest possible date, the Council also recommended that the Constitution of IRO as finally adopted by the General Assembly be opened immediately for signature. It urged Members of the United Nations to accord their representatives full power to sign the Constitution.

Having revised the suggestions of the Special Committee for a draft Constitution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to forward the draft Constitution to governments for their comments after drafting such technical clauses as were necessary to complete it from a legal point of view.

The Council further established a Committee on the Finances of the International Refugee Organization to prepare, in the light of the draft Constitution, provisional administrative and operational budgets for the first financial year of the Organization and scales of contributions from Members, having due regard to the exceptionally difficult financial situation of countries formerly under enemy occupation. It decided to review at its third session the comments of Members on the draft Constitution and on the Report of the Committee on the Finances of IRO.

The Council, in view of the urgent importance of making adequate preparation for the advent of the new organization, also recommended by a resolution of June 21, 1946, that the Secretary-General of the United Nations take such steps as might be appropriate to plan in consultation with UNRRA and the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees the initiation of the work of IRO.

The Committee on the Finances of IRO met in London from July 6 to 20, 1946. On the basis of an estimated total number of 844,525 European refugees and displaced persons at January 1, 1947, and estimates of the number and location of those likely to be repatriated or resettled during 1947, the Committee prepared a provisional administrative and operational budget for IRO, and recommended provisional scales of contribution to the Administrative budget and parts I and II of the operational budget (large scale resettlement and other than large scale resettlement). Owing to lack of information, it was left to the Council to include in the budget an item for the cost of repatriation of Overseas Chinese. This report was circulated to governments for their comments.

The Council, at its third session, had before it the comments of governments on the draft Constitution, the report of the Committee on the Finances of IRO and a report of the Secretary-General concerning the resolution of the Economic and Social Council relating to the initiation of the work of IRO. Taking into account the recommendations of a Subcommittee on Refugees, the Council amended the draft Constitution in the light of comments from governments, and agreed to set up a small committee to review the Report of the Committee on the Finances of IRO in the light of observations made by governments and any new information which might be received in the near future. The Council also recommended that Section 3 of the Report of the Committee on the Finances of IRO concerning scales of contributions to the budget of IRO should be referred to the General Assembly in order that the provisional scales of contributions set forth in that document might be reviewed in the light of the report of the Standing Committee on Contributions to be adopted by the General Assembly at the second part of its first session.

The Council appointed an ad hoc Committee on Finances. This Committee reviewed the administrative budget proposed by the Committee on the Finances of IRO and recommended its adoption in the same amount ($4,800,000), but reduced Part I of the provisional operational budget (other than large-scale resettlement) from $193,954,000 to $151,051,000 and Part II of the provisional operational budget (large-scale resettlement) from $60,000,000 to $5,000,000. The reductions were made on the basis of certain factors which modified some of the assumptions underlying the original calculations, i.e. the numbers of persons likely to be resettled and repatriated during the first part of operations of IRO; the necessity of bridging the gap between the cost of planned operations and resources likely to be available; and finally the fact that UNRRA was to continue displaced persons operations until June 30, 1947. Furthermore, it included an item in the budget for the cost of repatriation of displaced Overseas Chinese. The report of the ad hoc Committee, including the revised budget estimates, which it was agreed should be circulated to governments by the Secretary-General, was approved by the Council on the understanding that all decisions were subject to reference to governments. It was agreed to transmit the report of the Committee on the Finances of the IRO, together with the report of the ad hoc Committee, to the General Assembly for final decision.

Differences of emphasis and opinion in the Council characterized the discussions on refugees and displaced persons from the outset. There was no difference of view concerning the necessity of aiding internationally the victims of nazi, fascist and similar regimes. But the extension of such international protection and maintenance to other large groups of persons who for one reason or another were unwilling to return to their countries of nationality or former habitual residence (notably the so-called "political dissidents") was opposed throughout by some Members. This opposition was directed particularly against those who actively participated in hostile activities against a Member of the United Nations.

The debate centered around the prospects and degree of repatriation. The majority tended to take the view that, taking full account of possibilities of repatriation, there would still remain a large remnant of displaced persons who would become for valid reasons the responsibility of IRO and constitute a "hard core" of non-repatriables. The minority, on the other hand, argued that in the absence of hostile propaganda against the countries of origin, with full information given directly by representatives of the countries of origin to their nationals in the camps, and with segregation of those who actively impeded repatriation, especially war criminals, quislings and traitors, the number of non-repatriables would be greatly reduced. The minority also urged that full lists of displaced persons should be furnished to the governments of the countries of origin, arguing that this would facilitate the screening of undesirables as well as direct communication with relatives in countries of origin.

During the third session of the Council a number of compromise positions were generally accepted. But among the questions upon which no general agreement yet existed was that of the financing of IRO. The Finance Article (Article X) of the draft Constitution contained the principle of the obligatory contribution of members of IRO, not only to the administrative budget (about which no serious difference of opinion existed) but also to the operational budget, including large-scale resettlement. A certain number of governments expressed their strong opposition to the obligatory principle so far as large-scale resettlement projects were concerned, a smaller number extending that opposition to the whole or part of the operational budget as well.

The Council approved the draft Constitution as amended at its third session and transmitted it to the General Assembly.¹ The Council also transmitted to the General Assembly the following resolutions:

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

TRANSMITS to the General Assembly the report of the ad hoc Committee of Finances of the International Refugee Organization.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

HAVING reviewed the constitution of the International Refugee Organization in the light of the comments thereon by Members of the United Nations; and

HAVING considered the report of the Committee on the Finances of the International Refugee Organization established under resolution of the Council of 21 June 1946 and the comments thereon of Members of the United Nations; and

HAVING taken into account the draft report of the Secretary-General on the initiation of the work of the IRO; and

CONSIDERING that all possible measures should be taken to expedite the establishment of the International Refugee Organization, to provide for an orderly transfer of functions to it from existing organizations, and to ensure, in the period previous to the coming into effective operation of the Organization, the maximum of effort for the accomplishment of these purposes;

REQUESTS the Secretary-General, pending the establishment of the Preparatory Commission referred to in the annexed interim arrangement, to take such further steps as may be appropriate to plan, in consultation with UNRRA and the IGC, the initiation of the work of the IRO; and

TRANSMITS the following draft resolution to the General Assembly:

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY,

NOTING that action has been taken pursuant to the resolution concerning refugees and displaced persons adopted by the General Assembly on 12 February 1946, as follows:

(a) The establishment by the Economic and Social Council of a Special Committee on Refugees and Displaced Persons under a resolution of the Council of 16 February 1946;

(b) The making of a report by the special Committee to the second session of the Council;

(c) The adoption of a draft Constitution for an International Refugee Organization and the creation of a Committee on the Finances of the International Refugee Organization by the Council under a resolution of the Council of 21 June 1946;

(d) The circulation to Members of the United Nations for their comments of the draft Constitution and the report of the Committee on Finances;

(e) The final approval by the Council of the constitution and of a provisional budget for the first financial year, the adoption by the Council of an arrangement for a preparatory commission, and the transmittal of both these instruments to the General Assembly, under a resolution of the Council of 3 October 1946;

Having considered the constitution of the International Refugee Organization and the arrangement for a preparatory commission as approved by the Economic and Social Council;

Considering that every effort should be made to provide for the early establishment of the International Refugee Organization and the provision of measures during the interim period designed to facilitate such establishment,

(a) Approves the Constitution of the International Refugee Organization and the Arrangement for a preparatory commission as annexed hereto;

(b) Requests the Secretary-General to open these two instruments for signature and, in the case of the constitution, to open it for signature either with or without reservation as to subsequent acceptance;

(c) Urges Members of the United Nations to sign these two instruments and, where constitutional procedures permit, to sign the constitution without reservation as to subsequent acceptance;

(d) Authorizes the Secretary-General to make such staff available to the Preparatory Commission as may be deemed necessary and desirable.

The General Assembly approved, in an amended form, the Constitution of the International Refugee Organization, including provisional budgets for administrative and operational expenses.¹

9. INTERNATIONAL HEALTH CONFERENCE

In accordance with a resolution of the Council of February 15, 1946, a Preparatory Technical Committee consisting of experts appointed in their personal capacities met in Paris in March 1946 to prepare the documentation for an International Health Conference. This resolution envisaged the establishment of a single International Health Organization, and the Technical Preparatory Committee reached agreement on a draft for the constitution of such an organization.²

The International Health Conference called by the Council, in accordance with resolutions adopted on February 15 and June 11, 1946, met in New York from June 19 to July 22.

The Conference established the following instruments:

(a) Final Act of the International Health Conference, incorporating a resolution regarding the activities of the League of Nations Health Organization;

(b) Constitution of the World Health Organization;

(c) Arrangement concluded by the Governments represented at the International Health Conference establishing an Interim Commission of the World Health Organization;

(d) Protocol concerning the Office international d'hygiène publique.

At its third session, the Council adopted the following resolutions on September 17, 1946:

In accordance with the resolutions of the Council of 15 February and 11 June 1946, the International Health Conference met in New York to establish a single International Health Organization, and adopted the following instruments:

Final act of the International Health Conference.

Constitution of the World Health Organization.

Arrangement concluded by the Governments represented at the International Health Conference establishing an Interim Commission of the World Health Organization. Protocol concerning the Office international d'hygiène publique.

The Economic and Social Council notes with satisfaction the completion and signature of the Constitution of the World Health Organization, and recognizes the importance of bringing it into effective operation as soon as possible.

The Economic and Social Council also notes with satisfaction the establishment of the Interim Commission of the World Health Organization, and recognizes the desirability of transferring to the Organization or to its Interim Commission as soon as possible the functions and activities of the League of Nations Health Organization and the Office international d'hygiène publique, and the health functions performed by UNRRA in respect to the International Sanitary Conventions.

THEREFORE,

The Economic and Social Council requests the General Assembly:

1. To recommend to all Members of the United Nations the acceptance by them of the constitution of the World Health Organization at the earliest possible date;

2. To instruct the Secretary-General to take the necessary steps, as contemplated by the Final Act of the International Health Conference, to effect the transfer of the functions and activities of the League of Nations Health Organization which have been assumed by the United Nations to the Interim Commission of the World Health Organization;

3. To recommend to Members of the United Nations, and in particular those Members parties to the Rome Agreement of 1907 constituting the Office international d'hygiène publique, the acceptance by them at the earliest possible date of the Protocol of the International Health Conference concerning the Office international d'hygiène publique;

4. In response to the application of the Interim Commission, to approve a grant or loan of $300,000 by the United Nations for the purpose of financing the activities of the Interim Commission from the commencement of its work to the end of the financial year 1946, and to approve the inclusion of $1,000,000 in the budget of the United Nations for the financial year 1947 for the purpose of financing through a further grant or loan the activities of the Interim Commission or the World Health Organization during that year;

5. To authorize the Secretary-General to transmit any Assembly recommendations in pursuance under paragraphs 1 and 3 above to all States who, whether Members of the United Nations or not, sent representatives or observers to the International Health Conference.

These recommendations were adopted by the General Assembly on December 14, 1946.

Y. NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATION

1. COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENTS FOR CONSULTATION WITH NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS

The General Assembly on February 16, 1946, recommended:

(a) that the Economic and Social Council should, as soon as possible, adopt suitable arrangements enabling the World Federation of Trade Unions and the International Co-operative Alliance as well as other international non-governmental organizations whose experience the Economic and Social Council will find necessary to use, to collaborate for purposes of consultation with the Economic and Social Council.

(b) that the Economic and Social Council should likewise adopt as soon as possible suitable arrangements enabling the American Federation of Labor as well as other national and regional non-governmental organizations whose experience the Economic and Social Council will find necessary to use, to collaborate for purposes of consultation with the Economic and Social Council.

The Council took note of this recommendation, and at the first session appointed a Committee consisting of members of the Council for China, Cuba, France, Greece, Lebanon, Peru, the Ukrainian S.S.R., the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom, the United States, and Yugoslavia, in addition to the President of the Committee.

This Committee was instructed to submit:

(a) detailed proposals to the next session of the Council to implement the recommendation of the General Assembly regarding international, national and regional non-governmental organizations; and

(b) in particular, proposals to implement the recommendation of the General Assembly regarding the organizations specifically mentioned in the resolution.

2. FIRST REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE

The report of the Committee on Arrangements for Consultation with Non-Governmental Organizations, was adopted by the Council at the second session on June 21, 1946. It stated that arrangements for consultation would be made with a non-governmental organization provided that the organization fulfilled certain requirements. It should be concerned with matters falling within the competence of the Economic and Social Council, its aims and purposes should be in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations, it should represent a substantial proportion of the organized persons within the particular field of interest in which it operated and it should have authority to speak for its members through its authorized representatives.

With regard to national organizations, the report recommended that they should normally present their views through their respective governments or through international non-governmental organizations to which they belonged. However, they might be eligible for consultation if they covered a field not covered by any international organization, or had special experience. In determining the arrangements for consultation, consideration would be given to the degree of assistance which might be expected from an organization in carrying out the tasks set out in Chapter IX of the Charter.

The report provided that the arrangements for consultation would not be such as to grant to non-governmental organizations the same rights of participation accorded to States not members of the Council or to specialized agencies. Consultation would take place, on the one hand, to secure expert information or advice and, on the other hand, to enable organizations which represented important elements of public opinion to express their views. In order to avoid duplication of consultation, particularly with reference to specialized agencies, the Council would take into account the relations between these agencies and non-governmental organizations.

Organizations would be divided into three categories, which were as follows:

(a) Organizations which had a basic interest in most of the activities of the Council, and were closely linked with the economic or social life of the areas which they represented,

(b) Organizations which had a special competence but were concerned specifically with only a few of the fields of activity covered by the Council;

(c) Organizations which were primarily concerned with the development of public opinion and with the dissemination of information.

Organizations in category (a), the report set forth, might send observers to all public meetings of the Council and circulate to members of the Council written communications, and they might be invited by the Council to consult with a standing committee if the Council so desired or the organization requested such consultation. It was also provided that upon recommendation of the standing committee, the Council as a whole might receive representatives of organizations in category (a) for the purpose of hearing their views.

Organizations in category (b) and (c) might also send observers to public meetings of the Council. Their communications, however, would be placed on a list and would be distributed only on the request of a member of the Council. They might be invited by the Council to consult with a committee appointed for that purpose if the Council so desired or the organization specifically requested such consultation.

In pursuance of the General Assembly resolution, the Council decided to place the World Federation of Trade Unions, the International Co-operative Alliance and the American Federation of Labor in category (a).

Organizations in category (a) would normally consult directly with the various commissions themselves. Those in categories (b) and (c) would normally be linked for consultation purposes with a particular commission or commissions and would be free to consult with these organizations either directly or through a committee established for that purpose.

This report, adopted by the Council on June 21, 1946, also set up a new Committee under the same name as the old one but with a smaller membership, being composed of the President and five members of the Council. The five members elected were China, France, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States. The Committee was to be assisted by the Assistant Secretaries-General for Economic and Social Affairs respectively. Its terms of reference, under this decision, were to "review applications for consultative status submitted by non-governmental organizations, and make recommendations to the Council."

3. SECOND REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE

The second report of the Committee on Arrangements for Consultation with Non-Governmental Organizations to the Economic and Social Council was approved by the Council on October 1, 1946. In this Report the Committee recommended that the Council should give consultative status to the International Chamber of Commerce under category (a). Certain representatives objected to this proposal on the ground that there was a Spanish branch of the International Chamber of Commerce and that the list of vice-presidents included a Spanish vice-president. The majority, however, assented to the view that these arrangements were only nominal, and the Council approved this recommendation of the Committee.

In view of the numerous applications which had been received, the likelihood that many additional applications would be made, and the need to consider applications as a whole, the Committee came to the conclusion that it should not proceed to make recommendations on the various other applications during the third session of the Council. It recommended that the decision on other applications be postponed until the next session. The Committee proposed that it should meet as a working party between the third and fourth sessions.

The Committee also stated certain general principles (based on the Council's decision of June 21, 1946) which it would follow in its further consideration of the applications received from non-governmental organizations, particularly in regard to organizations having the same views on particular subjects, the periodic review of the grants of consultative status, and the acceptance of national organizations.

After the Committee had completed its work under its original terms of reference the Council decided on September 28 that the Committee, in addition to its function of examining and making recommendations on applications for consultative status submitted by non-governmental organizations, should also be the standing committee to carry on consultations with organizations given consultative status. In accordance with this new function the Committee, on October 2, 1946, consulted with the World Federation of Trade Unions on the arrangements for consultation. After a full exchange of views the President of the World Federation of Trade Unions stated that he would recommend to his Executive Committee that the working arrangements as outlined in the meeting should be put into operation in the hope that they would prove fully satisfactory.

On December 15, 1946, the General Assembly passed a resolution recommending to the Economic and Social Council that it give the World Federation of Trade Unions the right to submit to the Council questions for insertion in the provisional agenda, in accordance with the procedure applicable to specialized agencies. It also expressed agreement with the general principle that all non-governmental organizations in Category (a) should receive equal treatment in respect of consultative arrangements with the Council.¹

At its fourth session the Economic and Social Council amended its rules of procedure to provide for the submission of questions for insertion in the provisional agenda by non-governmental organizations placed in Category (a).

The amended rules of procedure adopted by the Council provided for an Agenda Committee, composed of the President, the two Vice-Presidents and two other members of the Council, elected at each session, to consider the provisional agenda and make recommendations on it to the Council at the first meeting of each session. Non-governmental organizations in Category (a), as well as Members of the United Nations and specialized agencies which had requested the inclusion of an item in the provisional agenda, were to be entitled to present their views at any meeting of the Agenda Committee at which the inclusion of the item was discussed. The Council elected Norway and Canada as members of the Agenda Committee.

The World Federation of Trade Unions requested that the question of guarantees for the exercise and development of trade union rights should be placed on the agenda of the fourth session of the Economic and Social Council, and submitted a draft resolution on the subject. The American Federation of Labor also submitted a memorandum on the subject, and a resolution amending that of the WFTU.

The Council decided to suspend the application of its newly adopted rule of procedure providing for the reference of such items to the Agenda Committee, and to admit this item to its agenda.

After considerable discussion, the Council adopted a United Kingdom proposal to transmit these documents to the International Labour Organisation with the request that the matter should be considered at the Organisation's forthcoming session and a report sent to the Council for consideration at its next session. The U.S.S.R. representative objected to referring the WFTU, which represented many millions of people, to a specialized agency; it should, he thought, have the right to communicate directly with the Council. He proposed that the item should simply be deferred to the Council's next session. The Council, however, decided as above.

The Council also decided to transmit the documents to the Commission on Human Rights in order that the Commission might consider the aspects of the subject which might appropriately form part of the Bill or Declaration on Human Rights.

The Committee on Arrangements for Consultation with Non-Governmental Organizations met on February 25, 26, and 27, 1947, and considered the applications received up to February 4, 1947, from non-governmental organizations for consultative status with the Economic and Social Council.

In addition to its recommendations on individual applications, the Committee made certain general recommendations of principle.

The Committee's recommendations were adopted, with some amendments by the Council, on March 28, 1947.

The Council resolved:

1. That the international non-governmental organizations should be excluded from relationship under Article 71, if they have legally constituted branches in Spain whose policies are determined and controlled by the Franco Government.

2. That international non-governmental organizations should be eligible for consultative relationship:

(a) If they have only individual members in Spain who are not organized into a legally constituted branch;

(b) If the branches in Spain, though properly constituted, have a purely humanitarian character and their policies are not determined and controlled by the Franco Government;

(c) If such branches are not active at the present time.

The U.S.S.R. representative had proposed that all non-governmental organizations, including organizations or branches located in Spain, should be excluded from consultative status, but after discussion and consideration of various texts the Council adopted the resolution quoted above.

On the recommendation of the Council NGO Committee the Council decided that in the case of certain organizations, consultative arrangements should not be made, since their work appeared to fall entirely within the field of activity of one of the specialized agencies or other inter-governmental organizations. It also decided that decisions should be made first on international non-governmental organizations and that consultative status should, therefore, not be granted to national organizations at the time of its fourth session.

The Council took note of the principle stated in the previous report of the Council NGO Committee that, where possible, organizations having in general the same views on particular subjects should consider the possibility of forming liaison committees to represent them as a whole, and decided that the Liaison Committee of Women's International Organizations should be the recognized consultative body for its eight affiliated organizations on subjects on which there was an identity of view. The Council would, however, make separate arrangements for consultation with the eight organizations because of their special interests and experience in fields other than those covered by the Liaison Committee.

The U.S.S.R. representative objected to certain of the recommendations made by the Committee and proposed that the Council direct the Secretariat to screen applications on the basis of the criteria already adopted by the Council in its resolution of June 21, 1946. The U.S.S.R. representative also proposed that the Secretariat should be directed to send to the Members of the United Nations for information a list of the non-governmental organizations selected by the Council NGO Committee after consultation with the non-governmental organizations, and that the Committee's Report and the comments received from Members should be considered at the Council's next session. Other members of the Council felt that such a procedure was unnecessary as the applications had received careful consideration by the Council NGO Committee, whose function it was to examine them, and information concerning the organizations had been circulated. The U.S.S.R. proposal was not adopted.

4. ORGANIZATIONS ADMITTED TO CONSULTATIVE STATUS

The Council admitted the following organizations to consultative status:

The Council decided that the applications from the Catholic International Union for Social Service and the International Union of Catholic Women's Leagues, which had been recommended for consultative status in Category (b) by the Council NGO Committee, should be reconsidered at the next session of the Council so that further information could be obtained to show if the two organizations fulfilled the requirements regarding members in Spain. It decided that the application of the Jewish Agency, which had been similarly recommended, should also be reconsidered at the next session so that further information could be obtained to show if it was a national or an international organization. The Council NGO Committee decided to reconsider at a later date a number of applications on which it felt unable to make recommendations because the organizations had been recently organized or because further information concerning them was desired.

ANNEX III.

RULES OF PROCEDURE OF THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

I. SESSIONS

Rule 1

The Economic and Social Council shall hold at least three sessions a year. One of these sessions shall be held shortly before the opening of the regular session of the General Assembly.

Rule 2

Sessions shall be held at a date fixed by the Council at a previous meeting.

Rule 3

A session of the Council shall also be held within thirty days of the request thereof:

- by a majority of its members;
- by the General Assembly; or
- by the Security Council, acting in pursuance of Article 41 of the Charter.

Rule 4

A session of the Council shall also be held if the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council, or any Member of the United Nations, or a specialized agency¹ requests a session and the President of the Council agrees to the request. If the President does not agree, he shall, within four days of the receipt of the request, inform the other members of the Council of the request and of his refusal and shall at the same time enquire whether or not they support the request for a session. If, within eight days of this enquiry, a majority of the members of the ¹ When the term "specialized agency" is used in these rules, it refers to specialized agencies brought into relationship with the United Nations.

Council explicitly concurs in the request, the President shall summon the Council to meet within the next fifteen days.

Rule 5

The President of the Council, with the concurrence of the Vice-Presidents, may also call a session of the Council and fix the date thereof.

Rule 6

Each session shall be held at the seat of the United Nations unless in pursuance of a previous decision of the Council or at the request of a majority of its members another place is designated.

Rule 7

The President of the Council shall notify the members, through the Secretary-General, of the date of the first meeting of each session. Such notification shall be sent:

- (a) at least eight days in advance, when a session is called upon the request of the Security Council acting in pursuance of Article 41 of the Charter;
- (b) at least twelve days in advance in cases referred to under Rule 4; and
- (c) at least twenty-one days in advance in all other cases.

Rule 8

The Council may decide at any session to adjourn temporarily and resume its meetings at a later date.

II. AGENDA

Rule 9

The provisional agenda for each session shall be drawn up by the Secretary-General in consultation with the President, and shall be communicated to the members of the Council, all other Members of the United Nations, to the specialized agencies and to the non-governmental organizations in Category A¹, together with the notice convening the Council.

Rule 10

The provisional agenda shall include:

- (a) all items proposed by the Council at a previous meeting;
- (b) all items proposed by any Member of the United Nations;
- (c) all items proposed by the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council, a specialized agency or a non-governmental organization in Category A.

Rule 11

Before the Secretary-General places an item proposed by a specialized agency or a non-governmental organization of the type referred to in Rule 10 upon the provisional agenda, he shall carry out with the agency or organization concerned such preliminary consultation as may be necessary.

Rule 12

The first item on the provisional agenda of any session of the Council shall be the adoption of the agenda.

Rule 13

The Council shall set up an Agenda Committee composed of the President, the two Vice-Presidents and two other members who shall be elected at each session of the Council to hold office until replaced at the next session. The President shall be the chairman of the Agenda Committee.

Rule 14

The Agenda Committee shall prior to each session consider the provisional agenda and make recommendations thereon to the Council at the first meeting of the session, including suggestions as to the inclusion or deferment of items and the order in which they shall be considered. A Member of the United Nations, a specialized agency or a non-governmental organization in Category A, which has requested the inclusion of an item in the provisional agenda, shall be entitled to present its views through its representative at any meeting of the Agenda Committee at which the question of the inclusion of the item is discussed.

Rule 15

The Council may revise the agenda. If the session has been summoned in accordance with Rules 3, 4 and 5, priority shall be given to those items which have occasioned the session.

III. REPRESENTATIVES, ADVISERS AND CREDENTIALS

Rule 16

Each representative on the Council may be accompanied by such alternate representatives and technical advisers as he may require.

Rule 17

The credentials of representatives, and the names of alternate representatives, shall be submitted to the Secretary-General, and the President and the Vice-Presidents shall examine them and submit their report to the Council.

IV. PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENTS

Rule 18

The Council shall elect a President, a first Vice-President, and a second Vice-President, from among the representatives of its members.

Rule 19

The President and Vice-Presidents shall hold office until their successors are elected at the first meeting of the Council on or after the first of January in each year and shall be eligible for re-election.

Rule 20

If the President is absent from a meeting or any part thereof, the first Vice-President, or in the latter's absence, the second Vice-President shall preside.

Rule 21

If the President ceases to be a representative of a member of the Council or is incapacitated, the first Vice-President shall serve for the unexpired term. If the first Vice-President ceases to be a representative of a member of the Council or is incapacitated, the second Vice-President shall take his place.

Rule 22

A Vice-President acting as President shall have the same powers and duties as the President.

Rule 23

In the case of a Member of the Council which is for the time being represented by the President, an alternate delegate shall at the discretion of the President be permitted to participate in the proceedings and to vote in the Council. In such a case the President should not exercise his right to vote.

V. COMMITTEES OF THE COUNCIL

Rule 24

At each session, the Council may set up such committees as it deems necessary and refer to them any questions on the agenda for study and report. Such committees, composed of members of the Council, may be authorized to sit while the Council is not in session.

VI. SECRETARIAT

Rule 25

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the Council. He may authorize a deputy to act in his place at meetings of the Council.

Rule 26

The Secretary-General shall provide and direct the staff required by the Council, its committees and such subsidiary bodies as may be established by it.

Rule 27

The Secretary-General shall be responsible for keeping the members of the Council informed of any questions which may be brought before it for consideration.

Rule 28

V. The Trusteeship Council Including the United Nations Functions under Chapter XI of the Charter

The Charter of the United Nations contains three chapters concerned with the destiny of peoples who have not yet attained their independence or self-government. Chapter XI of the Charter deals with Non-Self-Governing Territories in general, and Chapters XII and XIII deal in particular with the International Trusteeship System, which is applicable to only some of the Non-Self-Governing Territories.

A. INFORMATION FROM NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

1. PROVISIONS OF THE CHARTER

Chapter XI, the Declaration Regarding Non-Self-Governing Territories, is a contribution to the general principles of international accountability in respect of peoples who have no full measure of self-government. The Declaration reads:

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories, and, to this end:

a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;

b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;

c. to further international peace and security;

d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and

e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

2. THE BACKGROUND OF CHAPTER XI

The history of Chapter XI goes back to the last century, to a gradually developing sense of responsibility on the part of the international community toward those peoples who were not yet independent. The struggle against slavery and the slave trade, growing out of this same sense of responsibility, led to international co-operation in colonial affairs. The Congo Basin Treaties signed at the Berlin Conference of 1885 and the Mandates System established under the League of Nations at the end of the First World War marked new steps in this direction. However, international responsibility remained confined to a mere fourteen territories in Africa, Asia and in the Pacific of which Germany and Turkey had been deprived at the end of the war.

During the Second World War the concept of international responsibility took on more definite shape. The Atlantic Charter, in 1941, expressed concern for the well-being of "all men of all lands." At the Yalta Conference, in 1945, it was agreed to undertake discussions on the principles and machinery of trusteeship. The United Nations Conference on International Organization held at San Francisco in the spring of 1945 considered articles on dependent territories. Their discussion resulted in the Declaration Regarding Non-Self-Governing Territories which is now an integral part of the Charter of the United Nations.

3. THE IMPLEMENTATION OF CHAPTER XI

The General Assembly of the United Nations, during the first part of its first session in London, in February 1946, with a view to implementing the Declaration Regarding Non-Self-Governing Territories, passed unanimously Resolution 9 (I) entitled "Non-Self-Governing Peoples." This drew attention to the fact that the obligations assumed under Chapter XI were already in full force and not contingent upon the conclusion of Trusteeship Agreements or the creation of the Trusteeship Council (Chapters XII and XIII of the Charter). The resolution read:

NON-SELF-GOVERNING PEOPLES

The United Nations, meeting in its first General Assembly, is keenly aware of the problems and political aspirations of the peoples who have not yet attained a full measure of self-government and who are not directly represented here.

Chapters XI, XII and XIII of the Charter recognize the problems of the non-self-governing peoples as of vital concern to the peace and general welfare of the world community.

By Chapter XI, all the Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount. They accept, as a sacred trust, the obligation to promote to the utmost the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories. To that end they accept certain specific obligations, including the obligation to develop self-government and to assist the inhabitants in the progressive development of their free political institutions.

By Chapters XII and XIII, the Charter provides for the establishment of an international trusteeship system, the basic objectives of which are, among others, to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of trust territories, and to promote their progressive development towards self-government or independence.

The General Assembly regrets that the Trusteeship Council cannot be brought into being at this first part of the first session, not because of any lack of desire to do so but because, before the Trusteeship Council can be established, trusteeship agreements must be concluded.

The General Assembly holds the view that any delay in putting into effect the system of international trusteeship prevents the implementation of the principles of the trusteeship system, as declared in the Charter, and deprives the populations of such territories as may be brought under the trusteeship system of the opportunity of enjoying the advantages arising from the implementation of these principles.

With a view to expediting the conclusion of these agreements and the establishment of the Trusteeship Council, the Preparatory Commission recommended that the General Assembly should call on those Members of the United Nations which are now administering territories held under mandate to undertake practical steps, in concert with the other States directly concerned, for the implementation of Article 79 of the Charter.

Without waiting for the recommendation of the Preparatory Commission to be considered by the General Assembly, the Members of the United Nations administering territories held under mandate took the initiative in making declarations in regard to these territories.

THEREFORE

WITH RESPECT TO CHAPTER XI OF THE CHARTER, THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY:

1. DRAWS ATTENTION to the fact that the obligations accepted under Chapter XI of the Charter by all Members of the United Nations are in no way contingent upon the conclusion of trusteeship agreements or upon the bringing into being of the Trusteeship Council and are, therefore, already in full force.

2. REQUESTS the Secretary-General to include in his annual report on the work of the Organization, as provided for in Article 98 of the Charter, a statement summarizing such information as may have been transmitted to him by Members of the United Nations under Article 73 (e) of the Charter relating to economic, social and educational conditions in the territories for which they are responsible other than those to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

WITH RESPECT TO CHAPTERS XII AND XIII OF THE CHARTER, THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY:

3. WELCOMES the declarations, made by certain States administering territories now held under mandate, of an intention to negotiate trusteeship agreements in respect of some of those territories and, in respect of Transjordan, to establish its independence.

4. INVITES the States administering territories now held under mandate to undertake practical steps, in concert with the other States directly concerned, for the implementation of Article 79 of the Charter (which provides for the conclusion of agreements on the terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system), in order to submit these agreements for approval, preferably not later than during the second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

IN CONCLUSION,
THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY:

5. EXPECTS that the realization of the objectives of Chapters XI, XII and XIII will make possible the attainment of the political, economic, social and educational aspirations of non-self-governing peoples.

The General Assembly thus requested the Secretary-General to include in his annual report on the organization a statement summarizing such information as might have been transmitted to him by Members of the United Nations under Article 73 (e) of the Charter relating to economic, social and educational conditions in Non-Self-Governing Territories other than those which might fall under the Trusteeship System as stated in Chapters XII and XIII.

In reply to a letter by the Secretary-General, written in compliance with this directive, a number of Member Governments¹ stated their views regarding certain problems raised in the letter which arose out of the General Assembly's action. The replies received from Members up to September 20, 1946, as well as a general exposition of the problems of transmission and organization of information, were set forth in a report by the Secretary-General which was submitted to the General Assembly during the second part of its first session in New York in October 1946.

These problems of transmission of information under Article 73 (e) were discussed by a Sub-Committee² of the Fourth (Trusteeship) Committee of the General Assembly, as well as by the full Committee and by the Assembly itself in plenary session.

It was agreed to refrain, for the time being, from attempting a definition of the term "Non-Self-Governing Territories", but to note the territories which the governments themselves had enumerated as coming within the scope of Chapter XI.

The territories enumerated by the governments were the following:

It was further agreed that the information transmitted should reach the Secretary-General by June 30 of each year, and should be of such a nature as to cover economic, social and cultural conditions as requested in Article 73 (e), while information on political progress, although not mandatory, would be desirable and of great importance. Such information was to be summarized, classified and analysed by the Secretary-General, and to be examined by an ad hoc committee of representatives of Members transmitting information and of representatives of Members elected by the General Assembly. The ad hoc committee, elected for one year, was to be convened by the Secretary-General before the next opening session of the General Assembly.

Resolution 66 (I) adopted by the General Assembly was entitled "Transmission of Information under Article 73 (e) of the Charter." After noting the Territories in respect of which information had been transmitted or promised (see above), it continued as follows:

The value of the association of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the work of the specialized agencies as a means of attaining the objectives of Chapter XI of the Charter has been stressed.

The procedures to be followed by the Organization in connection with the information transmitted by Members regarding Non-Self-Governing Peoples have been carefully examined.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, THEREFORE,

1. INVITES the Members transmitting information to send to the Secretary-General by 30 June of each year the most recent information which is at their disposal;

2. RECOMMENDS that the information transmitted in the course of 1947 by Members of the United Nations under Article 73 (e) of the Charter should be summarized, analysed and classified by the Secretary-General and included in his report to the second session of the General Assembly, in order that, in the light of the experience gained, the General Assembly may be able to decide whether any other procedure may be desirable for dealing with such information in future years;

3. RECOMMENDS that the Secretary-General communicate to the specialized agencies the information transmitted, with a view to making all relevant data available to their expert and deliberative bodies;

4. INVITES the Secretary-General to convene, some weeks before the opening of the second session of the General Assembly, an ad hoc Committee composed in equal numbers of representatives of the Members transmitting information under Article 73 (e) of the Charter and of representatives of Members elected, by the General Assembly at this session, on the basis of an equitable geographical distribution;

5. INVITES the Secretary-General to request the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, and the World Health Organization and the International Trade Organization, when constituted, to send representatives in an advisory capacity to the meeting of the ad hoc committee;

6. INVITES the ad hoc Committee to examine the Secretary-General's summary and analysis of the information transmitted under Article 73 (e) of the Charter with a view to aiding the General Assembly in its consideration of this information, and with a view to making recommendations to the General Assembly regarding the procedures to be followed in the future and the means of ensuring that the advice, expert knowledge and experience of the specialized agencies are used to the best advantage.

The General Assembly then elected Brazil, China, Cuba, Egypt, India, the Philippines, the U.S.S.R. and Uruguay to serve on the ad hoc committee together with Australia, Belgium, Denmark, France, the Netherlands, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States, the latter group of States having transmitted or having expressed their intention of transmitting information in respect of Non-Self-Governing Territories under their jurisdiction.

The ad hoc Committee was to meet for the first time before the opening of the second session of the General Assembly of the United Nations in New York in September 1947. The Secretary-General, as directed by the General Assembly, invited the specialized agencies to send representatives who, in an advisory capacity, would attend the meeting.

The task of the ad hoc Committee was to be to examine the information transmitted by Member Governments, as summarized and analyzed by the Secretary-General. The Committee was to examine the summaries and analyses with a view to aiding the General Assembly in its own consideration of such information; to recommend procedures to be followed in the future; and to attempt to find the best means of ensuring to Non-Self-Governing Territories the full use of the advice, experience and expert knowledge which the specialized agencies could put at their disposal.

B. THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

The principles of Chapter XI are applicable to all Territories "whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government." For some of these Territories, however, wider obligations are provided by the International Trusteeship System as outlined in Chapters XII and XIII of the Charter.

1. CHARTER PROVISIONS¹ FOR THE INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

The basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System are:

(a) to further international peace and security;

(b) to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Trust Territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each Territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each Trusteeship Agreement;

(c) to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and

(d) to insure equal treatment in social, economic and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives. . . .

The Trusteeship System applies to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of individual Trusteeship Agreements:

- (a) territories now held under mandate;
- (b) territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and

(c) territories voluntarily placed under the system by States responsible for their administration.

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the Trusteeship System, including any alteration or amendment, are to be agreed upon by the States directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations. They must be approved by the General Assembly or, in the case of strategic areas, by the Security Council. Each Trusteeship Agreement includes the terms under which the Trust Territory is to be administered and designates the authority which will exercise the administration of the Trust Territory. Such authority is called the Administering Authority and may be one or more States or the United Nations itself.

In any Trusteeship Agreement there may be designated a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the Trust Territory to which the agreement applies. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of Trusteeship Agreements and of their alteration or amendment, are exercised by the Security Council. The objectives of the Trusteeship System, as prescribed in Article 76 of the Charter, apply equally to the peoples of strategic areas. In performing its functions relating to political, economic, social and educational matters in the strategic areas, the Security Council, subject to the conditions of the Trusteeship Agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, is to avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council.

It is the duty of the Administering Authority to ensure that the Trust Territory plays its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the Administering Authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities and assistance from the Trust Territory in carrying out its obligations towards the Security Council, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the Trust Territory.

The functions of the United Nations with regard to Trusteeship Agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the Trusteeship Agreements and of their alteration or amendment, are exercised by the General Assembly. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, assists the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

2. CHARTER PROVISIONS FOR THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

The Trusteeship Council consists of the following Members of the United Nations:

(a) those Members administering Trust Territories;

(b) such of those permanent members of the Security Council as are not administering Trust Territories; and

(c) as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer Trust Territories and those which do not.

Each member of the Trusteeship Council designates one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

The principal functions and powers of the Trusteeship Council, under the authority of the General Assembly are:

(a) to consider reports submitted by the Administering Authority;

(b) to accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the Administering Authority;

(c) to provide for periodic visits to the respective Trust Territories at times agreed upon with the Administering Authority; and

(d) to take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the Trusteeship Agreements.

The Trusteeship Council is to formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each Trust Territory, and the Administering Authority for each Trust Territory within the competence of the General Assembly is to make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

The voting and procedure of the Trusteeship Council are defined as follows:

Each member of the Trusteeship Council has one vote. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council are made by a majority of the members present and voting.

The Trusteeship Council adopts its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President. The Trusteeship Council meets as required in accordance with its rules, which include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

The Trusteeship Council is to avail itself, when appropriate, of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

3. THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND THE MANDATES

In accordance with Article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, a number of territories had been placed under mandate in the early years following the First World War. By 1945 some of the territories had achieved independence; the following twelve, however, were still under mandate:

Under mandate to	Name of territory
United Kingdom, New Zealand and Australia (administered by Australia)	Nauru ¹
Australia	New Guinea
Belgium	Ruanda-Urundi
France	Cameroons
	Togoland
Japan	Caroline, Marshall and Marianas Islands ²
New Zealand	Western Samoa
Union of South Africa	South-West Africa ¹
United Kingdom	Cameroons, Togoland, Tanganyika, Palestine ¹

¹ No Trusteeship Agreements exist as yet for these territories.

² By 1945, these islands were under United States Naval Administration.

At its final session in Geneva in 1946 the Assembly of the League of Nations discussed the question of the fulfilment by the League of its responsibilities to the peoples of the mandated territories. On April 18, 1946, the Assembly adopted unanimously, with Egypt abstaining, the following resolution:

THE ASSEMBLY,

RECALLING that Article 22 of the Covenant applies to certain territories placed under mandate the principle that the well-being and development of peoples not yet able to stand alone in the strenuous conditions of the modern world form a sacred trust of civilization:

1. EXPRESSES its satisfaction with the manner in which the organs of the League have performed the functions entrusted to them with respect to the Mandates System and in particular pays tribute to the work accomplished by the Mandates Commission;

2. RECALLS the role of the League in assisting Iraq to progress from its status under an "A" Mandate to a condition of complete independence, welcomes the termination of the mandated status of Syria, Lebanon and Transjordan, which have, since the last session of the Assembly, become independent members of the world community;

3. RECOGNIZES that, on the termination of the League's existence, its functions with respect to the mandated territories will come to an end, but notes that Chapters XI, XII and XIII of the Charter of the United Nations embody principles corresponding to those declared in Article 22 of the Covenant of the League;

4. TAKES NOTE of the expressed intentions of the Members of the League now administering territories under mandate to continue to administer them for the well-being and development of the peoples concerned in accordance with the obligations contained in the respective mandates, until other arrangements have been agreed between the United Nations and the respective mandatory Powers.

4. THE INTERIM PERIOD

The meetings of the Executive Committee, the Preparatory Commission and the first part of the first session of the General Assembly of the United Nations all reflected the desire of the Members of the United Nations to set up the Trusteeship Council at the earliest possible date. It was generally recognized that the mandated territories would probably be among the first to be transferred to the International Trusteeship System by means of individual Trusteeship Agreements.

In the resolution on Non-Self-Governing Peoples of February 9, 1946, cited above, the General Assembly expressed regret that the Trusteeship Council could not be brought into being at that time; recognized that any delay in putting into effect the International Trusteeship System would prevent the implementation of the principles of the system and would deprive the populations of the Trust Territories of its advantages; and noted that the Preparatory Commission had recommended that the General Assembly should call upon those Members of the United Nations now administering territories held under mandate to undertake practical steps in concert with the other States directly concerned to place them under the International Trusteeship System. Before the recommendation of the Preparatory Commission had been considered by the General Assembly, several of the mandatory States had in fact declared their intention to negotiate Trusteeship Agreements for the purpose of placing mandated territories under the International Trusteeship System.

The resolution of the General Assembly welcomed these declarations, and invited all the States administering mandated territories to undertake the necessary steps to negotiate the Trusteeship Agreements by means of which the mandated territories would be placed under the International Trusteeship System, with a view to the submission of these agreements for approval, preferably not later than during the second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

In view of the unequivocal expression, in the resolution on Non-Self-Governing Peoples, of the General Assembly's desire that the establishment of the Trusteeship Council should be expedited, letters, dated June 29, 1946, were addressed by the Secretary-General to the States administering territories then held under mandate, i.e., Australia, Belgium, France, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and the United Kingdom, calling their attention to the resolution.

In reply, the Governments of Australia, Belgium, France, New Zealand and the United Kingdom stated that they had either already prepared draft Trusteeship Agreements, or were in process of preparing the terms of such Agreements, with respect to the mandated territories under their control, and expressed the hope that they would be able to submit such Trusteeship Agreements to the General Assembly before or during the second part of its first session. The Government of the Union of South Africa requested that a statement on the outcome of its consultations with the peoples of South-West Africa as to the future status of the mandated territory, and as to the implementation to be given to the wishes thus expressed be included in the agenda for the second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

5. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

The essential conditions for the establishment of the Trusteeship Council and for bringing the International Trusteeship System into operation, as envisaged in Chapters XII and XIII of the Charter, were fulfilled in the course of the second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

a. The First Trust Territories

As a result of the approval by the General Assembly on December 13, 1946, of the eight Trusteeship Agreements which had been submitted by five of the mandatory Powers with regard to territories administered by them under mandate, the International Trusteeship System came into effect. The responsibility for supervising the administration of the first eight Trust Territories was thereby vested in the General Assembly and, under its authority, in the Trusteeship Council.¹

The Territories thus far placed under Trusteeship by means of individual Trusteeship Agreements are:²

- a) New Guinea, administered by Australia;
- b) Ruanda - Urundi, administered by Belgium;
- c) Togoland and Cameroons, administered by France;
- d) Western Samoa, administered by New Zealand; and
- e) Tanganyika, Togoland and Cameroons, administered by the United Kingdom.

In each of these first eight Trusteeship Agreements a single State was designated as the Administering Authority. It is to be noted, in this connection, that the Charter, in Article 81, also makes provision whereby a Trusteeship Agreement may designate more than one State, or the United Nations itself, as the Administering Authority.

With respect to the first Trust Territories, the former mandatory powers, which had administered them under League of Nations mandates, had proposed Trusteeship Agreements for consideration and approval by the General Assembly, during the second part of its first session. The General Assembly, through its Fourth Committee (Trusteeship) and Sub-Committee 1 of that Committee, examined the proposed Agreements with great care. Numerous proposals for modification of the terms of the Trusteeship Agreements were presented by Members of the United Nations. Some of the suggested modifications were acceptable to the mandatory powers and were incorporated in the Agreements. In some instances the mandatory powers themselves proposed modifications in the light of the discussions in Sub-Committee 1. In other instances, proposed modifications were not acceptable to the mandatory powers and were not included in the Agreements.

A controlling factor in the General Assembly's consideration and approval of the Trusteeship Agreements was the provision in Article 79 of the Charter making it essential that the mandatory power, as a State directly concerned, approve the terms of Trusteeship. Certain of the mandatory powers had submitted proposed Trusteeship Agreements, but they were not obliged to accept any specific modifications thereto. The General Assembly, on the other hand, could propose modifications of the draft Agreements, and could, in its final decision, determine the conditions on which it would approve them. There was no limitation whatsoever on the authority of the General Assembly to approve or reject the proposed Agreements.

With regard to the terms of the eight Agreements already in effect, a number of issues were raised in the course of the General Assembly's discussions. These issues were thoroughly discussed prior to the final approval of the Agreements by the General Assembly. The Trusteeship Agreements as finally approved constitute the basic instruments by means of which the International Trusteeship System is applied to the Trust Territories. The administration of the eight Trust Territories thus created is henceforth to be subject to the international supervision provided for in Chapter XII of the Charter.

² On April 2, 1947 the Security Council approved, after some modification, a draft strategic area Trusteeship Agreement in respect of the Pacific Islands, formerly mandated to Japan, which named the United States of America as the Administering Authority. Due, however, to constitutional requirements, the Agreement could not take effect until it had been approved by the United States Government. See pp. 394 ff.

In general, the terms of the Agreements relate to the following:

(1) Definition of the boundary of each Territory to be placed under the International Trusteeship System.

(2) Designation of the Administering Authority of the Trust Territory.

(3) The obligations of the Administering Authority under Article 76 of the Charter of the United Nations (which sets forth the basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System).

(4) The rights of the Administering Authority in legislation, administration and jurisdiction; in constituting the Trust Territory into a customs, fiscal or administrative union with adjacent territories under the control of the Administering Authority; in establishing naval, military and air bases.

(5) Promotion of the development of political institutions suited to the Trust Territory.

(6) Application of the provisions of general international conventions and recommendations drawn up or to be drawn up by the specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 of the Charter.

(7) Protection of the rights and interests of the inhabitants in land and natural resources.

(8) Equal treatment in social, economic and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations.

(9) Promotion of the educational and cultural development of the inhabitants.

(10) Assurance of freedom of religion and freedom of speech.

(11) Annual reports to the General Assembly by the Administering Authority on the basis of a questionnaire formulated by the Trusteeship Council in accordance with Article 88 of the Charter.

(12) Approval of the terms of the Agreement and of any alteration or amendment thereof by the General Assembly.

b. The Trusteeship Council

In pursuance of Resolution 64 (1) adopted by the General Assembly on December 14, 1946, the Trusteeship Council was established as a principal organ of the United Nations. It was the last such organ to be established. The Council met at Lake Success for its first session on March 26, 1947.

On the basis of the eight Trusteeship Agreements approved by the General Assembly, the Trusteeship Council came into being with ten members. As at present constituted, five of its members are Administering Authorities, namely, Australia, Belgium, France, New Zealand and the United Kingdom. Three of its members, namely, China, the United States and the U.S.S.R., hold membership in accordance with Article 86 of the Charter, by virtue of being permanent members of the Security Council but did not, at the time of the first meeting, administer Trust Territories. The other two members, Iraq and Mexico, were elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly at the second part of its first session, in accordance with Article 86, paragraph 1 (c), of the Charter.

On January 14, 1947, the Secretary-General notified each of the ten members of the Trusteeship Council of the action taken by the General Assembly in approving the eight Trusteeship Agreements and in adopting the resolution calling for the establishment of the Trusteeship Council. He advised them that the first session would open on March 26, and enclosed the provisional agenda for the first session. Each member of the Council was also requested to communicate to the Secretary-General the name of its representative on the Council, who, in accordance with Article 86 of the Charter, should be "a specially qualified person".

Responses to this letter were received from nine of the ten members of the Council and the designated representatives of these nine members sat throughout the first session. The U.S.S.R. did not appoint a representative.¹

All of the Territories which remained under mandate status have now been placed under the Trusteeship System, or are in process of being transferred to it, with the exception of Nauru, Palestine and South-West Africa.

In its resolution on the future status of South-West Africa, adopted on December 14, 1946, the General Assembly recommended that the mandated territory of South-West Africa be placed under the International Trusteeship System and invited the Government of the Union of South Africa to submit for the consideration of the General Assembly a Trusteeship Agreement for that territory.

In respect to Nauru, the representative of Australia, at the 15th plenary meeting of the first part of the General Assembly's first session, announced the intention of his Government to submit a Trusteeship Agreement for this mandated territory. This decision had been concurred in by the Governments of the United Kingdom and of New Zealand, with whom Australia shared the mandate. The Australian representative before the Fourth Committee during the second part of the first session of the General Assembly, reaffirmed the intention of his Government to submit a draft Agreement for Nauru.

A United Nations Special Committee on Palestine was created by a resolution of the General Assembly at its first special session on May 15, 1947.² In accordance with its terms of reference, the Committee went to Palestine in June 1947 to "investigate all questions and issues relevant to the problem of Palestine." The report of the Special Committee was to be considered at the second regular session of the General Assembly in September 1947.

6. OPERATION OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

a. The First Session of the Trusteeship Council

The first session of the Trusteeship Council was held from March 26 to April 28, 1947.

At its first and second meetings, the Trusteeship Council elected Francis B. Sayre (United States) as President, and Sir Carl Berendsen (New Zealand) as Vice-President.

It was decided to hold two regular sessions each year: during the latter half of June and during the latter half of November.

(1) Rules of Procedure

The Council gave detailed consideration to the adoption of its own rules of procedure. At its 22nd meeting, by unanimous vote, it adopted a comprehensive set of rules.³

These rules of procedure govern the manner in which the Trusteeship Council is to perform its function of international supervision. For this reason the Council studied with special care those of its rules relating to the acceptance and examination of petitions, the consideration of annual reports and the conducting of periodic visits to the Trust Territories.

(2) Provisional Questionnaire

The Trusteeship Council formulated and, at its 25th meeting on April 25, adopted a comprehensive provisional questionnaire, which was to form the basis for the first annual reports to be submitted by the Administering Authorities.

The provisional questionnaire was divided into twelve sections, numerous sub-sections and a statistical appendix. The section headings were: brief introductory description, status of the Territory and its inhabitants, international peace and security; maintenance of law and order, political advancement, economic advancement, social advancement, educational advancement, publications, research, suggestions and recommendations, summary and conclusion.

This provisional questionnaire, which was drawn up on the basis of a detailed consideration of drafts on the subject presented by the delegations of France, the United Kingdom and the United States, and by the Secretariat, was to be revised at the second session of the Council. The Administering Authorities, the Economic and Social Council and the specialized agencies were invited by the Trusteeship Council to present any suggestions which they might have for the revision of sections of the questionnaire which dealt with subjects of special concern to them. To the extent necessary, this basic questionnaire was to be adapted to each of the Trust Territories.

² See pp. 301 ff.

³ For the Rules of Procedure see Annex II.

(3) Petitions

According to the terms of the Council's Rules of Procedure, petitions may be submitted in writing or, in certain circumstances, orally, and they can be submitted either through the Administering Authorities or directly to the Secretary-General. In all cases the Administering Authority concerned will be called upon to present its comments on the petitions and the Council will take decisions which will, in due course, be communicated to the petitioners.

During its first session, the Trusteeship Council had before it 26 petitions, two of a general nature and the others referring to specific Trust Territories.

(a) Petitions relating to Tanganyika

Twenty-three of the petitions considered by the Trusteeship Council at its first session were from German, Italian or other residents, or former residents, of the Territory of Tanganyika, or from persons interested in their cases. In all of these petitions the plea advanced was that the German or Italian petitioners be allowed to return to or remain in Tanganyika rather than be repatriated to Germany or Italy, as the Administering Authority—the United Kingdom—proposed to do in the case of many of them. The petitioners asked the Trusteeship Council to intervene in order to prevent what they feared to be their imminent deportation, and in some cases pleaded for the restoration of their property.

The Council examined each of the petitions and adopted detailed resolutions setting forth its conclusions. These resolutions, after noting that the individuals to be excluded from the Territory fell into two categories: namely, those who were Axis sympathizers, and those whose conduct had rendered them liable to deportation irrespective of nationality, approved the general policy of the Administering Authority and decided that no action by the Council was called for at that time. The resolutions also took note of declarations made by the Administering Authority that no persons would be excluded from Tanganyika solely on grounds of nationality; that the great majority of the Italian nationals and a considerable number of the Germans would be permitted to remain in or return to Tanganyika; and that no former South African national would be sent to Germany against his will.

(b) Petition relating to Western Samoa

Another petition confronting the Trusteeship Council at its first session was that received from leaders and representatives of Western Samoa requesting that Western Samoa be granted self-government. The petition further requested "that the unnatural division of the islands of the Samoan group enforced by the three powers¹ in the past without the consent of the Samoans be left in abeyance until a meeting could be arranged between Eastern and Western Samoa" and that New Zealand "will see fit to act as Protector and Advisor to Samoa in the same capacity as England is to Tonga." This petition was transmitted through the Government of New Zealand as the Administering Authority.

The representative of New Zealand informed the Trusteeship Council that his Government was not disposed to discuss the merits of this petition without adequate information being made available to the Council on which to base a decision. He proposed that the examination of the substance of the petition by the Council be deferred until a fact-finding mission could go to Western Samoa on behalf of the Council for the purpose of investigating the subject-matter of the petition.

(c) Visiting Mission to Western Samoa

The Council adopted this proposal and established a special three-member mission for the purpose of visiting Western Samoa during the summer of 1947 in order to investigate the subject of the petition. The three members of this mission were Francis B. Sayre (United States), President of the Trusteeship Council, Pierre Ryckmans, representative of Belgium on the Council, and Senator Eduardo Cruz-Coke, of Chile.

The clear intention of the Trusteeship Council was that this visit should not be considered a "periodic" visit under Article 87 (c) of the Charter, but a special one to investigate a petition.

(d) Ewe Petition

A petition from the "All Ewe Conference", relating to the frontiers between the Trust ¹ Great Britain, Germany and the United States.

Territories of Togoland under French administration and Togoland under British administration, was received too late for consideration at the first session of the Trusteeship Council and was to appear on the agenda of its second session.

- (e) Petitions relating to the Draft Convention prepared by the International Labour Office

Two of the petitions before the Trusteeship Council received from the International Alliance of Women, Middlesex, England and from St. Joan's Social and Political Alliance, London, did not relate to any specific Trust Territories but offered the general complaint that the section of the draft Convention on Social Policy in Non-Metropolitan Territories, which had been prepared by the International Labour Office for the consideration of the International Labour Conference and which related inter alia, to the prohibition by law of discrimination in admission to employment, included no reference to discrimination on grounds of sex. With regard to these petitions, the Trusteeship Council directed the Secretary-General to communicate with the Director-General of the International Labour Office asking him to transmit copies of the petitions to the International Labour Organisation for its information, and requesting that the Council be informed of any action which the International Labour Conference might take on the questions raised in the petitions.

b. Operation of the System of International Supervision of Trust Territories

The international supervision of Trust Territories as contemplated by the Charter is to be carried out primarily by means of three basic functions of the Trusteeship Council, acting under the authority of the General Assembly.

In the first place, each Administering Authority is called upon to submit, for consideration by the Trusteeship Council, annual reports on conditions in the Trust Territories. These reports are to be based on the questionnaires formulated by the Council in accordance with Article 88 of the Charter.

As the first Trust Territories were created by action of the General Assembly in December 1946, the first annual reports will cover the year 1947.

The Government of New Zealand had transmitted, through the Secretary-General, to the Trusteeship Council prior to its first session, two reports on Western Samoa covering the war years 1941 to 1945, and 1945 to 1946 respectively. These reports had been prepared by the Government of New Zealand in accordance with its obligations under the League of Nations mandates system. The reports were not examined by the Trusteeship Council as they were submitted by the Government of New Zealand for information only. As they were not based upon a questionnaire formulated by the Council they were not to be considered as the reports called for under Article 87 of the Charter. The Council expressed its warm appreciation to the Government of New Zealand, however, for its considerate action in making these reports available.

The second means by which the Trusteeship Council performs its supervision of the Trust Territories is by the exercise of its authority to accept petitions and to examine them in consultation with the Administering Authority as provided in Article 87 (b) of the Charter.

The third—an entirely new means of conducting international supervision—is through periodic visits to the Trust Territories. At its 26th meeting on April 28, the Trusteeship Council adopted a resolution recommending to the General Assembly that regular provision be made in the budget of the United Nations for periodic visits to Trust Territories as a recurring item, on the basis of one visiting mission each year.

c. Relations of the Trusteeship Council with the Economic and Social Council and the Security Council

The Charter envisages a close working relationship between the Trusteeship Council and the Economic and Social Council and the specialized agencies, and also between the Trusteeship Council and the Security Council with regard to the functions of the International Trusteeship System relating to non-strategic matters in the strategic Trust Territories.

(1) Relations with the Economic and Social Council

In accordance with Article 91 of the Charter the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session, and the Trusteeship Council at its first session, adopted resolutions providing for the appointment of separate representative committees of three members each, for the purpose of entering into consultation regarding arrangements for co-operation between the two Councils with regard to matters of common concern.

At its first session the Trusteeship Council, in response to an invitation extended by the President of the Economic and Social Council, also took action resulting in the appointment of a committee of two members to join with representatives of the Economic and Social Council in any future negotiations with inter-governmental organizations to be brought into relationship with the United Nations, with respect to such clauses of the agreements as might concern the Trusteeship Council.

(2) Relations with the Security Council

When the strategic area Trusteeship Agreement approved by the Security Council with regard to the islands formerly under Japanese mandate¹ comes into effect, a working relationship will need to be established between the Trusteeship Council and the Security Council in order to implement paragraph 3 of Article 83 of the Charter. This paragraph provides that the Security Council shall avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council, subject to the provisions of the Trusteeship Agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, in performing such functions of the United Nations under the Trusteeship System as relate to political, economic, social and educational matters in the strategic areas.

In this connection it is to be noted that this strategic area Trusteeship Agreement states that the provisions of Articles 87 and 88 of the Charter are to be applicable to the Trust Territory, subject only to the limitation that the Administering Authority may determine the extent of their applicability to such of the areas in the Trust Territory as may from time to time be specified by the Authority as closed for security reasons.

Rule 43

When two or more elective places are to be filled at one time under the same conditions, those candidates obtaining in the first ballot the majority required shall be elected. If the number of candidates obtaining such majority is less than the number of persons or members to be elected, there shall be additional ballots to fill the remaining places, the voting being restricted to the candidates obtaining the greatest number of votes in the previous ballot, the number of candidates being not more than twice as many as the places remaining to be filled.

VIII. PUBLICITY OF MEETINGS

Rule 44

The meetings of the Trusteeship Council and of all of its subsidiary bodies shall be held in public, unless the Council or subsidiary body concerned decides that circumstances require that meetings be held in private.

Rule 45

At the close of private meetings, as may be appropriate, the Trusteeship Council shall issue a communiqué through the Secretary-General.

IX. RECORDS

Rule 46

The verbatim records of all public and private meetings shall be prepared by the Secretariat. They shall be made available in so far as possible within twenty-four hours of the end of the meetings to the representatives who have participated in the meetings.

Rule 47

The representatives who have participated in the meetings shall, within two working days after the distribution of the verbatim records, inform the Secretary-General of any corrections they wish to have made. Corrections that have been requested shall be considered approved, unless the President is of the opinion that they are sufficiently important to be submitted to the Trusteeship Council for approval.

Rule 48

The verbatim records of public and private meetings in which no corrections have been requested or which have been corrected in accordance with Rule 47 shall be considered as the official records of the Trusteeship Council. The official records of public meetings shall be published by the Secretariat as promptly as possible and communicated to the Members of the United Nations and to the specialized agencies referred to in Rule 4.

Rule 49

The official records of private meetings shall be accessible only to the Members of the United Nations, except that the Trusteeship Council may make public the records of any private meeting at such time and under such conditions as it may decide. When such records relate to strategic areas the Administering Authority concerned may request the Trusteeship Council to confine their availability to the Trusteeship and Security Councils.

X. CONDUCT OF BUSINESS

Rule 50

At any meeting of the Trusteeship Council two-thirds of the members shall constitute a quorum.

Rule 51

In addition to exercising the powers which are conferred upon him elsewhere by these rules, the President shall declare the opening and closing of each meeting, direct the discussions, ensure observance of the rules of procedure, accord the right to speak, put questions and announce decisions. Subject to the rules of procedure, he shall have complete control of the proceedings of any meeting. The President, acting under the authority of the Trusteeship Council, shall represent it as an organ of the United Nations.

Rule 52

Whenever the President of the Trusteeship Council deems that for the proper fulfilment of the responsibilities of the presidency he should not preside over the Trusteeship Council during the consideration of a question with which the member he represents is directly connected, and in particular when annual reports and petitions relating to a Trust Territory of which the member he represents is the Administering Authority, are under consideration, he shall indicate his decision to the Trusteeship Council. The presidency shall then devolve for the purpose of the consideration of that question upon the Vice-President.

Rule 53

No representative may address the Trusteeship Council without having previously obtained the permission of the President. The President shall call upon speakers in the order in which they signify their desire to speak. The chairman of a subsidiary body, or a rapporteur, or the Secretary-General, however, may be accorded precedence. The President may call a speaker to order if his remarks are not relevant to the subject under discussion.

Rule 54

During the discussion of any matter, a representative may rise to a point of order and the point of order shall be immediately decided by the President, in accordance with the rules of procedure.

Rule 55

A representative may appeal from any ruling of the President. The appeal shall be put to the vote without discussion.

Rule 56

1. The following motions shall have precedence in the order named over all resolutions or other motions relative to the subject before the meeting:

- (a) to suspend the meeting;
- (b) to adjourn the meeting;
- (c) to adjourn the meeting to a certain day or hour;
- (d) for the closure of the debate on any motion or draft resolution, including amendments thereto, or on any amendment or amendments to a motion or draft resolution;
- (e) to limit the time allowed to each speaker;
- (f) to refer any matter to a committee, to the Secretary-General or to a rapporteur;
- (g) to postpone discussion of the question to a certain day or indefinitely; or
- (h) to amend.

2. Any motion for the suspension or for the simple adjournment of a meeting shall be decided without debate.

3. A motion for closure of debate on a resolution or other motion shall not be considered by the Trusteeship Council until each representative shall have had the opportunity to speak on that resolution or other motion. Debate on a motion for closure of debate shall be limited to one speaker for each side.

Rule 57

Reports, resolutions and other substantive motions or amendments shall be introduced in writing and handed to the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General shall, to the extent possible, circulate copies to the representatives twenty-four hours in advance of the meeting at which they are to be considered. The Trusteeship Council may decide to postpone the consideration of resolutions and other substantive motions or amendments, the copies of which have not been circulated twenty-four hours in advance.

Rule 58

Resolutions and other motions or amendments proposed by representatives of members on the Trusteeship Council may be put to the vote without having been seconded.

Rule 59

1. Resolutions, motions or amendments may be withdrawn by the representative who introduced them at any time prior to the vote.

2. In a case where a representative withdraws a resolution, motion or amendment prior to the vote, any other representative on the Trusteeship Council may require that it be put to the vote as his resolution, motion or amendment under the same conditions as if the original mover had not withdrawn it.

Rule 60

Parts of a report, resolution, other motion or amendment may be voted on separately at the request of a representative and subject to the will of the Trusteeship Council. The proposal shall then be voted on as a whole.

Rule 61

A proposal to add to or delete from or otherwise revise a part of a resolution or a motion shall be considered as an amendment. An amendment shall be voted on first and if it is adopted, the amended resolution or motion shall then be voted on.

Rule 62

If two or more amendments are moved to a resolution or another motion, the President shall first put to the vote the amendment furthest removed in substance from the resolution or motion and then the amendment next furthest removed, and so on, until all the amendments have been voted upon or an amendment has been approved which, in the opinion of the Trusteeship Council, makes voting on the remaining amendments unnecessary.

Rule 63

If two or more resolutions or other motions relating to an original proposal are introduced, the President shall first put to the vote the resolution or motion furthest removed in substance from the original proposal. If that resolution or motion is rejected, the President shall put to the vote the resolution or motion next furthest removed, and so on, until either all the resolutions or motions have been put to a vote or one or more of them has been adopted, which in the opinion of the Trusteeship Council makes voting on the remaining proposals unnecessary.

Rule 64

A statement of minority views may be appended to a report or recommendation of the Trusteeship Council at the request of any member.

Rule 65

No resolution involving expenditure from United Nations funds shall be approved by the Trusteeship Council unless the Trusteeship Council has before it a report from the Secretary-General on the financial implications of the proposal, together with an estimate of the costs involved in the specific proposal.

XI. COMMITTEES AND RAPORTEURS

Rule 66

The Trusteeship Council may set up such committees as it deems necessary, define their composition and their terms of reference, and refer to them any questions on the agenda for study and report. The committees may be authorized to sit while the Trusteeship Council is not in session.

Rule 67

The procedure set forth in Rules 28 to 31, 36 to 38, and 51 to 63 inclusive, shall apply to proceedings of committees of the Trusteeship Council. The committees may decide upon the form of the records and adopt such other rules of procedure as may be necessary.

XII. QUESTIONNAIRES

Rule 68

Upon the coming into effect of each Trusteeship agreement, the Trusteeship Council shall transmit to the Administering Authority concerned, through the Secretary-General, such questionnaire as it shall have formulated, in accordance with Article 88 of the Charter, on the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Trust Territory involved.

Rule 69

The Trusteeship Council may modify the questionnaires at its discretion.

Rule 70

When, in accordance with Article 91 of the Charter, the Trusteeship Council considers it appropriate to avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council or of any specialized agency in the preparation of questionnaires, the President of the Trusteeship Council shall transmit through the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council or to the specialized agency concerned those sections of the questionnaires with regard to which its advice may be desired.

Rule 71

1. The questionnaire shall be communicated to each Administering Authority at least six months before the expiration of the year covered by the first annual report, and shall remain in force, without specific renewal, from year to year.

2. Any subsequent modifications shall be communicated to the Administering Authority concerned at least six months before the date fixed for the presentation of the first annual report which is to be based on the modified questionnaire.

XIII. ANNUAL REPORTS OF ADMINISTERING AUTHORITIES

Rule 72

1. The annual report of an Administering Authority prepared on the basis of the questionnaire formulated by the Trusteeship Council shall be submitted to the Secretary-General within four months from the termination of the year to which it refers.

2. Each report of an Administering Authority shall be considered by the Trusteeship Council at the first regular session following the expiration of six weeks from the receipt of the report by the Secretary-General.

3. The Secretary-General shall transmit these reports without delay to the members of the Trusteeship Council.

Rule 73

The Administering Authorities shall furnish to the Secretary-General four hundred copies of each report for a Trust Territory. Copies of each such report shall at the same time be sent directly by the Administering Authority to the members of the Trusteeship Council as a means of expediting the work of the Council.

XIV. EXAMINATION OF ANNUAL REPORTS

Rule 74

In the examination of all annual reports the Administering Authority concerned shall be entitled to designate and to have present a special representative who should be well informed on the territory involved.

Rule 75

The special representative of the Administering Authority may participate without vote in the examination and discussion of a report, except in a discussion directed to specific conclusions concerning it.

XV. PETITIONS

Rule 76

Petitions may be accepted and examined by the Trusteeship Council if they concern the affairs of one or more Trust Territories or the operation of the International Trusteeship System as laid down in the Charter, except that with respect to petitions relating to a strategic area the functions of the Trusteeship Council shall be governed by Article 83 of the Charter and the terms of the relevant Trusteeship agreements.

Rule 77

Petitioners may be inhabitants of Trust Territories or other parties.

Rule 78

Petitions may be presented in writing in accordance with Rules 79 to 86, or orally in accordance with Rules 87 to 91.

Rule 79

A written petition may be in the form of a letter, telegram, memorandum or other document concerning the affairs of one or more Trust Territories or the operation of the International Trusteeship System as laid down in the Charter.

Rule 80

The Trusteeship Council may hear oral presentations in support or elaboration of a previously submitted written petition. Oral presentations shall be confined to the subject-matter of the petition as stated in writing by the petitioners. The Trusteeship Council, in exceptional cases, may also hear orally petitions which have not been previously submitted in writing, provided that the Trusteeship Council and the Administering Authority concerned have been previously informed with regard to their subject-matter.

Rule 81

Normally petitions shall be considered inadmissible if they are directed against judgments of competent courts of the Administering Authority or if they lay before the Council a dispute with which the courts have competence to deal. This rule shall not be interpreted so as to prevent consideration by the Trusteeship Council of petitions against legislation on the grounds of its incompatibility with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations or of the Trusteeship agreement, irrespective of whether decisions on cases arising under such legislation have previously been given by the courts of the Administering Authority.

Rule 82

Written petitions may be addressed directly to the Secretary-General or may be transmitted to him through the Administering Authority.

Rule 83

Written petitions submitted to the Administering Authority for transmission shall be communicated promptly to the Secretary-General, with or without comments by the Administering Authority, at its discretion, or with an indication that such comments will follow in due course.

Rule 84

Representatives of the Trusteeship Council engaged in periodic visits to Trust Territories or on other official missions authorized by the Council, may accept written petitions, subject to such instructions as may have been received from the Trusteeship Council. Petitions of this kind shall be transmitted promptly to the Secretary-General for circulation to the members of the Council. A copy of each such petition shall be communicated to the competent local authority. Any observations which the visiting representatives may wish to make on the petitions, after consultation with the local representative of the Administering Authority, shall be submitted to the Trusteeship Council.

Rule 85

The Secretary-General shall circulate promptly to the members of the Trusteeship Council all written petitions received by him, except for petitions relating to a strategic area with respect to which the functions of the Trusteeship Council shall be governed by Article 83 of the Charter and the terms of the relevant Trusteeship agreement.

Rule 86

1. Written petitions will normally be placed on the agenda of a regular session provided that they shall have been received by the Administering Authority concerned either directly or through the Secretary-General at least two months before the date of the next following regular session.

2. Any observations on petitions which the Administering Authority desires to have circulated to members of the Trusteeship Council should, wherever possible, be transmitted to the Secretary-General not less than fourteen days before the opening of the session at which such petitions will be considered.

3. The date of receipt of a petition shall be considered as being:

(a) in respect of a petition which is presented through the Administering Authority, the date on which the petition is received by the competent local authority in the territory or the metropolitan Government of the Administering Authority, as the case may be, and

(b) in respect of a petition not presented through the Administering Authority, the date on which the petition is received by the Administering Authority through the Secretary-General. The Administering Authority concerned shall immediately notify the Secretary-General of the date of receipt of all such petitions.

4. In cases where the Administering Authority may be prepared to consider a written petition at shorter notice than is prescribed by the foregoing rules, or where, in exceptional cases, as a matter of urgency, it may be so decided by the Trusteeship Council in consultation with the Administering Authority concerned, such written petition may be placed on the agenda of a regular session notwithstanding that it has been presented after the due date, or it may be placed on the agenda of a special session.

Rule 87

Requests to present petitions orally or to make oral presentations in support or elaboration of written petitions, in accordance with Rule 80, may be addressed directly to the Secretary-General or may be transmitted to him through the Administering Authority. In the latter case the Administering Authority concerned shall communicate such requests promptly to the Secretary-General.

Rule 88

The Secretary-General shall promptly notify the members of the Trusteeship Council of all requests for oral petitions or oral presentations received by him, except for petitions relating to a strategic area with respect to which the functions of the Trusteeship Council shall be governed by Article 83 of the Charter and the terms of the relevant Trusteeship agreement.

Rule 89

Representatives of the Trusteeship Council engaged in periodic visits to Trust Territories or on other official missions authorized by the Council may receive oral presentations or petitions, subject to such instructions as may have been received from the Trusteeship Council. Such oral presentations or petitions shall be recorded by the visiting mission, and the record shall be transmitted promptly to the Secretary-General for circulation to the members of the Council and to the Administering Authority for comment. A copy of each such record shall be communicated to the competent local authority. Any observations which the visiting representatives may wish to make on the oral presentations or petitions, after consultation with the local representative of the Administering Authority, shall be submitted to the Trusteeship Council.

Rule 90

The Trusteeship Council, at the beginning of each session which includes the consideration of petitions on its agenda, may appoint an ad hoc committee on petitions whose membership shall be evenly divided between representatives of members administering Trust Territories and representatives of members having no administering responsibilities. The ad hoc committee on petitions shall be empowered to undertake a preliminary examination of the petitions on the agenda. No appraisal of the substance of the petitions shall be made by the ad hoc committee.

Rule 91

The Trusteeship Council may designate one or more of its representatives to accept oral petitions the subject-matter of which has been previously communicated to the Trusteeship Council and to the Administering Authority concerned. Oral petitions and oral presentations may be examined either in public or in private, as may be determined, in accordance with Rule 44.

Rule 92

In the examination of all petitions the Administering Authority concerned shall be entitled to designate and to have present a special representative who should be well informed on the territory involved.

Rule 93

The Secretary-General shall inform the Administering Authorities and the petitioners concerned of the actions taken by the Trusteeship Council on each petition, and shall transmit to them the official records of the public meetings at which the petitions were examined.

XVI. VISITS TO TRUST TERRITORIES

Rule 94

The Trusteeship Council, in accordance with the provisions of Article 87 (c) and Article 88, paragraph 3, of the Charter, as the case may be, and with the terms of the respective Trusteeship agreements, shall make provisions for periodic visits to each Trust Territory with a view to achieving the basic objectives of the International Trusteeship System.

Rule 95

The Trusteeship Council, acting in conformity with the terms of the respective Trusteeship agreements, shall define the terms of reference of each visiting mission and shall issue to each mission such special instructions as it may consider appropriate.

Rule 96

The Trusteeship Council shall select the members of each visiting mission who shall preferably be one or more of the representatives on the Council. Each mission may be assisted by experts and by representatives of the local administration. A mission and the individual members thereof shall, while engaged in a visit, act only on the basis of the instructions of the Council and shall be responsible exclusively to it.

Rule 97

The Trusteeship Council may, in agreement with the Administering Authority, conduct special investigations or enquiries when it considers that conditions in a Trust Territory make such action desirable.

Rule 98

All expenses of periodic visits, special investigations and enquiries, including the travel expenses of the visiting missions, shall be borne by the United Nations.

Rule 99

Each visiting mission shall submit to the Trusteeship Council a report on its visit, a copy of which shall be promptly transmitted to the Administering Authority concerned by the Secretary-General. The report may be published by the Council in such form as it may deem appropriate. Observations on each such report by the Council and by the Administering Authority concerned may be similarly published.

XVII. REPORTS OF THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Rule 100

The Trusteeship Council shall present annually to the General Assembly a general report on its activities and on the discharge of its responsibilities under the International Trusteeship System. Each such report shall include an annual review of the conditions in each Trust Territory.

Rule 101

1. The sections of the general reports of the Trusteeship Council to the General Assembly relating to conditions in specific Trust Territories, referred to in Rule 100, shall take into account the annual reports of the Administering Authorities, and such other sources of information as may be available, including petitions, reports of visiting missions, and any special investigations or enquiries, as provided for in Rule 97.

2. The general reports shall include, as appropriate, the conclusions of the Trusteeship Council regarding the execution and interpretation of the provisions of Chapters XII and XIII of the Charter and of the Trusteeship agreements, and such suggestions and recommendations concerning each Trust Territory as the Council may decide.

Rule 102

The reports of the Trusteeship Council to the General Assembly provided for in Rules 100 and 101 shall be transmitted through the Secretary-General at least thirty days before the opening of the regular session of the General Assembly.

Rule 103

The Trusteeship Council may designate the President, the Vice-President or another of its members to represent it during the consideration of its reports by the General Assembly.

XVIII. OTHER FUNCTIONS

Rule 104

The Trusteeship Council shall perform such other functions as may be provided for in the Trusteeship agreements, and, in pursuance of the duty imposed upon it by Article 85 of the Charter, may submit to the General Assembly recommendations concerning the functions of the United Nations with regard to Trusteeship agreements, including the approval of the terms of the Trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment. With regard to strategic areas, the Trusteeship Council may similarly perform such functions in so far as it may be requested to do so by the Security Council.

XIX. RELATIONSHIP WITH OTHER BODIES

Rule 105

1. The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council, of the specialized agencies and of appropriate intergovernmental regional bodies which may be separately established, relating to matters with which they may be concerned.

2. The Secretary-General shall promptly communicate to these bodies the annual reports of the Administering Authorities and such reports and other documents of the Trusteeship Council as may be of special concern to them.

XX. SUSPENSION OF RULES

Rule 106

When the Trusteeship Council is in session, a rule of procedure may be suspended by decision of the Council.

XXI. AMENDMENT

Rule 107

These rules of procedure may be amended by the Trusteeship Council. Normally, a vote shall not be taken until four days after a proposal for amendment has been submitted.

VI. The International Court of Justice

A. PROVISIONS OF THE CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS¹

The International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It functions in accordance with its Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the Charter.

All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

A State which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendations of the Security Council.

Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems such action necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Nothing in the Charter is to prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

B. PROVISIONS OF THE STATUTE OF THE COURT

1. ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

The Court is composed of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State and who are to be "elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law."

Candidates for membership of the Court are nominated by the "national groups" in the Permanent Court of Arbitration.² The Secretary-General of the United Nations draws up

² The Permanent Court of Arbitration established under Conventions of 1899 and 1907 consists of a panel of arbitrators from which members are chosen to hear any one case. Each State party to the Conventions may name not more than four persons to be members of the panel. The persons thus appointed constitute "national groups" which compose the panel of the Permanent Court of Arbitration. These "national groups" had been designated to nominate the judges of the Permanent Court of International Justice established in 1920 in conjunction with the League of Nations. Under the Statute of the International Court of Justice they are likewise to nominate the judges of this Court, which supersedes the Permanent Court of International Justice. Members of the United Nations which are not members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration are to appoint national groups for the purpose of nominating the members of the International Court of Justice in the same manner as the national groups of the Permanent Court of Arbitration are appointed.

a list of candidates thus nominated. From this list the General Assembly and the Security Council, voting independently, elect the Members of the Court, an absolute majority in both the Assembly and the Council being required for election.

The members of the Court are elected for nine years and may be re-elected. However, the terms of five judges elected at the first election expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges at the end of six years.

The Court elects its own President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected. It appoints its Registrar and such other officers as may be necessary.

The seat of the Court is at The Hague, but this does not prevent the Court from exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable. The President and the Registrar reside at the seat of the Court.

The Court remains permanently in session except during judicial vacations. A quorum of nine judges suffices to constitute it.

From time to time the Court may establish one or more chambers of three or more judges which may deal with particular categories of cases,—for example, labor cases and cases relating to transit and communications. The Court forms annually a chamber of five members which may hear and determine cases by summary procedure.

Judges of the same nationality as a party to a case retain their right to sit in the case before the Court. If the Court includes on the bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. If the Court includes upon the bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of the parties may choose a judge to sit in the case before the Court.

2. COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Only States may be parties in cases before the Court.

The Court is open to States parties to its Statute. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other States are to be laid down by the Security Council.¹

The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters especially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force. To preserve continuity with the work of the Permanent Court of International Justice the Statute further stipulates that whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall be referred to the International Court of Justice.

The States parties to the Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other State accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- (a) the interpretation of a treaty;
- (b) any question of international law;
- (c) the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of international obligation;
- (d) the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

These declarations may be made (1) unconditionally, (2) on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain States, (3) for a certain time.

The Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice had provided for similar declarations of acceptance of compulsory jurisdiction. The Statute of the International Court of Justice provides that any declarations made under the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, which is still in force, shall be deemed to be acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period for which they still have to run.

Fifty-six nations had accepted compulsory jurisdiction of the Permanent Court in some form. Sixteen of these acceptances are still in force and are, under the terms of its Statute, transferred to the International Court of Justice. Since the Statute has come into force, China, Denmark, France,² Guatemala, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Turkey and the United States have accepted compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice.³

The Court, whose function it is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, is to apply:

- (a) international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting States;

² France made a declaration but has not yet ratified it.

³ See Annex II.

(b) international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;

(c) the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;

(d) subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

The Court may decide a case ex-oequo et bono, if the parties agree to this.

3. PROCEDURE OF THE COURT

French and English are the official languages of the International Court of Justice, but any party which so requests is to be authorized to use another language.

Cases may be brought before the Court either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject to the dispute and the parties are to be indicated.

The Court has the power to indicate any provisional measures which it considers ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

Unless otherwise demanded by the parties, hearings in the Court are to be public. Deliberations of the Court take place in private and remain secret.

All questions before the Court are decided by a majority of judges present. In the event of an equality of votes the President has a casting vote. The judgment is to state the reasons on which it is based and contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision. If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge is entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Decisions of the Court have no binding force except between the parties and in respect of any particular case. The judgment of the Court is final and without appeal. Revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based "upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence."

In the exercise of its advisory jurisdiction the Court is to be guided by the provisions of the Court applying to contentious cases.

4. AMENDMENT OF THE STATUTE

The Statute of the International Court of Justice can be amended by the same procedure as that used in amending the Charter of the United Nations, subject, however, to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of States which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations. The Court may propose such amendments as it deems necessary through written communications to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

C. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COURT

The Statute of the International Court of Justice provides that invitations for nominations of candidates must be issued at least three months before elections take place. As the Secretary-General of the United Nations, whose function it is, under Article 5 of the Statute of the Court, to issue the invitations, would not be appointed until the first session of the General Assembly, the Governments which signed the Interim Arrangements at San Francisco agreed that the Preparatory Commission was to issue the invitations. In this way it was made possible to elect the judges of the International Court at the first session of the General Assembly.

Invitations were issued on September 12, 1945, on the instructions of the Executive Committee of the Preparatory Commission, and January 10, 1946, was fixed as the final date for receiving nominations. On January 12, 1946, immediately following the opening meeting of the General Assembly, a list of the candidates nominated for election was submitted to the Assembly and to the Security Council by the Executive Secretary and on February 6 the elections took place.

The judges elected were as follows:

Nine-year Term

Alejandro Alvarez (Chile)

José Philadelpho de Barros Azevedo

(Brazil)

Jules Basdevant (France)

José Gustavo Guerrero (El Salvador)

Sir Arnold Duncan McNair (United Kingdom)

Six-year Term

Isidro Fabela Alfaro (Mexico)
 Green H. Hackworth (U. S. A.)
 Helge Klaestad (Norway)
 Sergei Borisovich Krylov (U.S.S.R.)
 Charles de Visscher (Belgium)

Three-year Term

Abdel Hamid Badawi Pasha (Egypt)
 Hsu Mo (China)
 John E. Read (Canada)
 Bogdan Winiarski (Poland)
 Milovon Zoricic' (Yugoslavia)

On February 10, 1946, the General Assembly adopted a resolution instructing the Secretary-General to take the necessary steps to summon a first meeting of the Court at The Hague as soon as could be arranged. The Secretary-General was to appoint a Secretary and other temporary officers to assist the Court during the period preceding the appointment by the Court of its Registrar and officers. The Secretary-General was also instructed to conduct preliminary negotiations with the Carnegie Foundation in order to fix the conditions on which the premises in the Peace Palace at The Hague could be placed at the Court's disposal.

On February 12, 1946, the General Assembly approved the setting up of a small negotiating committee to assist the Secretary-General in negotiating agreements for the use by the Court of the premises in the Peace Palace. Two agreements concluded accordingly by the Committee with the Carnegie Foundation were approved by the General Assembly on December 11, 1946.¹

The first meeting of the Court was held on April 3, 1946. On April 6, 1946, the Court elected J. G. Guerrero President and J. Basdevant Vice-President. E. Hambro, who had previously been appointed Acting-Secretary of the Court by the Secretary-General and who had made arrangements for the first meeting of the Court, was chosen as Registrar. On April 18 the Court appointed J. Garnier-Coignet Deputy Registrar.

On April 18, 1946, the official inaugural sitting of the Court was held in the Great Hall of Justice in the Peace Palace. All judges were present with the exception of A. Alvarez (Chile), who was unable to reach the Hague in time. Each of the judges in turn made the solemn declaration, required under Article 20 of the Court's Statute, that he would exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

The Court continued to sit until May 6, 1946. On May 3 it formed the Chamber for Summary Procedure provided for in Article 29 of the Statute. The members elected were as follows: J. G. Guerrero, J. Basdevant, Sir Arnold McNair, S. B. Krylov and Hsu Mo. Isidoro Fabela and Charles de Visscher were elected substitute members.

One of the first matters taken up by the Court was the preparation of its rules. The rules as adopted by the Court were based largely on the rules of the Permanent Court of International Justice. As the rules of the Permanent Court had been adopted as recently as 1936 and represented the outcome of experience gained, it was generally agreed that it was not necessary to undertake extensive amendment. Accordingly, the changes introduced were for the most part designed to bring the old rules into conformity with the Statute of the International Court of Justice in those respects in which it differed from the Statute of the Permanent Court.²

By a resolution of February 13, 1946, the General Assembly had invited the Court to consider the question of privileges and immunities necessary for the exercise of its functions, both in the country of its seat and elsewhere. Accordingly, the Court adopted a report recommending that Members of the United Nations grant to the judges and the Registrar diplomatic privileges and immunities. Other officials of the Court as well as agents, counsel and advocates of the parties, the Court recommended, should be granted such immunities and privileges as might be necessary for the independent exercise of their functions.

As to the privileges the Court was to enjoy in the Netherlands, the President of the Court, in an exchange of letters with the Netherlands Government of June 26, 1946, reached an agreement which was approved by the General Assembly by a resolution of December 11, 1946. In this resolution the Assembly further recommended to Member Governments that they grant to the judges and officials of the Court the privileges and immunities as suggested by the Court.³

³ See pp. 241 ff.

The Court considered the question of staff regulations and instructions for the Registry. It decided to adopt provisionally the regulations and instructions which had been in force for the Permanent Court of International Justice.

By a resolution of February 6, 1946, the General Assembly fixed the salaries of the judges of the Court at 54,000 Netherland florins. The President receives a special allowance of 15,000 Netherland florins annually, and the Vice-President an allowance of 100 florins for every day on which he acts as President, up to a maximum of 10,000 florins. A request contained in a letter of April 13 from the President of the Court to the Secretary-General of the United Nations that the General Assembly fix the emoluments of the members of the Court in United States dollars instead of Netherland florins was subsequently withdrawn by the President of the Court.¹

On the basis of a report of the Court of April 11, 1946, the General Assembly by a resolution of December 11, 1946, directed that the salary of the Registrar of the International Court of Justice should be assimilated to that of a top-ranking director of the United Nations Secretariat and should accordingly be fixed at 29,150 Netherland florins. The difference between the salary recommended by the Court (35,000 florins) and the salary approved by the General Assembly (29,150 florins) is to be paid to the Registrar as a non-pensionable allowance.

After consultation between the Registrar of the Court and the Secretary-General of the United Nations, the Secretary-General drew up rules governing reimbursement of travel and subsistence expenses of members of the Court. These rules were approved by the General Assembly on December 11, 1946.²

By a resolution of February 6, 1946, the General Assembly instructed the Secretary-General to develop a pension plan for the judges, Registrar and staff of the Court. Taking into consideration the views expressed by the Registrar of the Court in a memorandum of June 13, 1946, a working party established by the Secretary-General drew up a pension scheme for the judges and the staff of the International Court of Justice which the General Assembly approved on December 11, 1946.³

The Court adopted its budget for 1946 and 1947 and on the proposal of the Registrar approved the appointment of a certain number of officials to the Registry.

By letter of May 1, 1946, addressed to the Secretary-General, the President of the Court requested that the Court be informed of any decision the Security Council might take regarding access to the Court of States not parties to the Statute. At its 76th meeting on October 15, 1946, the Security Council on the recommendation of its Committee of Experts, resolved that the International Court of Justice should be open to a State not a party to the Court's Statute if such a State accepted the jurisdiction of the Court in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the Statute and Rules of the Court, and undertook to comply in good faith with the decisions of the Court.⁴

On October 26, 1946, the Secretary-General received a request from the Swiss Government that it be permitted to become a party to the Statute of the Court. On November 15, 1946, the Security Council, on the basis of a report of its Committee of Experts, recommended to the General Assembly that Switzerland should become a party to the Statute on the date of deposit with the Secretary-General of the United Nations of an instrument containing (a) acceptance of the provisions of the Statute of the Court, (b) acceptance of all the obligations of a Member of the United Nations under Article 94 of the Charter, and (c) an undertaking to contribute to the expenses of the Court. By a resolution of December 11, 1946, the General Assembly adopted the recommendations of the Security Council.⁵

On September 21, 1946, during its third session, the Economic and Social Council adopted a resolution recommending that the General Assembly authorize the Economic and Social Council to request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question arising within the scope of its activities. The General Assembly granted this authorization by a resolution of December 11, 1946.

D. CORFU CHANNEL DISPUTE

The Security Council on April 9, 1947, recommended that the United Kingdom and the Albanian Governments should immediately refer their dispute over the damaging of two British warships in the Corfu Channel to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the Statute of the Court.¹

It was announced on May 23, 1947, that the Government of the United Kingdom had filed its application against the Albanian People's Republic in the Corfu Channel case with the International Court of Justice. Notification of the filing of the case was received by the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 40, paragraph 3, of the Statute of the International Court, which provides that the Registrar of the Court shall notify the members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General of any cases filed with the Court.

If, at the expiration of this time-limit, they have not notified their choice, the Court shall nevertheless proceed to examine and adjudicate upon the case.

If the members present are unanimous, the Registrar shall issue the notification prescribed in the above-mentioned Article.

Article 7

3. All pleadings shall be dated. When a pleading has to be filed by a certain date, it is the date of the receipt of the pleading in the Registry which will be regarded by the Court as the material date.

4. If the Registrar at the request of the agent of a party arranges for the printing, at the cost of that party, of a pleading which it is intended to file with the Court, the text must be sent to the Registry in sufficient time to enable the printed pleading to be filed before the expiry of any time-limit which may apply to it. The printing is done under the responsibility of the party in question.

¹ The agents of the parties are requested to ascertain from the Registry the usual format of the pleadings.

5. The correction of a slip or error in any document which has been filed can be made at any time with the consent of the other party, or by leave of the President.

Article 41

1. If proceedings are instituted by means of a special agreement, the pleadings shall, subject to Article 37 of these Rules, be presented in the order stated below:

a Memorial, by each party within the same time-limit;

a Counter-Memorial, by each party within the same time-limit;

a Reply, by each party within the same time-limit.

2. If proceedings are instituted by means of an application, the pleadings shall, subject to Article 37 of these Rules, be presented in the order stated below:

the Memorial by the applicant;
the Counter-Memorial by the respondent;
the Reply by the applicant;
the Rejoinder by the respondent.

Article 42

1. A Memorial shall contain a statement of the relevant facts, a statement of law, and the submissions.

2. A Counter-Memorial shall contain an admission or denial of the facts stated in the Memorial; any additional facts, if necessary; observations concerning the statement of law in the Memorial; a statement of law in answer thereto; and the submissions.

Article 43

1. There must be annexed to every Memorial and Counter-Memorial and other pleading, copies of all the relevant documents, a list of which shall be given after the submissions. If, on account of the length of a document, extracts only are attached, the document itself or a complete copy of it must, if possible, unless the document has been published and is available to the public, be communicated to the Registrar for the use of the Court and of the other party.

2. Every pleading and every document annexed which is in a language other than French or English, must be accompanied by a translation into one of the official languages of the Court. Nevertheless, in the case of lengthy documents, translations of extracts may be submitted, subject, however, to any subsequent decision by the Court, or, if it is not sitting, by the President.

Article 44

1. The Registrar shall transmit to the judges and to the parties copies of the pleadings and documents annexed in the case, as and when he receives them.

2. The Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, may, after obtaining the views of the parties, decide that the Registrar shall in a particular case make the pleadings and annexed documents available to the government of any Member of the United Nations or of any State which is entitled to appear before the Court.

3. The Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, may, with the consent of the parties, authorize the pleadings and annexed documents in regard to a particular case to be made accessible to the public before the termination of the case.

Article 45

Upon the closure of the written proceedings, the case is ready for hearings.

Article 46

1. Subject to the priority provided for by Article 61 of these Rules, cases submitted to the Court will be taken in the order in which they become ready for hearing. When several cases are ready for hearing, the order in which they will be taken is determined by the position which they occupy in the General List.

2. Nevertheless, the Court may, in special circumstances, decide to take a case in priority to other cases which are ready for hearing and which precede it in the General List.

3. If the parties to a case which is ready for hearing are agreed in asking for the case to be put after other cases which are ready for hearing and which follow it in the General List, the President may grant such a postponement: if the parties are not in agreement, the President shall decide whether or not to submit the question to the Court.

Oral Proceedings

Article 47

1. When a case is ready for hearing, the date for the commencement of the oral proceedings shall be fixed by the Court, or by the President if the Court is not sitting.

2. If occasion should arise, the Court or the President, if the Court is not sitting, may decide that the commencement or continuance of the hearings shall be postponed.

Article 48

1. After the closure of the written proceedings no further documents may be submitted to the Court by either party except with the consent of the other party or as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article. The party desiring to produce a new document shall file the original or a certified copy thereof in the Registry, which will be responsible for communicating it to the other party and will inform the Court. The other party shall be held to have given its consent if it does not lodge an objection to the production of the document.

2. Should the other party decline to consent to the production of a new document, the Court, after hearing the parties, may either permit or refuse to permit its production. If the Court grants permission, the other party shall have an opportunity of commenting upon it and of submitting documents in support of its comments.

Article 49

Without prejudice to the provisions of the Rules concerning the production of documents, each party shall communicate to the Registry, in sufficient time before the commencement of the oral proceedings, information regarding the evidence which it intends to produce or which it intends to request the Court to obtain. This communication shall contain a list of the surnames, first names, descriptions and places of residence of the witnesses and experts whom the party intends to call, with indications in general terms of the point or points to which their evidence will be directed.

Article 50

The Court shall determine whether the parties should present their arguments before or after the production of the evidence; the parties shall, however, retain the right to comment on the evidence given.

Article 51

The order in which the agents, counsel or advocates shall be called upon to speak shall be determined by the Court, unless there is an agreement between the parties on the subject.

Article 52

1. The Court may, during the hearing, put questions to the agents, counsel and advocates, and may ask them for explanations.

2. Each judge has a similar right to put questions, but before exercising it he should make his intention known to the President, who is made responsible by Article 45 of the Statute for the control of the hearing.

3. The agents, counsel and advocates shall be at liberty to answer immediately or at a later date.

Article 53

1. Witnesses and experts shall be examined by the agents, counsel or advocates of the parties under the control of the President. Questions may be put to them by the President and by the judges.

2. Each witness shall make the following declaration before giving his evidence in Court:

"I solemnly declare upon my honour and conscience that I will speak the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

3. Each expert shall make the following declaration before making his statement in Court:

"I solemnly declare upon my honour and conscience that my statement will be in accordance with my sincere belief."

Article 54

The Court may request the parties to call witnesses or experts, or may call for the production of any other evidence on points of fact in regard to which the parties are not in agreement. If need be, the Court shall apply the provisions of Article 44 of the Statute.

Article 55

Witnesses or experts who appear at the instance of the Court shall be paid out of the funds of the Court.

Article 56

The Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, shall, at the request of one of the parties or on its own initiative, take the necessary steps for the examination of witnesses or experts otherwise than before the Court itself.

Article 57

1. If the Court considers it necessary to arrange for an enquiry or an expert opinion, it shall, after duly hearing the parties, issue an order to this effect, defining the subject of the enquiry or expert opinion, and stating the number and mode of appointment of the persons to hold the enquiry or of the experts and the procedure to be followed.

2. Every report or record of an enquiry and every expert opinion shall be communicated to the parties.

3. At any stage in the proceedings before the termination of the hearing, the Court may, either proprio motu, or at the request of one of the parties communicated as provided in Article 49 of these Rules, request a public international organization, pursuant to Article 34 of the Statute, to furnish information relevant to a case before it. The Court shall decide whether such information shall be presented to it orally or in writing.

4. When a public international organization sees fit to furnish, on its own initiative, information relevant to a case before the Court, it shall do so in the form of a Memorial to be filed in the Registry before the closure of the written proceedings. The Court shall retain the right to require such information to be supplemented, either orally or in writing, in the form of answers to any questions which it may see fit to formulate, and also to authorize the parties to comment in writing on the information thus furnished.

5. In the circumstances contemplated by Article 34, paragraph 3, of the Statute, the Registrar, on the instructions of the Court, or of the President if the Court is not sitting, shall proceed as prescribed in that paragraph. The Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, shall, as from the date on which the Registrar has communicated copies of the written proceedings, fix a time-limit within which the public international organization concerned may submit to the Court its observations in writing. These observations shall be communicated to the parties and may be discussed by them and by the representative of the said organization during the oral proceedings.

Article 58

1. In the absence of any decision to the contrary by the Court, or by the President if the Court is not sitting at the time when the decision has to be made, speeches or statements made before the Court in one of the official languages shall be translated into the other official language; the same rule shall apply in regard to questions and answers. The Registrar shall make the necessary arrangements for this purpose.

2. Whenever, in accordance with Article 39, paragraph 3, of the Statute, a language other than French or English is used, the necessary arrangements for translation into one of the two official languages shall be made by the party concerned: the evidence of witnesses and the statements of experts shall, however, be translated under the supervision of the Court. In the case of witnesses or experts who appear at the instance of the Court, arrangements for translation shall be made by the Registry.

3. The persons making the translations referred to in the preceding paragraph shall make the following declaration in Court:

"I solemnly declare upon my honour and conscience that my translation will be a complete and faithful rendering of what I am called upon to translate."

Article 59

1. The minutes mentioned in Article 47 of the Statute shall include:

- the names of the judges present;
- the names of the agents, counsel or advocates present;
- the surnames, first names, description and residence of witnesses and experts heard;
- a brief record of the evidence produced at the hearing;
- declarations made on behalf of the parties;
- a brief record of questions put to the parties by the President or by the judges;
- any decisions delivered or announced by the Court during the hearing.

2. The minutes of public sittings shall be printed and published.

Article 60

1. At each hearing held by the Court, a shorthand note shall be made under the supervision of the Registrar of the oral proceedings, including the evidence taken, and shall be appended to the minutes referred to in Article 59 of the present Rules. This note, unless it is otherwise decided by the Court, shall contain any interpretations from one official language into the other made in Court by the interpreters.

2. A transcript of the evidence of each witness or expert shall be made available to him in order that mistakes may be corrected under the supervision of the Court.

3. A transcript of speeches or declarations made by agents, counsel or advocates shall be made available to them for correction or revision, under the supervision of the Court.

II. Occasional Rules

Interim Protection

Article 61

1. A request for the indication of interim measures of protection may be filed at any time during the proceedings in the case in connection with which it is made. The request shall specify the case to which it relates, the rights to be protected and the interim measures of which the indication is proposed.

2. A request for the indication of interim measures of protection shall have priority over all other cases. The decision thereon shall be treated as a matter of urgency.

3. If the Court is not sitting, the members shall be convened by the President forthwith. Pending the meeting of the Court and a decision by it, the President shall, if need be, take such measures as may appear to him necessary in order to enable the Court to give an effective decision.

4. The Court may indicate interim measures of protection other than those proposed in the request.

5. The rejection of a request for the indication of interim measures of protection shall not prevent the party which has made it from making a fresh request in the same case based on new facts.

6. The Court may indicate interim measures of protection proprio motu. If the Court is not sitting, the President may convene the members in order to submit to the Court the question whether it is expedient to indicate such measures.

7. The Court may at any time by reason of a change in the situation revoke or modify its decision indicating interim measures of protection.

8. The Court shall only indicate interim measures of protection after giving the parties an opportunity of presenting their observations on the subject. The same rule applies when the Court revokes or modifies a decision indicating such measures.

Preliminary Objections

Article 62

1. A preliminary objection must be filed by a party at the latest before the expiry of the time-limit fixed for the delivery of its first pleading.

2. The preliminary objection shall set out the facts and the law on which the objection is based, the submissions and a list of the documents in support; these documents shall be attached; it shall mention any evidence which the party may desire to produce.

3. Upon receipt by the Registrar of a preliminary objection filed by a party, the proceedings on the merits shall be suspended and the Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, shall fix the time-limit within which the other party may present a written statement of its observations and submissions; documents in support shall be attached and evidence which it is proposed to produce shall be mentioned.

4. Unless otherwise decided by the Court, the further proceedings shall be oral.

5. After hearing the parties the Court shall give its decision on the objection or shall join the objection to the merits. If the Court overrules the objection or joins it to the merits, it shall once more fix time-limits for the further proceedings.

Counter-claims

Article 63

When proceedings have been instituted by means of an application, a counter-claim may be presented in the submissions of the Counter-Memorial, provided that such counter-claim is directly connected with the subject-matter of the application and that it comes within the jurisdiction of the Court. In the event of doubt as to the connection between the question presented by way of counter-claim and the subject-matter of the application the Court shall, after due examination, direct whether or not the question thus presented shall be joined to the original proceedings.

Intervention

Article 64

1. An application for permission to intervene under the terms of Article 62 of the Statute shall be filed in the Registry at latest before the commencement of the oral proceedings.

2. The application shall contain:

- a description of the case;
- a statement of law and of fact justifying intervention; and
- a list of the documents in support of the application; these documents shall be attached.

3. The application shall be communicated to the parties, who shall send to the Registry their observations in writing within a time-limit to be fixed by the Court, or by the President, if the Court is not sitting.

4. The Registrar shall also transmit copies of the application for permission to intervene: (a) to Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General and (b), by means of special arrangements made for this purpose between them and the Registrar, to any other States entitled to appear before the Court.

5. The application to intervene shall be placed on the agenda for a hearing, the date and hour of which shall be notified to all concerned. Nevertheless, if the parties have not, in their written observations, opposed the application to intervene, the Court may decide that there shall be no oral argument.

6. The Court will give its decision on the application in the form of a judgment.

Article 65

1. If the Court admits the intervention and if the party intervening expresses a desire to file a Memorial on the merits, the Court shall fix the time-limits within which the Memorial shall be filed and within which the other parties may reply by Counter-Memorials; the same course shall be followed in regard to the Reply and the Rejoinder. If the Court is not sitting, the time-limits shall be fixed by the President.

2. If the Court has not yet given its decision upon the intervention and the application to intervene is not opposed, the President, if the Court is not sitting, may, without prejudice to the decision of the Court on the question whether the application should be granted, fix the time-limits within which the intervening party may file a Memorial on the merits and the other parties may reply by Counter-Memorials.

3. In the cases referred to in the two preceding paragraphs, the time-limits shall, so far as possible, coincide with those already fixed in the case.

Article 66

1. A State which desires to avail itself of the right conferred upon it by Article 63 of the Statute shall file in the Registry a declaration to that effect. This declaration may be filed by a State even though it has not received the notification referred to in that Article.

2. Such declarations shall be communicated to the parties. If any objection or doubt should arise as to whether the intervention is admissible under Article 63 of the Statute, the decision shall rest with the Court.

3. The Registrar shall also transmit copies of the declarations: (a) to Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General and (b), by means of special arrangements made for this purpose between them and the Registrar, to any other States entitled to appear before the Court.

4. The Registrar shall take the necessary steps to enable the intervening party to inspect the documents in the case in so far as they relate to the interpretation of the convention in question, and to submit its written observations thereon to the Court within a time-limit to be fixed by the Court or by the President if the Court is not sitting.

5. These observations shall be communicated to the other parties and may be discussed by them in the course of the oral proceedings: in these proceedings the intervening party shall take part.

Appeals to the CourtArticle 67

1. When an appeal is made to the Court against a decision given by some other tribunal, the proceedings before the Court shall be governed by the provisions of the Statute and of these Rules.

2. If the document instituting the appeal must be filed within a certain limit of time, the date of the receipt of this document in the Registry will be taken by the Court as the material date.

3. The document instituting the appeal shall contain a precise statement of the grounds of the objections to the decision complained of, and these constitute the subject of the dispute referred to the Court.

4. A certified copy of the decision complained of shall be attached to the document instituting the appeal.

5. It is incumbent upon the parties to produce before the Court any useful and relevant material upon which the decision complained of was rendered.

Settlement and discontinuanceArticle 68

If at any time before judgment has been delivered, the parties conclude an agreement as to the settlement of the dispute and so inform the Court in writing, or by mutual agreement inform the Court in writing that they are not going on with the proceedings, the Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, shall make an order officially recording the conclusion of the settlement or the discontinuance of the proceedings; in either case the order shall direct the removal of the case from the list.

Article 69

1. If in the course of proceedings instituted by means of an application, the applicant informs the Court in writing that it is not going on with the proceedings, and if, at the date on which this communication is received by the Registry, the respondent has not yet taken any step in the proceedings, the Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, will make an order officially recording the discontinuance of the proceedings and directing the removal of the case from the list. A copy of this order shall be sent by the Registrar to the respondent.

2. If, at the time when the notice of discontinuance is received, the respondent has already taken some step in the proceedings, the Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, shall fix a time-limit within which the respondent must state whether it opposes the discontinuance of the proceedings. If no objection is made to the discontinuance before the expiration of the time-limit, acquiescence will be presumed and the Court, or the President if the Court is not sitting, will make an order officially recording the discontinuance of the proceedings and directing the removal of the case from the list. If objection is made, the proceedings shall continue.

Section 2—Procedure Before the ChambersArticle 70

Procedure before the Chambers mentioned in Articles 26 and 29 of the Statute shall, subject to the provisions of the Statute and of these Rules relating to the Chambers and to any special rules which the Court may make, be governed by the provisions relating to procedure before the Court.

Article 71

1. When it is desired that a case should be dealt with by one of the Chambers which has been formed in pursuance of Article 26, paragraph 1, or Article 29 of the Statute, a request to this effect should either be made in the document instituting the proceedings or accompany it. Effect will be given to the request if the parties are in agreement.

2. Upon receipt by the Registry of this request, the President of the Court shall communicate it to the members of the Chamber concerned. He shall take such steps as may be necessary to give effect to the provisions of Article 31, paragraph 4, of the Statute.

3. A request for the formation of a Chamber to deal with a particular case as provided for in Article 26, paragraph 2, of the Statute, can be filed at any moment until the closure of the written proceedings. Upon receipt of such a request by the Registry, the President shall ascertain whether the other party assents. When both parties have assented, the President shall ascertain the views of the parties as to the number of judges to constitute the Chamber. The Court shall decide upon the request for the formation of a Chamber in accordance with Article 26, paragraphs 2 and 3, of the Statute and Article 24, paragraphs 2 and 5, of these Rules.

4. The President of the Court shall convene the Chamber at the earliest date compatible with the requirements of the procedure.

5. As soon as the Chamber has met to begin the hearing of the case submitted to it, the powers of the President of the Court shall be exercised in respect of the case by the President of the Chamber.

Article 72

1. The procedure before the Chamber for Summary Procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. If the proceedings are instituted by means of a special agreement, the written proceedings shall consist of a single pleading by each party, filed within the same time-limit, the documents in support being annexed. If the proceedings are instituted by means of an application, the written proceedings shall consist of similar pleadings filed in turn, first by the applicant and secondly by the respondent within the time-limits fixed by the President of the Chamber. The Chamber may, nevertheless, whatever may be the method of instituting the proceedings, if the parties so request, permit the filing of further pleadings; if the Chamber upon its own initiative considers any further pleading to be necessary it may, after hearing the parties, direct that it should be filed.

3. The pleadings shall be communicated by the Registrar to the members of the Chamber and to the opposite party. They shall mention all evidence, other than the documents referred to in the preceding paragraph, which the parties desire to produce.

4. When the case is ready for hearing, the President of the Chamber shall fix a date for the opening of the oral proceedings, unless the parties agree to dispense with them; even if there are no oral proceedings, the Chamber shall retain the right to call upon the parties to supply oral explanations.

5. Witnesses or experts whose names are mentioned in the written proceedings must be available so as to appear before the Chamber when their presence is required.

Article 73

Judgments given by a Chamber will be read at a public sitting of that Chamber.

Section 3—Judgments

Article 74

1. The judgment shall contain:

a statement whether it has been delivered by the Court or by a Chamber;
the date on which it is delivered;
the names of the judges participating;
the names of the parties;
the names of the agents of the parties;
a summary of the proceedings;
the submissions of the parties;
a statement of the facts;
the reasons in point of law;
the operative provisions of the judgment;
the decision, if any, in regard to costs;
the number of the judges constituting the majority.

2. Any judge may, if he so desires, attach his individual opinion to the judgment, whether he dissents from the majority or not, or a bare statement of his dissent.

Article 75

1. When the judgment has been read in public, one original copy, duly signed and sealed, shall be placed in the Archives of the Court and another shall be forwarded to each of the parties.

2. A copy of the judgment shall be sent by the Registrar to Members of the United Nations and to States entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 76

The judgment shall become binding on the parties on the day on which it is read in open Court.

Article 77

The party in whose favour an order for the payment of the costs has been made shall present his bill of costs within ten days after the judgment has been delivered. The Court shall decide any dispute concerning the bill.

Section 4—Requests for the Revision or Interpretation of a Judgment

Article 78

1. A request for the revision of a judgment shall be made by an application.

The application shall state the judgment of which the revision is desired, and shall contain the particulars necessary to show that the conditions laid down by Article 61 of the Statute are fulfilled, and a list of the documents in support; these documents shall be attached to the application.

2. The request for revision shall be communicated by the Registrar to the other parties. The latter may submit observations within a time-limit to be fixed by the Court, or by the President if the Court is not sitting.

3. If the Court admits the application for a revision, it will determine the written procedure required for examining the merits of the application.

4. If the Court makes the admission of the application conditional upon previous compliance with the judgment to be revised, this condition shall be communicated forthwith to the applicant by the Registrar and proceedings in revision shall be stayed pending receipt by the Court of proof of compliance with the judgment.

Article 79

1. A request to the Court to interpret a judgment which it has given may be made either by the notification of a special agreement between the parties or by an application by one or more of the parties.

2. The special agreement or application shall state the judgment of which an interpretation is requested and shall specify the precise point or points in dispute.

3. If the request for interpretation is made by means of an application, the Registrar shall communicate the application to the other parties, and the latter may submit observations within a time-limit to be fixed by the Court, or by the President if the Court is not sitting.

4. Whether the request be made by special agreement or by application, the Court may invite the parties to furnish further written or oral explanations.

Article 80

If the judgment to be revised or to be interpreted was given by the Court, the request for its revision or interpretation shall be dealt with by the Court. If the judgment was given by one of the Chambers mentioned in Articles 26 or 29 of the Statute, the request for its revision or interpretation shall be dealt with by the same Chamber.

Article 81

The decision of the Court on requests for revision or interpretation shall be given in the form of a judgment.

HEADING III ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 82

1. In proceedings in regard to advisory opinions, the Court shall, in addition to the provisions of Article 96 of the Charter and Chapter IV of the Statute, apply the provisions of the Articles which follow. It shall also be guided by the provisions of these Rules which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable; for this purpose it shall above all consider whether the request for the advisory opinion relates to a legal question actually pending between two or more States.

2. If the Court is of the opinion that a request for an advisory opinion necessitates an early answer, it shall take the necessary steps to accelerate the procedure.

Article 83

If the advisory opinion is requested upon a legal question actually pending between two or more States, Article 31 of the Statute shall apply, as also the provisions of these Rules concerning the application of that Article.

Article 84

1. Advisory opinions shall be given after deliberation by the Court. They shall mention the number of judges constituting the majority.

2. Any judge may, if he so desires, attach his individual opinion to the advisory opinion of the Court, whether he dissents from the majority or not, or a bare statement of his dissent.

Article 85

1. The Registrar will in due time inform the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the appropriate organ of the institution, if any, which requested the advisory opinion, as to the date and the hour fixed for the sitting to be held for the reading of the opinion.

2. One original copy of the advisory opinion, duly signed and sealed, shall be placed in the archives of the Court and another shall be sent to the Secretariat of the United Nations. Certified copies shall be sent by the Registrar to Members of the United Nations and to the States, specialized agencies and public international organizations directly concerned.

VII. The Secretariat

A. THE CHARTER AND THE SECRETARIAT¹

The Charter establishes the Secretariat as a principal organ of the United Nations.

The Secretariat comprises a Secretary-General and such staff as the United Nations may require.

The Secretary-General acts in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council and of the Trusteeship Council, and performs such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General makes an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the organization.

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, notifies the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and similarly notifies the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

The Secretary-General is to receive from those Members of the United Nations which have responsibilities for the administration of Non-Self-Governing Territories statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social and educational conditions in such of those Non-Self-Governing Territories as are not placed under the International Trusteeship System.

Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the coming into force of the Charter is registered as soon as possible with the Secretariat and published by it.

In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff may not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the organization. They are to refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the organization. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

A staff is appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly. Appropriate staffs are permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs form a part of the Secretariat.

The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service is the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity. Due regard is paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

B. ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANIZATION OF THE SECRETARIAT

1. THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

The Secretary-General is the chief administrative officer of the United Nations. He is appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

On February 1, 1946, the General Assembly, upon the recommendation of the Security Council, appointed, as the first Secretary-General of the United Nations, Mr. Trygve Lie.

The General Assembly had previously decided, on January 24, 1946, that the terms of the appointment of the Secretary-General should be such as to enable a man of eminence and high attainment to accept and maintain the position, ¹This section is a summary of the Charter provisions relating to the Secretariat. The main provisions are contained in Chapter XV, Articles 97-101. Other provisions are to be found in Articles 7, 12, 20, 73, 102, 105 of the Charter and Articles 5, 7, 13, 14, 18, 33, 40, 67, 70 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

and that the first Secretary-General should be appointed for five years, the appointment being open at the end of that period for a further five-year term. The General Assembly noted that the General Assembly and the Security Council were free to modify the terms of office of future Secretaries-General and that, because the Secretary-General was a confidant of many governments, it was desirable that no Member should offer him, immediately upon retirement, any governmental position and he on his part should refrain from accepting any such position.¹

2. GENERAL STRUCTURE OF THE SECRETARIAT

The General Assembly, on February 13, 1946, resolved that "the Secretary-General shall take immediate steps to establish an administrative organization which will permit of the effective discharge of his administrative and general responsibilities under the Charter and the efficient performance of those functions and services required to meet the needs of the several organs of the United Nations."

The General Assembly decided that the principal units of the Secretariat should be:

- (1) Department of Security Council Affairs
- (2) Department of Economic Affairs
- (3) Department of Social Affairs
- (4) Department of Trusteeship and Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories
- (5) Department of Public Information
- (6) Legal Department
- (7) Conference and General Services
- (8) Administrative and Financial Services

The General Assembly authorized the Secretary-General to appoint Assistant Secretaries-General and such other officers and staff as might be required and to prescribe their responsibilities and duties.

The Assistant Secretaries-General have responsibility for and supervision of the departments and services. There is always to be one Assistant Secretary-General designated by the Secretary-General to deputize for him when he is absent or unable to perform his functions. The Secretary-General was requested to take whatever steps might be required to ensure co-ordination between the Departments of Economic Affairs and of Social Affairs, the maintenance of appropriate administrative relationships between those Departments and the specialized agencies, and co-ordination of the activities of the other departments and organs.

The Secretary-General was assisted, in the first instance, in dealing with administrative, personnel and budgetary problems, by an Advisory Group of Experts. Details of the Advisory Group's work are contained in its two reports: (1) "First Report of the Advisory Group of Experts on Administrative, Personnel, and Budgetary Questions to the Secretary-General of the United Nations", dated London, March 8, 1946, and (2) "Second Report of the Advisory Group of Experts on Administrative, Personnel, and Budgetary Questions to the Secretary-General of the United Nations", dated Lake Success, October 19, 1946.

In accordance with the recommendations which had been made in the report of the Preparatory Commission, the General Assembly at the second part of its first session elected an Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions with the following terms of reference.²

The Advisory Committee shall be responsible for expert examination of the Budget of the United Nations and shall assist the Administrative and Budgetary Committee of the General Assembly. At the commencement of each regular session it shall submit to the General Assembly a detailed report on the Budget for the next financial year and on the accounts of the last financial year. It shall also examine on behalf of the General Assembly the administrative budgets of specialized agencies and proposals for financial and budgetary arrangements with such agencies. It shall perform such other duties as may be assigned to it under the regulations for the financial administration of the United Nations.

The Advisory Committee is advisory to the General Assembly and its Fifth Committee (Administrative and Budgetary). It replaced and superseded the Advisory Group of Experts first appointed, as referred to above, which was advisory to the Secretary-General.

3. EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

The Executive Office of the Secretary-General assists the latter in his relationships with Members and with organs of the United Nations, with specialized agencies and with non-governmental organizations. It also assists in forming the policy of the organization and in co-ordinating the activities of the departments of the Secretariat.

These functions require that the Executive Office be responsible for protocol matters, liaison with diplomatic representatives, formal

It has also provided the staff for 'the Economic Commission' for Europe in Geneva, and the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East in Shanghai. The Department also provides the staffs and documentation for economic conferences called by the Economic and Social Council, such as the International Conference on Trade and Employment.

The Department consists of the following units:

b. Office of the Assistant Secretary-General

The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General is responsible for planning the activities of the Department as a whole and for supervising the work of its various divisions. It also deals with the problems of administration, internal management, finance and personnel, and maintains relations with the other departments of the Secretariat and with delegations.

c. Joint Division of Co-ordination and Liaison

Article 57 of the United Nations Charter provides that various specialized agencies established by inter-governmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities in economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. The Division of Co-ordination and Liaison has direct responsibility for negotiations with the specialized agencies leading to the establishment of their formal relations with the United Nations, and for ensuring that the agreements between the specialized agencies and the United Nations are implemented.

Under Article 71 of the United Nations Charter, the Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within the competence of the Council. The Division of Co-ordination and Liaison receives the applications of organizations seeking consultative status with the United Nations and prepares background material for submission to the Committee on Arrangements for Consultation with Non-Governmental Organizations. The Committee then makes recommendations to the Economic and Social Council. The Division maintains liaison with non-governmental organizations which have been granted consultative status.

This Division also provides the technical Secretariat of the Economic and Social Council. The responsibilities of this unit are to arrange the Council's agenda, to assist the Council in its conduct of business and to conduct correspondence with Member Governments and their delegations regarding the work of the Council.

Since this Division deals with problems common to both the Department of Economic Affairs and the Department of Social Affairs, it has been established as a Joint Division responsible to the Assistant Secretaries-General of the two Departments. For purposes of administrative convenience, however, the Division is included in the structure of the Department of Economic Affairs and is administered by that Department.

d. Division of Economic Stability and Development

This Division collects and analyzes the material required in dealing with the problems in the fields of economic development, full employment and economic stability.

The Division prepares reports in these three fields on requests of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, the Economic and Employment Commission and its two Sub-Commissions—on Economic Development and on Employment Stability. Thus the Division assisted in the preparation of the preliminary reports submitted to the Economic and Social Council in connection with the Council's resolution on the economic reconstruction of war-devastated areas in Europe and in Asia and the Far East. The Division prepares reports also on world economic trends, on financial needs of the devastated areas, on plans and programs for economic development of undeveloped and under-developed areas, and related matters.

In addition to studies and reports in the fields mentioned above, the functions of the Division include several other responsibilities in respect of international economic problems. Chief among these are the Secretariat's activities under the Assembly's resolution on post-UNRRA relief, the provision of technical assistance on economic problems to Member Governments and the organization of a United Nations Scientific Conference on Resources Conservation and Utilization.

The Division also acts as a secretariat for the Economic and Employment Commission and its Sub-Commissions on Economic Development and on Employment and Economic Stability.

e. Transport and Communications Division

This Division prepares material for the work of the Transport and Communications Commission, brings to its attention important developments in the field of transport and communications, provides its secretariat during the meetings and implements its decisions.

The Division also prepares the work and provides the secretariat for conferences or meetings of experts convened by the United Nations in the field of transport and communications, as, for example, the Meeting of Governmental Postal Experts held at United Nations Headquarters, Lake Success, in December 1946 to frame a draft agreement between the United Nations and the Universal Postal Union; the Meeting of Governmental Experts to prepare for a World Conference on Passports and Frontier Formalities, held in Geneva in April 1947; and the Meeting of Transport Experts held in Geneva under the auspices of the Economic Commission for Europe in May and June 1947 to discuss European transport problems.

Similarly it serves the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly with respect to that part of their work which is concerned with international transport and communications questions.

The Division also maintains contact with specialized and other inter-governmental agencies and non-governmental organizations in the field of transport and communications. During the past year the Division has participated in the negotiations which have resulted in the International Civil Aviation Organization's becoming a specialized agency of the United Nations, has paved the way for the Universal Postal Union to become a specialized agency and has prepared negotiations with the International Telecommunications Union for the same purpose. Finally, the Division is preparing the forthcoming International Maritime Conference with a view to creating an Inter-Governmental Maritime Organization as a specialized agency of the United Nations in this field.

It also advises the United Nations Secretariat as a whole on questions arising in the field of international transport and communications, and prepares reports desired by any organs of the United Nations with respect to this field.

The Division, in addition, publishes regularly the Monthly Summary of Important Events in the Field of Transport and Communications and, periodically, the List of Multilateral Conventions in the Field of Transport and Communications.

f. Fiscal Division

The functions of this Division are to act as the secretariat of the Fiscal Commission, and to make studies in the field of public finance, particularly in its legal, administrative and other technical aspects. It is also concerned with the fiscal implications of recommendations made by other commissions and sub-commissions of the Economic and Social Council. It acts as a research and service unit on fiscal problems to meet the needs of various commissions, specialized agencies and Member Governments, and will deal with requests for expert assistance in the problems of public finance, e.g. taxation, fiscal administration, management of public debt.

g. Statistical Office

The general functions of the Statistical Office of the United Nations are set out in the resolution of the Economic and Social Council of June 21, 1946, which calls for the establishment of a central Statistical Office within the Secretariat of the United Nations. This office is asked to perform six principal functions. These are:

- (1) to collect, analyze and evaluate the statistics from Member Governments, specialized agencies and other sources;
- (2) to publish statistics;
- (3) to co-ordinate the statistical activities of the specialized agencies;
- (4) to promote the development and improvement of statistics in general;
- (5) to maintain an international centre of statistics, and
- (6) to maintain close contact with national governments on programs of statistical research, submission of statistical data, analysis and publication.

In carrying out these functions the Statistical Office of the United Nations serves all departments of the Secretariat. It prepares studies and reports on statistical questions. It is responsible for the preparation of the Monthly Bulletin of Statistics, the "Statistical Yearbook" and other statistical publications issued by the United Nations. It also provides the secretariat for the Statistical Commission and the Sub-Commission on Statistical Sampling.

h. Secretariat of the International Conference on Trade and Employment

This unit of the Department of Economic Affairs has served the first session of the Preparatory Committee of the International Conference on Trade and Employment in London, the Drafting Committee at Lake Success and the second session of the Preparatory Committee now meeting at Geneva. The secretariat made an analysis of the Draft Charter submitted originally by the United States and has from that time onward compiled explanatory notes and commentaries as the Charter of the International Trade Organization has developed. It has prepared working documents for all three meetings and provided either the secretaries for the various committees and sub-committees or has assisted the Rapporteur in his duties.

During the second session of the Preparatory Committee, the secretariat undertook liaison duties in connection with the tariff negotiations proceeding alongside the discussion of the Charter, and also prepared working papers relating to a general agreement on tariffs and trade.

It is likely that the World Plenary Conference to establish the International Trade Organization will take place towards the end of 1947. The secretariat will furnish to this conference services similar to those provided at previous conferences and it will have the further responsibility of providing the nucleus of the future secretariat of the International Trade Organization.

6. DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL AFFAIRS

a. Functions and Organization

This Department serves the Economic and Social Council, certain of its commissions and committees, and the Third Committee (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) of the General Assembly with respect to their functions in the fields of science, education, culture, social questions, demography, human rights, refugees and displaced persons, narcotic drugs and public health; provides studies and reports in the fields of its competence for the use of all interested organs of the United Nations; provides liaison with specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations concerned with these questions in their regional or international respects.

These functions require that the Department co-operate with the Department of Economic Affairs in arranging for such services as notification of meetings and preparation of provisional agenda for the Economic and Social Council; arrange for like services for the social commissions, sub-commissions and committees of the Council; and, in co-operation with Conference and General Services, arrange for such services as summary and verbatim records and translation of documents and records for the Social Commission, the Human Rights Commission, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Population Commission, the Narcotic Drugs Commission and such other social commissions and committees as the Council establishes.

The Department provides the required studies and documentation within the fields of its competence for these organs and for other units of the Secretariat; assists the appropriate commissions in the application of conventions; and assists, as called upon, in the preparation for international conferences pertaining to its fields of competence and held under the auspices of the United Nations.

In co-operation with the Department of Economic Affairs and with Conference and General Services, the Department arranges for services to the Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies and the Committee for Consultation on Arrangements with Non-Governmental Organizations; in co-operation with the Department of Economic Affairs and other departments concerned provides appropriate personnel to represent the United Nations at conferences and meetings of the specialized agencies; reviews reports, recommendations, and conventions of specialized and non-governmental organizations which fall within its competence; and makes recommendations to the Council with respect to the programs and administrative co-ordination of the specialized agencies.

The Department of Social Affairs is organized into the following units:

Office of the Assistant Secretary-General
Division of Social Activities
Division of Human Rights
Division of Narcotic Drugs
Division of Population

b. Office of the Assistant Secretary-General

The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General plans the general policy and program of the Department, co-ordinates and directs the work of the sections and divisions; maintains administrative and working liaison with the other departments; reports to the Secretary-General on problems and developments in all fields relating to the work and functions of the Department.

It is responsible for the inner administration of the Department, the co-ordination of problems of budget, personnel, registry, office space for the divisions and liaison with Administrative and Financial Services on these matters; it centralizes all problems pertaining to the organization of conferences, commissions, committees or other international gatherings serviced by the Department and maintains liaison with the Conference and General Services on these matters.

In conjunction with the Department of Economic Affairs, it maintains liaison with specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations, and follows, stimulates and co-ordinates the work of these bodies in the social fields.

The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General is organized into the following units:

(Joint Economic and Social) Division for Co-ordination and Liaison
Section of Education, Science and Culture
Section of Studies and Research

The Assistant Secretary-General in charge of Social Affairs drew up a plan for his Department including an administrative unit and eight substantive divisions. This number was later on modified; four divisions were maintained and two sections, taking the place of the previously planned divisions, were established under the direct supervision of the Assistant Secretary-General and his Executive Assistant.

The supervision of the divisions was entrusted to a Top Ranking Director, who was to deputize for the Assistant Secretary-General in his absence.

The Sections of Studies and Research, and of Education, Science and Culture, were set up under the direct control of the Assistant Secretary-General's Office. They initiate and stimulate studies on the most urgent problems of international scientific and cultural co-operation and keep the Secretary-General and central organs of the United Nations informed on activities and developments in the field of science, art, education and culture.

c. Division of Social Activities

The Division of Social Activities is concerned with standards of living; protection of the family, children, and youth; problems of crime, delinquency, and prostitution; social welfare services; and related social questions. It prepares studies and other documents and undertakes administrative and advisory functions in these fields in accordance with instructions from the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council. It services meetings of the Social Commission and of other organs of the United Nations dealing with social questions.

The Division comprises the following sections or units, each responsible for specific functions:

Section of Living Standards
Section of Family Protection
Section of Social Services
Section of Social Defense
Health Section
Refugee Section
Migration Unit

In each case, the work of the sections includes consultation and liaison with the specialized agencies and with non-governmental organizations concerned with social questions. The sections work in close co-ordination with each other through regular meetings of their chiefs with the Director and Assistant Directors of the Division, and through intra-divisional committees established for the purpose of dealing with special questions such as child welfare, and housing and town and country planning.

(1) Section of Living Standards

The Section of Living Standards assembles and disseminates information on techniques of measuring standards of living, on the present levels of living of countries and regions, and on national and international social measures designed to raise living standards. Particular attention is being given to standards of living in economically under-developed areas.

The Section is also studying problems of housing and town and country planning, with a view to the establishment of an information center on these subjects. An international publication on housing questions is to be issued.

(2) Section of Family Protection

The Section of Family Protection deals with problems of the family, child welfare and youth guidance. The activities of the Section will center on measures for the support and strengthening of family life as part of a general social policy, and in particular on measures for the welfare of children and adolescents physically, mentally and spiritually.

The Section is engaged in the reconstruction and development of an information center on child and youth welfare, along the lines of the one formerly maintained by the League of Nations. The Secretary-General has invited Member Governments to submit to the United Nations annual reports on child welfare. The material received will be analyzed, summarized and published by the Section. A questionnaire to governments is being prepared for the purpose of assisting them in supplying more detailed and comparable information in their future reports.

The Section is taking part, along with other sections of the division, in the formulation of an inquiry to governments on the administration of family protection and child welfare as well as other social welfare questions. It contemplates an inquiry into the situation of children in war-devastated countries with a view to the development, in collaboration with other interested organizations, of international measures of assistance.

The section is also studying the problems of youth and is assembling information on the activities and programs of youth organizations throughout the world, with a view to stimulating international activity.

(3) Section of Social Services

The Section of Social Services has the long-range function of studying and preparing reports on social welfare administration in the various countries, on methods of promoting the training of social welfare personnel and on the development of services of information and expert advice to aid individual countries in the improvement of their social welfare organization.

The Section is carrying out practical work along these lines through its administration of certain social welfare advisory services formerly carried on by UNRRA. These functions fall under four headings: supply of advisers to governments requesting them; provision of fellowships to enable social welfare specialists to study the methods of countries other than their own; rehabilitation of the physically handicapped through assistance in the manufacture of prosthetic appliances and in vocational training; and supply of technical publications for training of social workers. Up to the end of June 1947, requests from nine countries for 31 advisors on child welfare and other social welfare subjects had been approved; 114 fellowships had been granted to twelve countries; and aid for physical rehabilitation programs in nine countries had been approved.

Two projects for countries not aided by UNRRA have been initiated under the same program: three films on social welfare subjects for use in India are being produced; and two seminars for social welfare specialists of Latin America are being held (in Medellin, Colombia, during August of 1947, and in Montevideo, Uruguay, during September).

The Section has also provided a secretariat for the meetings of the Executive Board of the International Children's Emergency Fund and its committees, and is helping to co-ordinate the work of the Fund with the child welfare activities of the Division.

(4) Section of Social Defense

The Section of Social Defense deals with prevention of crime, treatment of criminals and delinquents and protection of society from anti-social elements. The Section has prepared a questionnaire on these subjects for Member Governments, is organizing an information center and is encouraging the formation of working parties of experts in the individual countries to advise on international activities.

The Section also administers functions formerly carried on by the League of Nations in regard to prostitution, the traffic in women and children and the traffic in obscene publications. Steps are being taken to resume publication of an annual report on the traffic in women and children, formerly published by the League on the basis of reports from governments.

(5) Health Section

The Health Section informs and assists the various organs of the United Nations regarding any activities concerning public health. It also carries on liaison activities with the Interim Commission of the World Health Organization.

(6) Refugee Section

The Refugee Section assists any organ related to the United Nations in regard to any activities concerning refugees and displaced persons. It also acts as liaison with the Preparatory Commission of the International Refugee Organization.

(7) Migration Unit

A Migration Unit, in collaboration with the Division of Population and the International Labour Office, is studying the questions of international protection of the social and economic rights of migrants, the organization of international placement and information services for migrants, the financing of migratory movements and assistance to indigent foreigners.

d. Division of Human Rights

The Division of Human Rights serves two commissions of the Economic and Social Council: the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on the Status of Women. The work of the Commission on Human Rights is directed toward submitting proposals, recommendations and reports to the Economic and Social Council regarding: (a) an International Bill of Rights; (b) international Declarations or Conventions on civil liberties, the status of women, freedom of information and similar matters; (c) the prevention of discrimination on grounds of race, sex, language or religion; (d) the protection of minorities; and (e) any other matter concerning human rights. At the request of the Economic and Social Council, the Commission also makes studies and recommendations and provides information and other services. According to these terms of reference, the Division of Human Rights gathers all material relevant to the subjects mentioned above, undertakes research work and prepares the necessary documentation for the work of the Commission.

The Division of Human Rights performs similar duties for the three subsidiary bodies of the Commission established by the Economic and Social Council at its fourth session. These are: the Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press; the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities; and the Drafting Committee of the Commission on Human Rights. The functions of the Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press are: (a) in the first instance, to examine what rights, obligations and practices should be included in the concept of freedom of information and to report to the Commission on Human Rights on any issues that may arise from such examination; (b) to perform any other functions which may be entrusted to it by the Commission on Human Rights or by the Economic and Social Council. This Sub-Commission was given the special responsibility of assisting the Economic and Social Council in preparing the International Conference on Freedom of Information. At its first session the Sub-Committee prepared a preliminary draft agenda for the Conference and made recommendations concerning the invitation of non-member States, co-operation of specialized agencies, inter-governmental organizations and non-governmental organizations in the Conference and other matters.

The functions of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities are: (a) in the first instance, to examine what provisions should be adopted in defining the principles which are to be applied in the field of the prevention of discrimination on grounds of race, sex, language or religion, and in the field of the protection of minorities, and to make recommendations to the Commission on urgent problems in these fields; (b) to perform any other functions which may be entrusted to it by the Economic and Social Council or the Commission on Human Rights.

The Drafting Committee of the Commission on Human Rights is charged with the important responsibility of preparing, on the basis of a documented outline supplied by the Division of Human Rights, a preliminary draft of an International Bill of Human Rights.

The Commission on the Status of Women prepares recommendations and reports to the Economic and Social Council on the promotion of women's rights in political, economic, civil, social and educational fields with the object of implementing the principle that men and women shall have equal rights, and develops proposals to give effect to these recommendations. The Commission also makes recommendations to the Economic and Social Council on urgent problems requiring immediate attention in the field of women's rights. It is the Division of Human Rights that performs all the necessary work of research, gathering material and preparing documentation for this Commission, as it does for the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary bodies.

In conformity with the scope and nature of its work, the Division of Human Rights is divided into the following sections:

- (a) General Section
- (b) Research Section
- (c) Section on Freedom of Information and of the Press
- (d) Section on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities
- (e) Section on the Status of Women

The Division of Human Rights is preparing a "Yearbook on Human Rights," the first issue of which was scheduled for publication in August 1947. Upon request, the Division also furnishes the different organs of the United Nations, the Member States and organizations in different countries with information concerning the problems of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

e. Division of Narcotic Drugs

The Division of Narcotic Drugs is responsible, under the Secretary-General, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Economic and Social Council, for supervising the application of the international conventions concerning narcotics and for developing any new measures which may be necessary in the light of changing circumstances. The Division acts as the secretariat of the Commission and in this connection prepares studies and documentation of all kinds. It also examines and distributes a large number of reports received from governments regarding the fulfilment of their international obligations concerning narcotics and is a centre for all information in this field.

The activities of the Division are based primarily on six international conventions and agreements, which include the Hague Convention of 1912, the Geneva Convention of 1925 and the Limitation Convention of 1931. The recent Protocol of December 11, 1946, transfers the functions of the League of Nations under these conventions to the United Nations and authorizes the Secretary-General of the United Nations to perform at once the duties hitherto discharged by the Secretary-General of the League of Nations.

The Division maintains liaison with the special international control organs set up under the 1925 and 1931 conventions, namely the Permanent Central Opium Board and the Supervisory Body, and with the specialized agencies, especially the World Health Organization.

Although the system of international control has achieved important results in the past, it is by no means complete or perfect, while the machinery set up under the existing Conventions, agreements and protocols is exceedingly complicated. In due course the Division will have to undertake studies with a view to codifying the various international instruments, improving their provisions where necessary, and simplifying the machinery of control. This is a major task which will involve an international conference of all the parties to the conventions.

Since the work of the Division falls broadly into three categories, it is organized as follows:

(1) Section I

This Section is in charge of the supervision of the application of the international conventions. In this connection the re-establishment of full control of the world trade in narcotics, the suppression of illicit traffic and the study of special national legislation relating to drugs are of particular importance.

(2) Section II

This Section deals with problems relating to drug addiction, the development of new drugs, including new synthetic drugs, and the control of raw materials. One of the main tasks to be undertaken is the preparation of an international conference to draft a new convention covering the materials from which narcotic drugs are produced.

(3) Section III

This Section discharges duties of a legal and administrative nature and acts specifically as the secretariat of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and of such committees or sub-committees as may be set up by that Commission. It is responsible for drafting a considerable volume of formal correspondence with governments arising from obligations imposed by the conventions or from resolutions of the Narcotics Commission or the Economic and Social Council.

f. Division of Population

The Population Division serves the Population Commission, advises the Assistant Secretary-General on demographic problems, prepares demographic analyses needed by the Secretariat and specialized agencies, and, in co-operation with the Statistical Office, co-operates with Member States in problems of improving the quality and comparability of demographic materials and methods.

The terms of reference of the Commission, which the Division serves, indicate the scope of the Division's responsibilities. They provide that the Commission shall arrange for studies on (a) population changes, the factors associated with such changes and the policies designed to influence these factors; (b) inter-relationships of economic and social conditions and population trends; (c) migratory movements of population and factors associated with such movements; (d) any other population problems on which the principal or subsidiary organs of the United Nations or the Specialized Agencies may seek advice.

In response to the resolution adopted by the Economic and Social Council on the recommendation of the Population Commission at its first session, the Population Division:

1. In co-operation with the Statistical Office is:

- a. preparing a demographic yearbook for publication in 1948;
- b. assisting such Member States as are taking censuses in and around 1950 by facilitating an exchange of information in the interests of improving the quality and achieving greater comparability of results;
- c. keeping Member States informed as to the 1950 Census of the Americas and the demographic aspects of the World Census of agriculture.

2. In co-operation with the Trusteeship Division is preparing demographic studies of the Trust Territories.

3. Is preparing plans for consideration of the Commission to encourage interested Member States in the study of:

- a. the interplay of economic, social and demographic factors hindering the attainment of an adequate standard of living and cultural development; and
- b. the most favorable rate of population change from the economic and social points of view.

The Division also serves a variety of committees requiring miscellaneous assistance in demographic matters. The staff of the Division is now being recruited and is expected to be prepared for full-scale operation by the end of 1947.

7. DEPARTMENT OF TRUSTEESHIP AND INFORMATION FROM NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

a. Functions and Organization

This Department serves the Trusteeship Council and the Fourth Committee (Trusteeship) of the General Assembly; informs the Secretary-General on problems and developments in this field; supplies other organs of the United Nations and departments of the Secretariat with information concerning Trust Territories, Non-Self-Governing Territories, and non-security aspects of strategic areas; and provides documentation for the General Assembly when questions arising under Chapters XI, XII and XIII of the Charter are under consideration.

These functions require that the Department provide such services as notification of meetings and preparation of agenda for the Trusteeship Council and other commissions and committees established by the Council; and, in co-operation with the Conference and General Services, arranges for services such as verbatim records, translation of records and documents. The Department provides studies and documentation required by the Trusteeship Council and subsidiary agencies; assists the Trusteeship Council in the drafting and consideration of Trusteeship Agreements, formulation of questionnaires concerning each Trust Territory, examination of the reports of administering authorities, preparation of annual reports on each Trust Territory, acceptance and examination of petitions, and periodic visits and surveys. The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General assumes responsibility for such other necessary functions and services as are not specifically delegated to the divisions of the department, such as liaison with delegations and international organizations at a high level.

c. Division of Trusteeship

The Office of the Director of the Division of Trusteeship co-ordinates and directs the work of the Division, and ensures the necessary collaboration among the several sections of the Division. It provides such technical advice on trusteeship matters or other services and functions as may be required by the Assistant Secretary-General of the Department.

The Office of the Director also ensures, through liaison with Conference and General Services, the necessary administrative and other services for the meetings of the Trusteeship Council and for other activities and responsibilities of that Council; and obtains, in collaboration with the Bureau of Personnel, the services of such technical experts and consultants as may be required by the Trusteeship Council. It performs such other functions and services relating to trusteeship matters as may be delegated to the Trusteeship Division by the Assistant Secretary-General of the Department.

The Division of Trusteeship is organized into the following sections:

(4) Visits Section

The Visits Section assists in the organization of and arrangements for the periodic visits to the Trust Territories as provided in Article 87 (c) of the Charter and arranges for and provides, as needed, the staff and expert consultants to accompany visiting groups to the Trust Territories. It also assists in the preparation of the reports to the Trusteeship Council on the findings of these visits or surveys.

(5) Petitions Section

It drafts correspondence with governments and performs such other functions and services relating to Non-Self-Governing Territories as may be delegated to the Division by the Assistant Secretary-General of the Department.

The Division of Non-Self-Governing Territories is organized in the following sections:

Specialists' Unit
African Section
Caribbean Section
Pacific-Asia Section

(1) Specialists' Unit

The co-ordination of the work of the Specialists' Unit is the particular responsibility of the Assistant Director of the Division. The Unit makes research studies on special problems affecting Non-Self-Governing Territories as a whole, taking due account of the work undertaken by other departments or by the specialized agencies. It is its responsibility to supply to these departments or agencies such special information on questions affecting Non-Self-Governing Territories as may be of value to the departments or agencies in their functional operations. It analyzes various special aspects of social and economic policy in Non-Self-Governing Territories with a view to supplying analyses of current practices and policies of various governments and organizations.

In particular, the sections perform research work in relation to the territorial problems in the territories within their respective regions. Where regional organizations exist, they maintain close liaison with such organizations with a view to the co-ordination of information in both directions.

8. DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INFORMATION

a. Functions and Organization

"The United Nations cannot achieve its purposes unless the peoples of the world are fully informed of its aims and activities." With these words the General Assembly during the first part of the first session, meeting in London in February 1946, endorsed certain recommendations on policies, functions and organization for a Public Information Department of the United Nations.¹ Based on these recommendations, the Department of Public Information was organized to develop facilities and services for press, radio, films and other information media; and to undertake, on its own initiative, positive information activities to supplement services of existing agencies of information on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

General direction of these activities is vested in the Assistant Secretary-General for Public Information, and the Principal Director, who advise the Secretary-General on all aspects of public information policy and are responsible, with the assistance of an Executive Office, for the activities of the Department as a whole. Further delegation of responsibility for activities in the various fields is divided amongst the following units:

1. Press and Publications Office, including a Central News & Information Service
2. Radio Division
3. Films and Visual Information Division
4. Headquarters Liaison Services
5. External Services
6. Reference & Research Services

b. Office of Assistant Secretary-General

The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General advises the Secretary-General on all problems of information policy of the United Nations; plans, co-ordinates and directs the activities of the Department.

The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General is organized into the following units:

1. Office of the Assistant Secretary-General
2. Office of the Director
3. Executive Office

c. Press and Publications Office

This Office is the central organ of the Department serving all divisions and services for the dissemination of information to the public information media of the world about the activities of the United Nations. It is the official source of all announcements, releases and communications pertaining to the organization and the focal point for all news inquiries from correspondents of the press, radio and other media.

Through a staff of information officers specializing in the work of the several departments and organs of the United Nations, the Office prepares information of public interest for release at headquarters and for transmission to regional information centres abroad.

In the field of press relations, the Office also arranges for the accreditation of news correspondents to the organization, arranges general press conferences and individual interviews with ranking members of the Secretariat, and develops and manages all working press facilities, advises the Secretary-General and other officials of the organization on matters of press relations, and co-operates with the several delegations and the specialized agencies in issuing material to correspondents.

As of June 1947, nearly 800 journalists had been accredited, of whom a substantial number devoted full time to covering the work of the organization. By that date also more than 4,500 press releases had been issued, ranging from brief announcements of forthcoming events to comprehensive background papers on the principal and subsidiary organs of the United Nations.

Further functions of the Office fall under the head of Feature Services and Publications. As part of the activities of the former the Office produces in English, French and Spanish a weekly clip-sheet containing a variety of articles about the United Nations. This clip-sheet, together with plastic plates or matrices of appropriate pictures and illustrative material, is sent to newspapers in various parts of the world. Parallel to the weekly clip-sheet, Feature Services will also produce a fortnightly newsletter for wide distribution to the general public.

Finally, as part of its activities under the heading of Publications, the Office is responsible for the production in English, French and Spanish, of a weekly magazine entitled the United Nations Weekly Bulletin which constitutes a progress report of the activities of the organization and of the specialized agencies. The Bulletin is on sale to the public and is distributed to United Nations agencies in various parts of the world.

d. Radio Division

The Radio Division has two main responsibilities, the provision of services and facilities for existing broadcasting agencies and correspondents and the direction of the United Nations' own broadcasting services in its five official languages. To carry out these duties, the Division includes sections for (1) liaison services, (2) program planning and (3) program production. Associated with the Division is also a telecommunications service concerned with the provision of facilities for United Nations radio activities and other telecommunication requirements.

The Liaison Section establishes and maintains contact with radio stations, broadcasters and listeners throughout the world; encourages the relay or rebroadcasting of programs originated by the Radio Division; arranges for the use by broadcasting agencies of facilities established at the Interim Headquarters; initiates the production of special program material for use by outside broadcasters; prepares and distributes publicity material and arranges in conjunction with the Press and Publications Office the issuing of press releases.

The Program and Production Sections are responsible for arranging all United Nations programs—newscasts, talks, features and interviews—carried on the United Nations' own radio services, or distributed by transcription.

These programs are transmitted daily (Sundays excepted) to Europe, the Pacific and the United States in English; to Europe and the Pacific in French; to Latin America and the Pacific in Spanish; to the U.S.S.R. in Russian; and to the Pacific and Far East in Chinese. Relay of these broadcasts by national networks is encouraged and is taking place on a steadily increasing scale. In addition, as a service broadcast to all news media, the proceedings of important meetings of the General Assembly, Councils, commissions and committees are transmitted to Europe with a running explanatory narration in English and French.

Special series of broadcasts which have been developed in 1947 include a daily radio review in French and English, two series in Spanish on the organization and the personalities of the United Nations, a series of feature programs designed for worldwide relay, a continuing series of broadcasts on the specialized agencies and, finally, a continuing series of talks by representatives of the principal international non-governmental organizations with consultative status.

Working with the Radio Division on the development of plans for its technical facilities, the Chief Communications Engineer and his staff act as consultants to the Director of the Division on the use of technical facilities now leased from the U.S. State Department, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation. These experts also advise the Assistant Secretary-General and others on the best means of implementing the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Telecommunications, which reported, in November 1946, on the means of establishing worldwide radio communication services and a global feeder network for national broadcasting organizations to keep the United Nations in touch with the peoples of all Member States and with all its overseas information centers.

e. Films and Visual Information Division

The Films and Visual Information Division is organized in two sections, the Films and Television Section and the Visual Information Section. The Films and Television Section is responsible for the production of films and film strips either through its own resources or those of government film organizations or commercial film companies in the Member nations. Working with voluntary National Film Committees, it is responsible for arranging distribution in the Member countries for these films and film strips, and also for arranging for production of films in different regions. Another function of this Section is to arrange for newsreel and television coverage of United Nations activities and for the use of film material about the United Nations in the newsreels of the world.

The Visual Information Section designs posters, charts, photospreads and other graphic materials for distribution to educational systems, public organizations and other organized groups in the Member countries. This Section also designs loan exhibits as another means of disseminating information about the United Nations, its activities and the problems with which it deals. These materials are printed in the official languages with a view to reaching the widest possible audience.

Side by side with production at headquarters of such visual aids to understanding, local interest has been widely developed through an international poster competition. After consultation with all Member nations, voluntary organizations were set up for the current year in 31 countries to invite local artists to prepare for local competitions posters illustrating the aims of the United Nations. Winning entries were sent to headquarters for the selection of the United Nations poster of the year.

The Visual Information Section is also responsible for the taking of official United Nations photographs, for their distribution direct or through United Nations information centers to the press and publications of the world and for arranging coverage of the United Nations by press and magazine photographers.

To co-ordinate the film and visual information work of the United Nations and the specialized agencies a United Nations Film Board was established early in 1947 by administrative arrangement. This Board meets quarterly and serves as a clearing house for exchange of information and establishes production and distribution policies in regard to the film and other visual programs of the member organizations. The Board has established an executive office at Lake Success under the direction of the Director of the Films and Visual Information Division, with an Associate Director in Paris. The Films and Visual Information staffs of this office and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) are available to assist all of the members with their programs. The other member organizations which do not maintain regular film staffs assist through their Information Officers.

f. Headquarters Liaison Services

Personal contacts through organizations, lectures and discussion groups, through educational courses and community activities provide one of the most effective and economical ways of developing public interest. Such contacts assist in the exchange of ideas leading to better understanding. They can be developed on a wide geographical basis and use existing organizational channels.

International co-operation through the United Nations should not be represented to the public as confined to political matters. It is important to present a picture of integrated co-operation in the widest possible fields for "social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom". In this field specialized agencies as well as the United Nations have developed information services and have common interests.

Dividing responsibilities for these activities, Headquarters Liaison Services include sections for (a) Specialized Agencies, (b) Lecture Services and Educational Liaison and (c) Non-Governmental Organizations: in addition there is an Admissions Office concerned with arrangements for public attendance at meetings of the organs of the United Nations.

The Section for Specialized Agencies is concerned on the one hand with maintaining liaison with, and servicing the specialized agencies and on the other hand with co-operating with headquarters and through other channels on a wide geographical basis through the division of External Services. It helps the agencies in disseminating information on their behalf and and servicing other sections and divisions of the Department of Public Information. Obtaining news and information from the agencies, it sees that it is processed and distributed through press, radio and other channels at helps the Department of Public Information in the presentation of a balanced picture of United Nations co-operation as a whole. To advise on such co-ordinated activities there has been set up a Consultative Committee on Public Information of the United Nations and the Specialized Agencies: this committee, which meets once every three months, consists of appropriate officers of the United Nations Department of Public Information and the chief Information Officers of the specialized agencies.

The Section for Lecture Services and Educational Liaison includes three smaller units for (a) the development of services to lecturers, and the organization, on as wide a geographical basis as possible, of a system of non-official correspondent-lecturers; (b) a lecture bureau which accepts selected engagements for public speaking, finding official speakers from delegations and the Secretariat; and (c) educational liaison services, co-operating, in consultation with UNESCO, in developing courses of study on the United Nations, maintaining liaison with educational bodies and arranging for student visits to headquarters. The section as a whole is responsible for annual Speakers Training Courses at headquarters.

The Section for Non-Governmental Organizations and General Liaison is responsible for working with non-governmental organizations, both national and international, to promote understanding of the aims and achievements of the United Nations. At headquarters it arranges for the accreditation and servicing of information observers from such organizations and for the holding from time to time of conferences of representatives in order to improve information services. Special liaison officers concern themselves with servicing organizations on a regional basis—Europe, Eastern Areas, Latin America and North America. The officers responsible for servicing regional areas also divide among themselves responsibilities for maintaining liaison with, and servicing functional groups, e.g. women's organizations, religious and labor groups and industrial and service clubs.

g. External Services

"The development of informed world opinion and intelligent support depends as much on the establishment of a wide and well organized network of information distributing offices at appropriate world centres as on an adequate and efficient public information service at headquarters."¹ It is the responsibility of External Services to develop such centres and provide them with the necessary materials and facilities for their operation.

Ultimately, it is hoped, some kind of information centre will be developed in each Member country as well as in Non-Self-Governing Territories. As a start, centres have been established in Copenhagen, Geneva, London, Mexico City, New Delhi, Paris, Rio de Janeiro, Shanghai and Washington, and plans are well advanced to open centres in Cairo, Moscow, Prague and Warsaw.

Each of these centres is provided with background information and reference material on the aims and activities and achievements of the organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies. In advance of the holding of meetings either of the United Nations or of any of the specialized agencies, specially prepared information material is forwarded so that officers may personally explain events as they develop. Regular news communiques are sent to them by cable so that they may be kept up to date and in order that they may issue appropriate local releases to press, radio and other media. The centres are also supplied with appropriate dossiers of still photographs, copies of posters, information on films and radio programs, etc. The centres themselves, insofar as their facilities permit, maintain close contacts with national newspapers and local offices of news agencies, with broadcasting stations, film and still-photo distribution agencies, and with non-governmental organizations and educational institutions. In addition to putting out information about the United Nations and specialized agencies through these media, the centres themselves compile opinion surveys analyzing press, radio and other comment in their areas on matters of interest to the United Nations—these surveys being sent back to headquarters. Finally, where international conferences of interest to the United Nations are held in their vicinity the centres assist in every way in their power in arranging coverage and the transmission back to headquarters of information about developments so that these may be re-transmitted over a world network.

The responsibility at headquarters for servicing and guiding these centres falls to three sections: for Europe, Latin America and the Near, Middle and Far East.

h. Reference and Research Services

Reference and Research Services includes sections for (a) the headquarters reference centre, (b) research and (c) surveys of public opinion.

The Headquarters Reference and Information Centre is responsible for providing background information about the United Nations and its activities and about the specialized agencies and their activities, and for answering both written and oral questions on these subjects. For this purpose the Centre maintains full files of official documents of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies. The Section took over from the former United Nations Information Office in New York its library of information and has further developed it. As of June 1947, the Section contained approximately 5,500 books and pamphlets on the United Nations and on problems of interest to the United Nations. There were approximately 500 periodicals, information bulletins and serial releases issued by official, semi-official and private agencies and groups. There was an analytical card index of approximately 60,000 abstract cards to contents of periodicals and releases, stressing current world problems.

The Research Section prepares and edits information papers on the purposes and principles, structure and procedures, functions and powers, resolutions, reports and activities of the organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies; on the history and evolution of international organizations; and on international political, economic and social problems. It assists writers and publishers in writing articles and books dealing with the United Nations; it writes articles on the United Nations for encyclopedias, annuals, almanacs, etc. The Research Section has also produced various reference publications—for example, "Basic Facts about the United Nations"; a guide on the United Nations for the use of lecturers and teachers and "The United Nations Yearbook".

The Opinion Survey Section is responsible for the compilation of weekly surveys of opinions based mainly on studies of press and radio comment collected from various areas of the world. These surveys are concerned with public reactions to the activities of the United Nations and specialized agencies and have been issued regularly since June 9, 1946. The Section is also concerned with special surveys dealing with specific items under consideration of the United Nations such as International Trade, International Jurisdiction and the Headquarters Site Proposal.

through an appropriate section, liaison with the International Court of Justice with respect to the legal functions of the Court.

The Division renders assistance in the legal work in connection with the establishment of the interim headquarters and of the permanent site of the United Nations and in connection with the organization of the Secretariat and with other administrative projects.

d. Division for the Development and Codification of International Law

This Division makes studies and prepares recommendations for encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification in the implementation of Article 13 of the Charter; prepares background studies on international agreements, national law, doctrines and practices governing various fields of international relations; surveys the field of customary international law, promotes conferences and discussions to establish unifying principles of international law and to discuss the methods of the codification of such principles and maintains liaison with organizations concerned with codification and development of international law. The Division serves as secretariat for commissions and other bodies set up by the General Assembly for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification and assists both in the drafting of conventions on subjects which have not yet been regulated by international law and in the survey of the field of customary international law with a view to selecting topics for codification. The Division also compiles digests of state practice as well as collections of decisions of national and international courts dealing with international law questions.

e. Division of Immunities and Registration of Treaties

The Division of Immunities and Registration of Treaties deals with two separate problems, both of which are the subject of special provisions of the United Nations Charter. One concerns the privileges and immunities of the United Nations; the other concerns the registration, filing and recording and publication and international agreements.

As regards the first problem, the Division is entrusted with the task of initiating and working out the appropriate Conventions and Agreements in order to implement Articles 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations concerning the privileges and immunities of the United Nations. It supervises the implementation of such Conventions and Agreements and deals with all matters arising out of their execution, involving the organization itself, the representatives of the Member Governments and the officials of the United Nations, such as immunity of jurisdiction, inviolability, exemption from immigration restrictions, questions of passports and visas, taxation, communication facilities, etc. It has the task of co-ordinating and unifying the privileges and immunities of the specialized agencies, and it maintains liaison with the International Court of Justice insofar as the privileges and immunities of the International Court are concerned.

With regard to the second task, the Division is primarily responsible for the registration, filing, recording and publication of treaties and international agreements. In connection with these functions it has the duty of examining whether the treaty or international agreement should be registered, filed and recorded. It has to see to it that all required conditions have been fulfilled when a party or specialized agency is registering a treaty or international agreement. It has itself to register ex officio a certain number of treaties or agreements. There are further functions, such as establishing the date of registration, the issuance of a certificate of registration and the issuance of certified extracts from the Register.

The Division further checks up translations, prepares the edition and arranges for the publication of treaties and international agreements in the United Nations Treaty Series, publishes a monthly list of the treaties registered or filed and recorded and prepares and publishes a list of clauses of arbitration actually in force between States.

It performs, furthermore, the functions entrusted to the Secretary-General or the Secretariat by multilateral treaties and conventions, such as the receipt of additional signatures and of instruments of ratification, accession and denunciation, notification of such acts to other parties, noting the date of entry into force, the issuance of certified copies and the circulation of information or documents which the parties have undertaken to communicate to each other. As a result of the transfer to the United Nations of certain functions and activities of the League of Nations, the Division is charged with the above duties also in regard to the functions previously performed by the League of Nations, acting as custodian of the original texts of the various instruments.

With a view to improving and unifying the technical clauses, the Division assists in the drafting of multilateral conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations.

Within the limit of the jurisdiction of the Secretariat, the Division will be entrusted with assisting in all necessary work and research concerning the provisions of Article 103 of the Charter, which relates to incompatibilities which might exist between the Charter and other international agreements.

In addition, the Division is in charge of the Legal Department's library and acts on special assignments by the Assistant Secretary-General.

Three Agreements have been concluded concerning the immunities of the United Nations:

(1) the General Convention, which has so far been acceded to by the United Kingdom, the Dominican Republic, Liberia, Iran, Honduras, Panama, France, El Salvador, Guatemala, Greece and the Philippine Republic; some governments have advised the Secretariat that the Convention is to come up for ratification by their legislative bodies in the near future; (2) the Agreement with the United States regarding the headquarters of the United Nations, which after important negotiations, was signed on June 26, 1947; (3) the Agreement or Interim Arrangement on the privileges and immunities of the United Nations concluded with Switzerland, in whose territory the United Nations has its European office. This agreement came into force on July 1, 1946.

It was also found necessary to provide for the insertion in the general conventions dealing with technical subjects, such as the Telecommunications Convention or the Convention of the Universal Postal Union, of adequate texts, which would give the United Nations the status required in connection with the use of its telecommunications or the service of its correspondence. Drafts have accordingly been prepared and attendance has been assured at the conferences dealing with modifications to the abovementioned conventions.

In connection with the co-ordination and unification of the privileges and immunities of the specialized agencies, a conference of representatives of the specialized agencies and representatives of the United Nations was held at Lake Success on March 6 and 7, 1947. At this meeting a draft convention on the privileges and immunities of the specialized agencies was discussed and adopted as a working paper to be used as a basis for a formal agreement to be concluded at a later date. A further meeting of the representatives of the specialized agencies was to be held on July 23, 1947.

By a resolution of February 10, 1946, the General Assembly instructed the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly proposals for detailed regulations and other measures designed to give effect to the provisions of Article 102 of the Charter, relating to the registration of treaties and international agreements. Accordingly, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly, during the second part of its first session, draft regulations, and the General Assembly, by a resolution of December 14, 1946, adopted the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations. On the basis of these regulations, the Division has started the work of registration, filing and recording of treaties and international agreements. To date 60 of them have been registered and 37 filed and recorded. Moreover, a number of treaties and international agreements have been transmitted for registration, which do not fully meet the requirements and therefore could not be registered. In these cases the governments have been asked to transmit the additional information.

The Division has also proceeded to the task of the publication of treaties and international agreements, and the first volume of the United Nations Treaty Series is being prepared.

10. CONFERENCE AND GENERAL SERVICES

a. Functions and Organization

Conference and General Services makes arrangements for meetings of the General Assembly, the councils, commissions, committees and special conferences held under the auspices of the United Nations; provides general business management services for the United Nations; and provides the administrative channel for liaison between the headquarters and the Geneva offices and other temporary conference service offices established away from the headquarters.

These functions require that it co-operate with the departments concerned in scheduling conferences and meetings. It co-ordinates the service activities, and provides language, document, library and cartographic and presentation services for conferences and for the Secretariat. It edits and publishes the journals and the official records of conferences and meetings. It provides general services such as purchasing, stores and warehousing, commercial arrangements (printing and sales) for publications, transportation arrangements, hotel accommodation and building management. It also handles mail, cables, telephone and telegraph services, and registry and files.

Conference and General Services is divided into the following units:

Office of the Assistant Secretary-General
Bureau of Technical Services
Bureau of General Services

The nucleus of Conference and General Services arrived in New York during the latter part of February and the first week of March 1946. This original small group was concerned with establishing facilities for the meetings of the Security Council at Hunter College. In three weeks a temporary Secretariat had been recruited, the Council Chamber was built and limited restaurant, bar and recreation facilities were established. By March 25, 1946, the necessary facilities for a meeting of the Council had been provided.

The Assistant Secretary-General and his staff thereupon began the development of a permanent department. The present plan, which varies little from the original draft as prepared in London, provides for two bureaus—the Bureau of Technical Services and the Bureau of General Services. The two bureaus are subdivided into six services and five divisions. The functions of these units are described below.

b. Office of the Assistant Secretary-General

The Assistant Secretary-General, the Director and their staff formulate policy, plan and direct the arrangements for United Nations meetings. They direct the work of the divisions and the services mentioned above.

The Overseas Offices Division is concerned with the administration of the Geneva office in the field of budgeting, housing and staffing. It reviews all correspondence with Geneva and serves in general as the focal point for the relationship between headquarters and that office on administrative matters.

c. Bureau of Technical Services

The Bureau of Technical Services co-ordinates and directs the work of the Divisions and the Services of which it is composed. The Bureau is divided into the following units:

Languages Division
Documents and Sales Division
Editorial Division

Presentation Service
Simultaneous Interpretation Service

The Languages Division provides the services of translators and interpreters for all meetings of the United Nations; conducts linguistic research, provides instructors to codify terminological practice; and provides instructors to conduct language classes for members of the Secretariat.

The Languages Division consists of the following three sections:

Linguistic Research and Training Section

By October 1946 the staff of the Languages Division had been expanded so that it could handle 30 meetings per week.

The Documents and Sales Division is responsible for printing all of the publications of the United Nations. It establishes agencies in all of the Member States for the sale and distribution of publications; it produces and distributes documents for all organs of the United Nations.

The Purchase and Supply Division has four sections:

The Conference Division serves as the focal point for the planning of all meetings of the United Nations, and of conferences held under United Nations auspices. It co-ordinates the dates and places of meetings; makes plans for the administrative handling of meetings; and allocates conference service officers who take charge of such questions as accommodation and facilities.

The Conference Division is composed of two sections:

Conference Planning Section
Conference Management Section

The Maintenance and Engineering Service assigns space for various functions and units; operates repair shops for furniture and equipment; supervises the cleaning and janitorial services; provides guards and other security measures for the protection of the premises; supervises the installation of sound and recording equipment and telephone services; and controls the operation of concessions on the premises.

The Maintenance and Engineering Service comprises the following units:

Office Accommodations Section
Security Section
Sound and Recording Section

The Maintenance and Engineering Service was primarily responsible for moving the organization from Hunter College to Lake Success, during which operation it had to establish temporary quarters for the Security Council at the Henry Hudson Hotel in Manhattan.

The move to Lake Success involved the provision of space for 2,500 members of the Secretariat, and for all of the furniture and machinery needed. At the same time plans were being made with the City of New York for the construction of the General Assembly quarters at Flushing Meadow. These two projects, involving expenditures of more than $5,000,000, were undertaken simultaneously.

The Secretariat began occupying the Lake Success offices on August 16, 1946, and the bulk of the furniture and equipment was moved during that weekend. The facilities at Flushing Meadow were available by September 14. Office space was provided at Lake Success for all delegations to the General Assembly, and space was provided for the permanent delegations in downtown Manhattan. Cafeteria and dining room services were provided both at Lake Success and at Flushing Meadow.

The Transportation Service provides all types of transportation required by the United Nations; arranges hotel accommodations; provides for the handling of personal luggage and household effects for travelers; and maintains a fleet of cars and trucks for local transportation.

The Transportation Service is divided into the following units:

Passenger Service Section
Local Transport Section
Freight Section

In preparation for the General Assembly, transportation from overseas was arranged for about one thousand people. This, in addition to the bookings previously made, brought the total to be handled to more than two thousand. Hotel accommodation was arranged for approximately the same number of people. A pool of 300 cars was secured from the United States Army and Navy, and was operated in addition to the United Nations' own pool of 33 cars.

In order to assist commuting members of the Secretariat, the Transportation Service arranged for the provision of extra train services from Great Neck to New York, and also for the provision of special bus services to and from Jamaica.

The Communications and Records Service supervises incoming and outgoing mail as well as cable and wireless services of the United Nations, and maintains the Archives and Central Registry.

The Communications and Records Service comprises four sections:

Central Registry Section
Cable and Wireless Section
Mail and Messenger Section
Archives Section

Telephone, cable, wireless and mail services at five different locations had to be operated on a 24-hour basis for the duration of the second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

- i) methods and procedures concerned with disbursement of funds;
- ii) inspection of Treasury and General Accounts Division and review of financial reports and statements;
- (c) to perform audits of the financial accounts and practices of offices away from headquarters.

e. Bureau of Personnel

The Bureau of Personnel plans, develops and recommends to the Assistant Secretary-General for Administrative and Financial Services policies and procedures with respect to all personnel questions. These cover such major matters as selection of applicants and appointments to the Secretariat, development of sources of recruitment, interviewing, and maintenance of registers of qualified applicants; liaison with other international organizations and national civil service agencies on personnel matters, evaluation of staff members for promotion and transfer in accordance with established policies; development of examination techniques for use in international recruiting; processing of all personnel actions, including those affecting pay status and claims for approved allowances; provision of information and assistance to staff members with respect to housing; the administration of an emergency health service and a health insurance plan; the development and execution of specialized training programs; and the arrangement of suitable recreational, cultural and social activities.

(1) Office of the Director

This Office directs and co-ordinates the work of all sections and services of the Bureau. It develops and maintains a Manual of Personnel Procedures for the guidance of operating officers and staff members and reviews all instructions relating to personnel matters. It is responsible for maintaining relations with specialized agencies and for keeping them informed on current United Nations personnel policy.

(2) Appointments and Staff Relations Division

This Division deals with the selection of appointments to the Secretariat, and with all questions affecting the relations of staff members to the organization. It deals with the organization of recruitment in different part of the world through the operation of field recruitment offices or through representatives and handles relations with Member Governments with regard to recruitment.

C. UNITED NATIONS STAFF

The staff members of the United Nations Secretariat are international civil servants and as such may not seek or receive instructions from any government or other authority external to the United Nations. Each Member nation undertakes to respect the international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and his staff and, therefore, to refrain from influencing them in the discharge of these responsibilities.

The staff members of the secretariats of the inter-governmental specialized agencies—such as the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Monetary Fund—are also international civil servants. From the beginning it has been recognized that it is necessary that, so far as possible, the United Nations Secretariat and the specialized agencies brought into relationship with the United Nations should develop common personnel standards and terms and conditions of employment.

The General Assembly on February 13, 1946, adopted the following resolution:

An International Civil Service Commission shall be established by the Secretary-General after consultation with the heads of the specialized agencies brought into relationship with the United Nations, to advise on the methods of recruitment for the Secretariat and on the means by which common standards of recruitment in the Secretariat and the specialized agencies may be ensured.

The representatives of the Secretariat and of the specialized agencies met several times to discuss, among other topics, the possibility of establishing an International Civil Service Commission. At the invitation of the Secretary-General, a Working Party on the formation of an International Civil Service Commission was convened for April 21-22, 1947. Made up of representatives of the various international organizations, as well as outside experts, this Working Party considered the character, functions and terms of reference of an advisory body which would contribute to the improvement of recruitment and related phases of personnel administration in all of the international organizations. The Working Party submitted a report to the Secretary-General recommending the early establishment of an International Personnel Advisory Board.

1. RECRUITMENT AND SELECTION

The General Assembly in a resolution of February 13, 1946, stated that appropriate methods of recruitment should be established in order that a staff might be assembled which was characterized by the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity, due regard being also paid to its recruitment on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

From the outset the recruitment policy of the Secretariat was guided by these two basic principles. They can of course be fully realized only on a long-term basis, since careful competitive recruitment in many specialized fields, as well as in the general administrative fields, and on a wide geographical basis, needs long-term planning and the development of recruitment machinery. The over-riding necessity in the early days of the Secretariat was to provide staff adequate to begin operating without delay, enabling the Secretariat to service the Councils and commissions. Despite the urgency of the initial recruitment, however, every effort was made, with the co-operation of the Member nations, to recruit on a wide geographical basis. Since it was impossible, within the time allowed for assembling the initial staff, to live up fully to the resolution of the General Assembly, the majority of the early staff was employed on temporary contract or was loaned to the United Nations for short periods by the Member Governments.

a. Field Recruitment

Organized recruitment on a world-wide basis was begun by enlisting the help of Member Governments in making known the staff requirements of the United Nations. Also, in the summer of 1946 a field recruitment program was begun, which has been continually broadened in scope and will be further expanded until all Member nations are covered. Recruiting offices have been established in a number of Member States. In each instance recruiting operations headed by a national of the country in which the office is located, are undertaken for a period of at least three months. This operation is designed to meet the initial demands as recruiting activities are announced in each of the areas. Upon completion of the major recruitment program, the recruitment office is discontinued but a recruiting officer continues as a United Nations Recruiting Rep-representative and is available to interview and test candidates whenever necessary, as well as to provide a limited measure of direct recruiting. Voluntary committees, composed of both governmental and non-governmental representatives, serve each Recruiting Officer or Representative in an advisory capacity.

b. Recruitment Responsibilities of Headquarters Bureau of Personnel

The Headquarters Bureau of Personnel is responsible for the over-all direction and coordination of the recruitment program. It collaborates with the officials of the various departments in determining the qualifications required for incumbents of the various posts and recruits suitable candidates. It evaluates the qualifications of the candidates and assists the departments in the selection of personnel.

c. Lower Grade Personnel

In view of the difficulties of housing and transportation and the uncertainty of the cost of living in the New York area, staff in the lower paid grades have been recruited largely from the local area.

d. Selection of Staff

The Bureau of Personnel has had as one of its major objectives the steady improvement of its examining methods. Written tests have been established for the competitive examination of candidates for typing and stenographic, linguistic and certain other posts. In other instances interviewing boards, composed of highly qualified individuals, are assisting in the evaluation of candidates.

2. APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS

In May 1946 the Secretary-General appointed a Personnel Selection Committee, consisting of top-ranking officials on his staff, to consider and review the qualifications of persons recommended for indeterminate (permanent) appointment in the Secretariat. During the latter half of 1946 and in 1947, the Secretariat has made steady progress towards creating a permanent staff. With due regard to geographic distribution, unusually well-qualified temporary staff members are considered for indeterminate appointment. By June 30, 1947, approximately 39% of the staff at Grade 5 and above had been recommended for indeterminate appointment.

As the permanent staff develops, a sound system of promotion of staff becomes increasingly important. In accordance with the principles set forth by the General Assembly, the Secretariat has adopted a promotion policy with the objects of:

- (1) ensuring that United Nations posts are filled by the best qualified persons available; and
- (2) ensuring equal opportunity for promotion of staff members throughout all departments of the organization.

A board of senior representatives of the Secretariat reviews candidates for promotion to all posts. Vacancies below those of Director are posted and staff members are given opportunity to apply.

3. TRAINING AND STAFF ACTIVITIES

The training program is designed to enable staff members to perform their duties efficiently and devotedly. It is not only the qualifications in knowledge and skill which determine the efficiency of the staff. There is also the question of developing their interest in the work, their understanding of its meaning and context and their adaptation to the physical and psychological conditions of work and of living.

A number of special circumstances are involved:

- (a) language difficulties;
- (b) displacement from homes and familiar surroundings;
- (c) the novelty, complexity and importance of United Nations work.

With all these factors in mind, a wider interpretation than usual must be given to the word "training".

During the latter part of 1946 and in the beginning of 1947 progress was made in the development of the training program. A Guide-Book for staff members of the Secretariat was issued, language courses for 900 students were arranged and a variety of cultural sports or other leisure-time activities were initiated.

Planned projects fall into three main categories:

- (a) Staff Guidance. A program is being developed to introduce new staff members to their work and to assist them with their orientation and training needs.
- (b) Staff Training. The main fields of training are:
 - (i) languages;
 - (ii) clerical and technical;
 - (iii) supervisory;
 - (iv) on the post;

(v) junior professional training by appointment of young men and women internes to posts in which they will receive training.

(c) Staff Welfare. Opportunities for leisure-time activities to facilitate adjustment to new environments and to maintain physical fitness are necessary with staff recruited from all over the world, many of them separated from their families. Activities include:

- (i) educational and social activities (debating and study circles, excursions, staff-library, film showings, etc.)
- (ii) personal counselling on outside welfare (transmittal of hospitality, vocation planning, helping wives and families, educational counselling);
- (iii) physical and recreational activities (keep-fit classes, making available sports and recreational facilities near the headquarters area);
- (iv) formation of a Staff Recreation Association and close co-operation with its clubs and sections.

4. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS

The Provisional Staff Regulations¹ embodying the fundamental rights and obligations of the staff, as adopted by the General Assembly, provide, among other things, the following measures:

(a) By accepting appointment with the United Nations, the members of the staff, because of their international responsibilities, pledge themselves to discharge their functions and to regulate their conduct with the interests of the United Nations only in view. In the performance of their duties they shall not seek nor receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the United Nations. All members of the staff are subject to the authority of the Secretary-General, and are responsible to him in the exercise of their functions.

(b) Upon accepting their appointment, all members of the staff shall subscribe to the following oath or declaration:

I solemnly swear (undertake, affirm, promise) to exercise in all loyalty, discretion and conscience the functions entrusted to me as a member of the international service of the United Nations, to discharge those functions and regulate my conduct with the interests of the United Nations only in view, and not to seek or accept instructions in regard to the performance of my duties from any government or other authority external to the Organization.

(c) The privileges and immunities attached to the United Nations by virtue of Article 105 of the Charter furnish no excuse to the staff members who enjoy them for non-performance of their private obligations or failure to observe laws and police regulations.

(d) Members of the staff are not permitted to communicate to any person any unpublished information known to them by reason of their official position except in the course of their duties or by authorization of the Secretary-General.

(e) Members of the staff shall avoid any action, and in particular any kind of public pronouncement or activity which may adversely reflect on their position as international civil servants.

(f) No member of the staff shall accept, hold, or engage in any office or occupation which in the opinion of the Secretary-General is incompatible with the proper discharge of his duties with the United Nations.

(g) Any member of the staff who becomes a candidate for a public office of a political character shall resign from the Secretariat.

(h) No member of the staff shall accept any honor, decoration, favor, gift or fee from any government or from any other source external to the organization during the period of his appointment, except for war services.

The General Assembly during the first part of its first session transmitted the draft Provisional Staff Rules, drawn up by the Preparatory Commission, to the Secretary-General for his consideration. Provisional Staff Rules were issued by the Secretary-General. The text as amended follows:

SECTION I. APPOINTMENT

Rule 1. Application

A record shall be kept of the current applications for employment in the Secretariat which appear to merit consideration. Definite time periods shall be established for each main category of posts, after which applications shall be considered to be invalid. The valid applications of persons who appear to possess suitable qualifications shall be examined whenever it is proposed to make a new permanent appointment.

¹For full text of the Provisional Staff Regulations, see pp. 86-88.

Rule 2. Letter of Appointment

Upon appointment every member of the staff shall receive a letter of appointment signed by, or on behalf of, the Secretary-General. This letter shall cover the following conditions: the classification category, if any; the initial salary rate and other basis of remuneration; the tenure of appointment; the period of probation, if any; and any special conditions which may be applicable to the appointment. The letter shall state that the appointment is subject to the Staff Regulations and Staff Rules of the United Nations, a copy of which shall be attached, and to all supplements and amendments which may be made thereto. The appointee in accepting appointment shall sign and return to the Secretary-General a letter of acceptance which states that he agrees to the conditions set forth in the letter of appointment and subscribes to the oath of office in Regulation 2 of the Staff Regulations. The letter of appointment and the letter of acceptance shall constitute the contract of employment.

Rule 3. Assignment to Duties

Members of the staff shall be assigned their duties by the Secretary-General or by his authorized representatives. Subject to the terms of his appointment a staff member may be required to work in any department or activity of the Secretariat, but in making assignments the qualifications of each individual shall receive consideration.

Rule 4. Medical Examination

Staff members, prior to their appointment, shall be required as a rule to undergo an examination by a qualified member of the medical profession. No appointment shall be confirmed until the medical staff of the Organization has issued a certificate that the employee is free from any defect or disease that would interfere with the proper discharge of his duties.

SECTION II. PROBATION

Rule 5. Probationary Period

A probationary period of twelve months will be required for all staff members receiving indeterminate appointments. Staff members serving with the Preparatory Commission or with the United Nations during the period of the General Assembly in London or later prior to the conclusion of an indeterminate appointment will be granted full credit for such service in computing the time required for completion of the probationary period, provided that at least three months will be required after the effective date of an indeterminate appointment.

Rule 6. Reports

At least one month before the end of a probationary period, the superior officer of the appointee shall submit a report evaluating his performance and official conduct and making a specific recommendation as to whether the appointment should be confirmed.

SECTION III. HOURS OF WORK

Rule 7. Work Week

The normal work week for the staff of the Secretariat shall be forty hours exclusive of meal times.

Rule 8. Sundays and Holidays

Except in cases of necessity, attendance at the office of the Organization shall not be required on Sunday or on such public holidays as the Secretary-General may decide.

SECTION IV. ANNUAL, SPECIAL AND HOME LEAVE

Rule 9. Accrual of Annual Leave

(a) Annual leave accrues to all staff members (including those in the hourly rate category, but excluding those paid only "when actually employed") at the cumulative rate of two and one-half working days for each calendar month or fraction thereof during which the staff member has been in pay status with the United Nations, including the Preparatory Commission and the Executive Committee in London.

(b) Unused annual leave may be accumulated to the credit of a staff member up to a maximum of one hundred working days.

(c) Annual leave does not accrue to an individual while he is on loan to the United Nations and who continues to receive from his regular employer his leave or compensation therefor, or on leave without pay from United Nations or during suspension from duty for a period regarded as sufficiently long to warrant adjustment of individual leave credits.

Rule 10. Granting and Taking of Annual Leave

(a) As a general practice, members of the staff should take at least half of their annual leave in the course of the year in respect of which the leave is due.

(b) Ordinarily annual leave will be taken only after it has accrued. It may be granted in limited amounts in advance of having accrued to staff members who need it and who are likely to remain with the United Nations for a future period beyond that necessary to accrue the leave advanced. The maximum amount of annual leave which may be advanced is ten working days.

(c) Annual leave covers periods of absence with pay (other than sick leave, etc.) on days when the staff member would otherwise be scheduled to work. Annual leave may be taken by staff members on annual salary in units of days and half days. Annual leave taken by staff members in the hourly rate category will be taken in hourly units.

Rule 11. Termination Payments for Unused Annual Leave or Excess Leave Taken

(a) On leaving the service of the United Nations, a member of the staff who has not exhausted the annual leave to which he is entitled shall be paid an equivalent sum of money in lieu thereof.

(b) On leaving the service, a member who has taken advance annual leave beyond that subsequently accrued shall make restitution for such leave, either by accepting a deduction from any amount owed him by the United Nations or by cash refund. Under exceptional circumstances, "special leave" under Rule 12 may be authorized in lieu of restitution.

Rule 12. Granting of Special Leave

Special leave with pay may be granted for advanced study or research in the interest of the United Nations, or for other exceptional urgent reasons. Such leave is subject to prior approval by the Bureau of Personnel upon recommendation of the appropriate Assistant Secretary-General.

Rule 13. Home Leave

A. Definition of "Home"

For Purposes of Home Leave

1. A staff member's "home" will be considered to be his normal place of residence before taking up duty with the United Nations, or before leaving his normal residence in consequence of emergency conditions growing out of war or political upheaval. Ordinarily a staff member's normal place of residence will be considered to be in the country of his nationality.

2. This location will be decided at the time of appointment except that for those staff members who were appointed before this rule came into force, it will be decided prior to their first home leave.

3. Where the staff member presents convincing evidence that the location of his home has changed after joining the United Nations, the United Nations will pay that part of the cost of transportation and grant that part of the travel time that does not exceed the cost and time of travel to and from the place first recognized as his home. Altered circumstances which are of a temporary character only will not be considered a change of "home".

4. A staff member, who has initially established that his home is in the country of his nationality and subsequently becomes a citizen of the country in which his duty station is located, will no longer be granted home leave to the country of his former nationality.

5. The place recognized as a staff member's home will be determined by the Bureau of Personnel after consultation with the staff member and the Department concerned.

B. Definition of "Home Leave"

1. Home leave for a staff member on full-time duty outside his home country shall consist of two working weeks every two years, at full pay, plus actual travelling time by an approved route and type of transport to and from the place recognized as the staff member's home.

2. Home leave for a staff member whose regular duty station is in the country in which he has his home shall consist of actual travelling time only at full pay by an approved route and type of transport to and from the place recognized as a staff member's home. Such leave will be granted every two years.

3. During the calendar years 1947 and 1948, in order to assure a more even distribution of home leave among a staff necessarily recruited en masse, a limited number of staff members who apply will be given special home leave ahead of the regular schedule on special terms set forth in (D) below. In each such case, the staff member in question will not again be eligible for home leave until an additional two years have elapsed from the date of departure for the special home leave.

4. Accrued annual leave may be added to home leave or special home leave to the extent which the exigencies of the service and equity among staff members permit.

5. Every effort will be made to grant home leave at the time a staff member becomes eligible (i.e., after twenty-four months' service). However, staff members who, due to the exigencies of the service, cannot take home leave at the expiration of twenty-four months' service may apply service in excess of twenty-four months toward a next home leave.

6. The scheduling of home leave and special home leave, in accordance with these regulations and with due regard to the exigencies of the service, is the responsibility of the official of the Department concerned.

C. "Service" for the Purpose of the Two-Year Service Requirement

1. Full-time service as a staff member of the United Nations Secretariat, including full-time service with the Executive Committee and the Preparatory Commission, shall be counted toward home leave, regardless of the type of appointment held. Transfer of duty station to the home country will cancel any right to the two working weeks of home leave. Assignment to temporary duty in the home country other than transfer of duty station will not affect accrual of home leave under B (1) above.

2. A staff member who enters on duty in his home country and subsequently transfers to duty elsewhere shall accrue service toward home leave effective from the date of departure from his home country.

3. Breaks in service (such as termination and re-engagement, suspension from duty or leave without pay) of not more than thirty calendar days will not affect continuity of service.

4. When a break in service exceeds thirty calendar days, the effective date for computing service for home leave shall be the date of latest return to duty or departure from home country.

5. However, in cases of special leave without pay in excess of thirty days (such as that granted to furnish temporary assistance to a specialized agency) the Bureau of Personnel, after consultation with the Department concerned, may determine the appropriate service credit toward home leave.

D. Special Home Leave

1. During the calendar years 1947 and 1948, consideration will be given to applications for special home leave under the terms of B (1) above after twelve months but before twenty-four months have been served where exceptional hardship to the staff member or benefit to the organization is involved, provided that the staff member holds an appointment which extends beyond the date on which 24 months of service would be accrued or where the appropriate Assistant Secretary-General certifies that the staff member's services are expected to be retained beyond that date. Approval of the Assistant Secretary-General and the Bureau of Personnel is required.

2. During the calendar years 1947 and 1948, in the case of a staff member whose situation does not fall within paragraph (1), consideration will be given, when a minimum of 12 months' completed service toward special home leave has been completed by the date of departure, to payment of one half the round trip fare, the grant of one half of the round trip travel time, and for staff members eligible for time beyond travel time, the grant of one working week's home leave. Approval of the Assistant Secretary-General and the Bureau of Personnel is required. The staff member is not entitled at a later date to claim reimbursement on the basis of service subsequently accrued, for the remaining half of the travel expenses or travel time or to claim credit for the five-day balance of the home leave.

E. General Provisions

1. At least half of the total combined home and annual leave taken under B (1) above must be spent in the staff member's home country.

2. Two or more periods of home leave may not be combined.

3. If a staff member has not taken accrued home leave, he will not receive payment for or be credited with additional annual leave in lieu of home leave.

4. Travel expenses and allowances during travel under B (1) and B (2) above will be paid. Regulations covering maximum travel accommodations allowable, home leave travel expenses and allowances of staff members and their wives and dependent children are set forth in SGB/7 and Addenda.

5. Payment of home leave transportation expenses of wives and/or dependent children will be made only when the staff member is eligible under SGB/7 for the initial transportation of such dependents to his duty station.

6. Staff members whose wives and/or dependent children reside in a location other than that of the staff member's duty station, may claim travel expenses and travel allowances only to the amount payable if the eligible dependents resided with him at the location of his duty station and then only if the cost is actually incurred.

7. Delays in return from home leave, such as delays caused by illness or inability to obtain accommodations, will be charged as sick leave, annual leave, or leave without pay as appropriate.

8. (a) Home leave may be taken in conjunction with official travel to the staff member's home country or official travel to a nearby country provided that the travel time and cost do not exceed the time and cost involved in returning the staff member to his regular duty station and then transporting him home. In these instances, the two-year service requirement may be relaxed at the discretion of the Bureau of Personnel after consultation with the Assistant Secretary-General of the Department concerned or his authorized representative to permit the grant of the two working weeks' home leave even though the entire 24 months' service toward eligibility has not been accrued.

(b) In cases where a home leave taken in conjunction with official travel is advanced, the waiting period before the next home leave must be increased to the extent that this home leave was advanced.

Rule 13 (A) Conditions of Leave

(a) Annual, special, and home leave shall be subject to the exigencies of the service, due consideration being given to the personal circumstances and preferences of the member of the staff.

(b) Such leave should always have appropriate supervisory approval before it is taken. Approval of any substantial period of leave should be obtained at least two weeks before the starting date.

SECTION V. SICK LEAVE AND MATERNITY LEAVE

Rule 13 (B) Definition of Sick Leave

Sick leave is leave of absence with full pay which a staff member may take when incapacitated from the performance of his duties by illness or injury.

Rule 14. Accrual and Advancing of Sick Leave

(a) Members of the staff are entitled to accumulate sick leave at the rate of one and one-half working days per calendar month on full pay. The maximum amount of sick leave which may be accumulated is ninety working days.

(b) A staff member may, if necessary, be advanced sick leave, the amount of which will not ordinarily exceed thirty working days. In special cases of extended illness, additional sick leave may be advanced by the Bureau of Personnel.

(c) In the case of staff members on an annual salary, sick leave may be taken in units of days and half days. Sick leave taken by staff members in the hourly rate category will be taken to the nearest hour.

Rule 15. Additional Sick Leave on Half Pay

After exhausting accumulated sick and annual leave, permanent staff members with more than three years' service may be granted additional sick leave on half pay up to a maximum of six calendar months.

Rule 16. Medical Certificate

A member of the staff, who is entitled to sick leave and who is absent on account of illness or accident for more than three consecutive working days, shall file a certificate from a duly qualified medical practitioner indicating the nature and probable duration of the illness and stating that the staff member is unable to perform his duties. In cases of continued illness, a further certificate shall be filed at the end of each ten working days.

Rule 17. Limit of Non-Certificated Leave

After a staff member has taken periods of non-certificated sick leave totalling more than twelve working days within twelve consecutive calendar months, any additional sick leave of whatever duration shall either be supported by a medical certificate or deducted from annual leave.

Rule 18. Provisions Relating to Termination

(a) In the event of protracted sickness, the appointment of a staff member may be terminated on grounds of ill health.

(b) Upon termination of service, a staff member is required to make restitution by deduction from any amounts owed him by United Nations or by cash refund for any sick leave taken beyond that accrued, except insofar as advanced leave may have been granted under Rule 15.

(c) Upon termination of the appointment of a staff member, he has no further claims to sick leave.

Rule 19. Maternity Leave

(a) Staff members with temporary appointments who have served two years or who will have served two years at the time of confinement, and staff members with indeterminate (permanent) appointments which have been confirmed after the probationary period has been served, will be given six weeks of pre-natal and six weeks of post-natal maternity leave on full pay in addition to any accrued annual or sick leave that the staff member requires.

(b) Staff members with temporary appointments or unconfirmed indeterminate appointments, who have served less than two years at the time of confinement, will be given their accrued annual and sick leave. Requests for leave without pay where accrued leave is insufficient to cover the absence may be made under Rule 20 subject to (e) below.

(c) Requests for maternity leave and for return to duty afterward must be supported by medical certificates. Return to duty must be approved by the United Nations resident physician.

(d) A post-natal absence from duty for a minimum of six weeks is obligatory. Staff members who anticipate being confined within six weeks must produce a medical certificate stating that they are fit for duty.

(e) Requests for maternity leave, leave without pay or advance of sick or annual leave in maternity cases must be submitted via the Department Executive Officer for approval of the Bureau of Personnel.

(f) The facilities of the Health Clinic are available for expectant mothers or mothers who have returned to duty after confinement.

(g) Every possible facility for change of work for an expectant mother will be given if the work performed is prejudicial to her health.

SECTION V (A). LEAVE WITHOUT PAY

Rule 20. Leave Without Pay

Leave without pay may be granted to a staff member to the extent of thirty consecutive calendar days by the appropriate executive officer, and additional amounts, upon prior approval by the Bureau of Personnel.

SECTION VI. RESIGNATION AND TERMINATION OF APPOINTMENT

Rule 21. Notice of Resignation

Any member of the staff having an indeterminate appointment may resign his post on giving three months' notice in writing. The Secretary-General may, at his discretion, accept resignations on shorter notice.

Any member of the staff having a temporary or short-term appointment may resign his post on giving thirty days' notice in writing. Shorter notice may be accepted if mutually agreed upon.

Rule 22. Service Certificate

Any member of the staff who so requests, shall, on leaving the service of the United Nations, be given a certificate relating to the nature of his duties and the length of his service. On the written request of the staff member concerned, the certificate shall also refer to the quality of his work and his official conduct.

Rule 23. Tenure of Appointment

Subject to the provisions of the Staff Regulations and his contract, the tenure of appointment of every staff member shall be conditional upon good conduct and the efficient performance of his duties.

SECTION VII. DISCIPLINARY MEASURES

Rule 24. Types of Disciplinary Measures

Disciplinary measures may be imposed upon any staff member in the event of misconduct or unsatisfactory work. In order of severity, disciplinary measures shall include oral warning, written censure, transfer to an inferior post, reduction of salary, suspension with or without pay, discharge or summary dismissal. If a charge of serious misconduct is made against a member of the staff and the Secretary-General considers that the charge is prima facie well founded and that the staff member's continuance in office pending an investigation of the charge would prejudice the service, the staff member may be suspended from his functions pending investigation, the suspension being without prejudice to the rights of the staff member.

Rule 25. Discharge

Only the Secretary-General or his authorized deputy may order the discharge of a member of the staff, who shall be given a prior opportunity to state his case in writing.

SECTION VIII. TRAVELING EXPENSES AND ALLOWANCES

Rule 26. Eligibility for Travelling Expenses and Allowances

A member of the staff shall receive travel expenses and allowances in respect to himself, his wife and dependent children in accordance with the provisional travel and subsistence rules. He will also be reimbursed for the cost of moving household goods and other personal effects in accordance with the provisional rules for the reimbursement of removal expenses. On leaving the service of the Secretariat a member of the staff will be entitled to travel and removal expenses in respect to himself, his wife and dependent children under the provisional travel and subsistence rules and the provisional rules for the reimbursement of removal expenses.

SECTION IX. PROVIDENT FUND

Rule 27. Contributions and Benefits¹

As from the date of his appointment, every staff member shall contribute to the Staff Provident Fund and shall receive benefits in accordance with the provisional Staff Provident Fund Rules provided that this rule shall not apply to (1) compensation of staff members employed on the basis of gross contracts, or (2) additional compensation paid to staff members because they performed overtime work or because they work at night.

SECTION X. GENERAL

Rule 28. Payments to Beneficiaries of Deceased Staff Members

In the event of the death of a staff member, all amounts standing to his credit will be paid to his nominated beneficiary, subject to set-off of any amount or amounts owing by the deceased to the United Nations.

Rule 29. Effective Date

These rules shall be effective as of 16 February 1946.

5. CLASSIFICATION, SALARIES AND WAGES

By resolution of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General receives a salary of $20,000, together with representation allowances of $20,000 per annum. In addition, he is provided with a furnished residence, the repairs and maintenance of which, excluding provision of household staff, are borne by the organization.

The General Assembly resolved that Assistant Secretaries-General should receive a net salary of $13,500 and, in addition, an allowance varying from $7,000 to $11,500 at the Secretary-General's discretion. The Secretary-General has currently fixed the allowance for each Assistant Secretary-General at $8,500.

The General Assembly resolved also that a Top-Ranking Director should receive a net salary of $11,000, together with an allowance varying from $3,000 to $6,000 at the Secretary-General's discretion. An allowance of $3,000 was authorized for all Top-Ranking Directors.

These allowances were deemed by the General Assembly to include "all representation (including hospitality), housing, education and children's allowances for these posts, but not such reimbursable allowances as travel, subsistence, and removal costs upon appointment, transfer, or termination of appointment with the Organization; official travel and home leave travel."

The Assembly defined the phrase "Top-Ranking Director" as being "intended to cover only the senior grade in the classified service and, more specifically, would apply to persons serving as Deputy to an Assistant Secretary-General or a Director of a major 'staff service'." The Assembly's intention in this regard has been observed and appointments to these posts have been restricted to the Deputies in each of the departments and to the Directors of the two major staff services, i.e., the Bureau of Administrative Management and Budget and the Bureau of Personnel.

A certain number of other Directors with especially responsible assignments were provided with allowances of $2,500, in addition to their salary of $10,000. Such allowances were deemed to cover the same items as were covered by the allowances to Top-Ranking Directors. They were granted by the Secretary-General, under his general authority, to meet an emergency situation.

As recommended by the General Assembly, a provisional classification and salary administration plan of all other posts in the Secretariat, based upon the duties, responsibilities and authority of each post, was drawn up on the basis of recommendations made by the Advisory ¹In process of revision due to adoption of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Scheme Provisional Regulations.

Group of Experts. Posts were grouped by main categories and, within categories, by grades, with appropriate salaries assigned to each main category and grade. The practice of numbering grades within categories of work was later discontinued. Each grade of work is now identified by the same grade number regardless of the category of work involved.

The provisional plan was intended to serve only until a permanent plan could be perfected. The provisional plan was designed to provide compensation commensurate with duties and responsibilities assigned to the various posts throughout the Secretariat. Equivalent posts would receive equivalent pay which would be adequate in comparison to the general trend prevailing in the locality. Consideration had been given to the wide range of remuneration for comparable work prevailing in the Member Governments. The following table identifies the various numbered grades of the United Nations Headquarters salary schedule:

A staff member can progress from the first to the final step of his grade upon completion of a specific length of service at each step, and upon certification by his superior that the staff member's services have been satisfactory during the required period.

The United Nations work week consists of five eight-hour days. Work in excess of these limits is compensated for by equal time off where practicable, except that in the case of hourly rate workers all compensation for overtime is paid in cash. Staff members in Grade 8 and below may also be compensated in cash if time off is not feasible.

In view of the increased costs of living a temporary cost of living adjustment for staff members in the New York and Washington, D.C. areas was placed in effect. All hourly rate staff members and all salaried staff members who are not in receipt of daily living allowances or representation allowances and whose salaries are not in excess of $6700 per year are eligible for this cost of living adjustment.

6. ALLOWANCES

As a temporary policy, a scheme of daily allowances was established in connection with the installation of members of the Secretariat at the interim site of the organization. These allowances were designed to reimburse staff members for the additional expenses resulting from housing shortage and the necessity of living in hotels, and further to compensate those who were under temporary or loan appointments and who, therefore, continued to maintain homes or households elsewhere than in New York.

The early policy of allowances underwent a series of modifications and was replaced on June 16, 1947, by a system designed:

- (a) to compensate the staff member for the initial extraordinary living costs incurred during the period immediately following his entry on duty, attributable to removal from his former place of residence to the Headquarters area; and
- (b) to compensate for the additional expenses incurred as a result of housing difficulties.

This system provides:

- (a) a lump sum installation grant, restricted to staff members appointed for one year or more;
- (b) a daily living allowance for a period of 60 days after the staff member's arrival at headquarters;
- (c) a temporary rental allowance; and
- (d) a temporary expatriation allowance to compensate staff members whose normal place of residence before joining the United Nations was outside the country in which their official duty station is located.

Staff members receiving a "representation" allowance are not eligible for the temporary rental allowance or for the expatriation allowance, and receive a travel per diem allowance for thirty days from the date of arrival at headquarters in lieu of (b) above.

Effective January 1, 1947, every full-time member of the staff, with the exception of those specially excluded by resolution of the General Assembly and those recruited for a period not expected to exceed 90 days, receives a children's allowance for each child under the age of sixteen years, or, if the child is in full-time attendance at a school or university, under the age of eighteen or 22 years respectively. In addition, an education grant is paid for each child of a staff member who is employed in a country other than his own country and is entitled to the children's allowance, provided that the child is in full-time attendance at a school or university in his home country.

7. TAX EQUALIZATION

a. Resolutions of the General Assembly

The problem of tax equalization arose during the first part of the first session of the General Assembly. Having regard particularly to the administrative and budgetary arrangements of the United Nations, the General Assembly on February 13, 1946, concurred in the conclusion reached by the Fifth Committee that "there is no alternative to the proposition that exemption from national taxation for salaries and allowances paid by the Organization is indispensable to the achievement of equity among its Members and equality among its personnel."

It therefore resolved that:

Pending the necessary action being taken by Members to exempt from national taxation salaries and allowances paid out of the budget of the Organization, the Secretary-General is authorized to reimburse staff members who are required to pay taxation on salaries and wages received from the Organization.

In the case of any Member whose nationals in the service of the Organization are required to pay taxation on salaries and allowances received from the Organization, the Secretary-General should explore with the Member concerned methods of ensuring as soon as possible the application of the principle of equity amongst all Members.

The records and documents of the Administrative and Budgetary Committee and of the Advisory Group of Experts respecting staff contributions plans be referred to the Secretary-General for his information, and the Secretary-General be requested to submit recommendations thereon to the second part of the first session of the General Assembly.

The Secretary-General duly submitted a report to the second part of the first session of the General Assembly on the subject of tax equalization, reviewing Secretariat action with respect to tax reimbursement, summarizing the status of tax exemption by Member States and discussing the question of a staff contributions plan. On December 7, the General Assembly considered the Fifth Committee's report on these matters and unanimously adopted the following resolution:

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY RESOLVES THAT:

1. In order to achieve full application of the principle of equity among Members and equality among personnel of the United Nations, Members which have not yet completely exempted from taxation salaries and allowances paid out of the budget of the Organization are requested to take early action on the matter.

2. The question of a staff contributions plan in lieu of national taxation is referred to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, which may request the Secretary-General to submit new proposals to the next regular session of the General Assembly.

b. Income Tax Reimbursement

Practically all staff members, with the exception of locally recruited hourly-rate personnel (who are not covered by Article V, Section 18 (b) of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, and who since January 1, 1947, have been paid at gross rates of pay without the right to tax reimbursement) have been employed under terms of appointment which specify a "basic" salary and provide, "Any taxation levied on your salary by your national government will be refunded to you by the United Nations".

In the case of a full year's employment under the tax refund provision, the reimbursement may not exceed the tax payable solely on income from the United Nations, computed without regard to any other income, but taking into account all allowable deductions or exemptions. In the case of less than a full year's employment under the tax refund provision, the reimbursement may not exceed either a proportionate part of the maximum reimbursement payable on the basis of a full year's employment or such part of the total tax as is determined by the fraction: UN income subject to tax refund, divided by net income from all sources.

Nationals of only three Member nations—the United States, the United Kingdom, and Canada—so far have applied to the Comptroller for tax reimbursement under the tax refund provision. The largest disbursement has been on account of United States income tax, approximately $260,000 to date; United Kingdom tax reimbursement, mainly through the London Office, has been insignificant by comparison; and only half a dozen Canadians so far have requested tax refunds.

c. Status of Income Tax Exemption by Member States

Salaries and allowances paid by the United Nations to staff members residing or serving outside their home countries are as a rule exempt from income tax. The practical problem is to obtain such exemption with respect to staff members maintaining residence or serving within their home countries.

Members of the United Nations which have rocal immunity from taxation of salaries received by diplomatic representatives and officials of foreign governments if they are not nationals of the taxing government. This immunity generally is extended to salaries and allowances received by officials and employees of the United Nations. In the United States, both the Federal Government and the Government of the State of New York have extended this exemption to employees of all public international organizations in which the United States officially participates, provided such employees are not citizens of the United States. Under the Interim Arrangement concluded between the United Nations and the Swiss Confederation, United Nations salaries and allowances are exempt from Swiss taxation regardless of the nationality or residence of the recipient.

Members which have income tax systems generally exempt compensation received by their own nationals for personal services rendered while resident in another country. However, there are various definitions, degrees, and consequences of foreign residence. To qualify for such exemption, a United States citizen, for example, must be a bona fide resident of another country throughout an entire taxable year. A British subject whose usual place of abode is in the United Kingdom is taxable on foreign earnings remitted or brought back to the United Kingdom. An individual who ceases being or becomes resident or ordinarily resident in Canada during the taxable year pays only such part of the whole tax as is proportionate to the resident period.

With a view to solving the problem of tax exemption, among other things, all Members have been invited to accede to the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, adopted by the General Assembly on February 13, 1946. Eight Members so far have deposited with the Secretary-General instruments of accession to the Convention, which, in Section 18 (b) of Article V, provides exemption from taxation for salaries and emoluments paid to officials of the United Nations (except locally-recruited hourly-rate workers, as previously explained). The eight Members referred to and the dates of accession are as shown hereunder:

United Kingdom ¹	September 17, 1946
Dominican Republic	March 7, 1947
Liberia	March 14, 1947
Iran	May 8, 1947
Honduras	May 16, 1947
Panama	May 27, 1947
El Salvador	June 24, 1947
France	June 26, 1947

The Governments of Guatemala,² Greece, and the Philippine Republic recently have agreed to the Convention and their instruments of accession are expected to be deposited soon. Ratification is currently being considered by the Congress of the United States, as well as by the Governments of Canada, the Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Sweden,³ and Turkey.

¹While the United Kingdom has acceded to the Convention and actually is in a position under its own laws to give effect to Section 18 (b), it is understood that tax exemption for British subjects whose usual place of abode is in the United Kingdom has not yet been given full administrative effect.

²Guatemala's instrument of accession was deposited on July 7, 1947.

³The Swedish Council of State ratified the Convention on July 10, 1947.

d. Staff Contributions Plans

The question of a staff contributions plan in lieu of national taxation, which the General Assembly has referred to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, is under current consideration by that body.

The advisability of such a scheme was discussed by the Fifth Committee (Administrative and Budgetary) during the first part of the first session of the General Assembly. The Advisory Group of Experts had suggested that all staff members be subject to a provisional tax contribution scheme levied by the organization, at progressive rates similar to rates in the United States, providing a fund from which staff members who also had to pay national taxation on their United Nations salaries could be reimbursed, and that the amount of such refunds be added to the budget contributions of the Members responsible therefor.

These suggestions were based on the following considerations: that the Secretariat staff should be subject to some form of contribution in lieu of taxation by Members; that provision for such a plan would facilitate the approval by many national governments of income tax immunity for their nationals serving on the United Nations staff; and that establishment of the provisional staff contribution plan would make it possible to establish at the outset a uniform (gross) basis of remuneration for the staff, while, at the same time, it would not favor those Members which did not provide the proposed tax immunity.

8. RETIREMENT AND COMPENSATION

The General Assembly resolved that "the Secretary-General appointed at the first session of the General Assembly shall be provided with an annual retirement allowance of one-half his net salary (excluding allowances) on his retirement, provided that he has completed his term of service with the United Nations".

The General Assembly directed the Secretary-General to establish a provident fund for the benefit of the members of the staff.

A Staff Provident Fund was established on February 16, 1946. The Staff Provident Fund rules provided that every member of the staff except those employed on gross salary contracts, should contribute six per cent of his salary to the fund. The salary on which contributions were assessed was defined to include only base salary exclusive of any special grants or allowances. The staff member's contribution was matched by an equal contribution by the organization.

Under a resolution passed at the 66th plenary meeting of the General Assembly on December 15, 1946, the General Assembly adopted with effect from January 27, 1947, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Scheme Provisional Regulations, which provide retirement, death and disability benefits. The staff member contributes 7% of his salary to the Scheme and the organization contributes 14%.

The amount to the credit of a participant in the Staff Provident Fund is transferred to the Pension Fund on the date he enters the Pension Scheme. Staff members participating in the Provident Fund on January 27, 1946, may remain therein if they are not eligible for admission to the Pension Scheme, but no new participants may be admitted to the Provident Fund after that date.

A group life insurance program was established on May 5, 1947, and a health insurance plan, which provides medical, surgical and hospital service, went into effect on May 15, 1947.

9. ADMINISTRATIVE TRIBUNAL AND APPEALS BOARD

A draft statute for a United Nations Administrative Tribunal was submitted to the General Assembly during the second part of its first session. On November 16, 1946, the General Assembly unanimously adopted a proposal to postpone the decision on this matter until the next session.¹

An Appeals Board, with staff participation, has been established to consider appeals against any decision regarding the application of Secretary-General's Bulletins or of established administrative practices to the termination of an appointment (including termination for disciplinary reasons), appeals alleging non-observance of agreed terms of appointment, appeals against disciplinary action and appeals of such other character as the Secretary-General may specify.

D. UNITED NATIONS BUDGET AND FINANCE

1. INTRODUCTION

The General Assembly directed that the permanent budgetary and financial arrangements of the United Nations should be so designed as to promote efficient and economical administration and command the confidence of Members. Adequate arrangements were to be made for the collection and custody of funds, the control of disbursements and the audit of expenditure. The problem was regarded as most important in regard to the control of expenditure. It was deemed essential to have orderly budgetary procedures with rules which ensured that proposals involving expenditure were properly prepared and thoroughly examined before being approved. On the other hand, the rules were to be so devised as to allow for this examination to take place without undue delay and for the prompt execution of policies after they had been duly approved.

Financial considerations were to be given full weight in the formulation of policy, but financial controls were not to be used to frustrate or hinder the execution of policies duly agreed. These controls were intended to assist in the orderly and economical conduct of the affairs of the United Nations, and were not to be regarded as negative in character. A due balance had to be reached. The desire of the Members was to make the United Nations a success and to ensure that the financial controls were used for their proper ends.

The Provisional Financial Regulations for the United Nations established the financial year as the calendar year, January 1 to December 31. It was believed that by the adoption of such a financial year the gap between the formulation and approval of the budget and the date upon which it came into operation would be made reasonably short, thus facilitating realistic budgetary estimates and the prompt execution of approved policies, while at the same time Members would have sufficient time to review the budget voted by the Assembly in taking action in their legislatures to make budget assessments available to the organization.

The fundamental control of the United Nations budget rests, of course, with the General Assembly, which alone has power to approve the budgetary appropriations. A two-thirds majority is required for approval of all budgetary questions in the General Assembly. The Secretary-General, however, as chief administrative officer, formulates and presents the annual budget of the organization to the General Assembly. In this task he is guided by the policies already approved or under consideration by the Councils and Assembly. To aid him in these functions the Secretary-General has the assistance of a budgetary staff. The different units of the Secretariat consult with the budgetary staff in preparing their estimates, and the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of Administrative and Financial Services, which includes the Bureau of Administrative Management and Budget, advises the Secretary-General upon these estimates.

In order to facilitate the examination of the budget by the General Assembly and its Administrative and Budgetary Committee (the Fifth Committee) the General Assembly provided in a resolution of February 13, 1946, that a small standing committee should be appointed with the function, inter alia, of examining and reporting on the budget. This body, known as the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, was elected by the General Assembly at the second part of the first session in November 1946.¹

Pending the appointment of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, a small Advisory Group of Experts on Administrative, Personnel and Budgetary Questions was appointed by the Secretary-General to assist him in elaborating budgetary plans, financial rules and kindred matters. A similar Advisory Group had assisted the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Commission.

2. PROVISIONAL BUDGET OF 1946

The provisional budget of the United Nations for the financial year 1946 was adopted by the General Assembly in London on February 13, 1946. The Provisional Financial Regulations had envisaged that this provisional budget would be formulated and presented by the Secretary-General, but since the Secretary-General was not appointed until late in the first part of the first session, the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Commission, with the active and continuous support of the Advisory Group of Experts, undertook the task.

At the time the organizational structure of the Secretariat and the program of the United Nations were in the early development stage. The location of the interim site was uncertain. The budget had of necessity to be prepared without past United Nations expenditure experience, and detailed estimates were, accordingly, impossible. All that was feasible was presentation of a budget drawn in broad outline under five sections: (1) expenses of the General Assembly and the Councils; (2) expenses of the Secretariat; (3) expenses of the International Court of Justice; (4) unforeseen expenses; and (5) expenses of the Preparatory Commission and the cost of convening the General Assembly for the first part of the first session.

By virtue of the Provisional Financial Regulations, the provisional budget as adopted by the General Assembly was to remain in force pending substitution of the first annual budget of the United Nations to be adopted by the General Assembly during the second part of the first session.

The total of the provisional budget adopted by the General Assembly was $21,500,000. Owing to the tentative nature of the estimates upon which the five broad headings of the provisional budget were based, the Secretary-General was given the authority to transfer credits between headings to such degree as might be found necessary.

Under the Provisional Financial Regulations the appropriations are not available for spending until they have been allotted by the Secretary-General. During the initial organizational stages, these allotments were made direct to departments, on a quarterly basis, as programs developed. Under the terms of the regular annual budget resolution for 1946 and 1947, the allotment of appropriations is made in two stages—primary allotments by objects of expenditure; and from these primary allotments, secondary allotments to departments. These secondary allotments constitute the limits within which departments are authorized to spend.

3. THE WORKING CAPITAL FUND

The working capital fund was established at the first part of the first session of the General Assembly at $25,000,000.¹ The original object of this fund was to provide the United Nations with cash assets to meet its operating expenses under the provisional budget pending the submission of the first annual budget estimates and the adoption of a definite scale of budget assessments. The continuing purpose of the fund is primarily to provide a cash reserve pending receipt of assessments to the annual budgets from Member States.

The original resolution of the General Assembly relating to the working capital fund provided, inter alia, that Members should make advances in accordance with a provisional scale which was merely a matter of convenience and in no sense a precedent for the budgetary assessments; that these advances should be re-adjusted at the second part of the first session of the General Assembly in accordance with the scale adopted by the General Assembly for assessment of Members against the first annual budget²; that, except for any readjustments which might result from revision of the scale as referred to above, advances to the working capital fund should not be offset against contributions of Members to the first annual budget; that the General Assembly at the second part of its first session should determine the amount at which the working capital fund should be maintained and the method and timing of consequential set-offs against budget assessments or other adjustments.

Members' advances to the working capital fund do not represent expenditures as such, but stand as assets in their names in the fund. All uses of monies from the fund are balanced by the requirement for reimbursement of the fund from appropriations and corresponding assessment of Members or by other means.

Assessment and collection of 1946 contributions has not obviated the necessity for maintenance of a substantial working capital fund. In practice, there are likely to be some delays in the receipt of each year's budget assessments owing to Members' legislative and financial requirements. Later, receipts in each financial year should exceed current expenditures, thus enabling the working capital fund to be reimbursed for previous advances.

The General Assembly on December 14, 1946 resolved that the working capital fund should be maintained for the financial year 1947 at the amount of $20,000,000. The Assembly further authorized the Secretary-General to utilize the fund, to the degree necessary, for purposes which were set forth in a resolution reproduced earlier.³

² Advances were, in fact, assessed on the basis of the assessment scale for the second annual budget (for the financial year 1947).

³ See p. 216.

4. STAFF PROVIDENT FUND AND STAFF RETIREMENT SCHEME

The General Assembly directed at the first part of the first session that the Secretary-General establish a provident fund for the benefit of the members of the staff of the United Nations. The receipts of this fund come from salary deductions and from contributions in an equal amount by the United Nations (6% of salary in each case). Outgoing payments are those to staff members upon termination of services. At the second part of the first session the General Assembly authorized the establishment of a provisional staff retirement scheme, which was to be further considered at the second session of the General Assembly, scheduled to convene in September 1947.¹

5. INSURANCE

The General Assembly by a resolution of February 13, 1946, instructed the Secretary-General to ensure that the drivers of all official motor cars of the United Nations, and all members of the staff who owned or drove motor cars, be properly insured against third party risks. In accordance with this resolution, the United Nations carries a public liability insurance covering bodily or personal injury to persons not in the employ of the United Nations, and damage to property caused by the operations of the United Nations in the United States of America, including bodily or personal injury or property damage caused by the ownership or operation of automobiles.

6. CONTROL OF EXPENDITURES

The responsibility for control of expenditures was vested by the resolutions of the General Assembly in the Secretary-General. Under the Secretary-General, the day to day responsibility rests with the Assistant Secretary-General for Administrative and Financial Services, whose Department is organized into three bureaus—the Bureau of Administrative Management and Budget, the Bureau of the Comptroller and the Bureau of Personnel. Each of these bureaus has a part in the operation of controls, which are exercised in three ways:

a) In formulating the budget, departments submit their own estimates to the Department of Administrative and Financial Services. These departmental estimates are reviewed by the Bureau of Administrative Management and Budget. Consultations are held with departments to obtain balanced departmental and overall figures, having regard to the necessity for efficient and economical administration on the one hand and the effective carrying out of the programs on the other.

b) After approval of the estimates, allotments are made to departments on an annual or quarterly basis as appropriate for control purposes, to meet expenditures and obligations. In making the quarterly allotments, the Bureau of Administrative Management and Budget reviews with each department its requirements for the quarter, taking account of changes which may have occurred since the annual estimates were approved.

c) The Financial Rules now in operation provide, inter alia, for the recording of obligations against allotments. A system of pre-audit of bills and vouchers submitted for payment has been introduced, as well as an internal post-audit designed to test the efficiency of the accounting system and the adequacy of the regulations and methods of control.

In accordance with a resolution adopted by the General Assembly on February 13, 1946,² the Secretary-General, after consulting with the Advisory Group of Experts, recommended to the General Assembly that it make provision for the audit of accounts by nominating in person the chief audit official of each of three Member nations (providing that their Governments agreed), the three auditors to constitute a Board of Auditors which would audit United Nations accounts and submit its report to the General Assembly. This recommendation was accepted by the General Assembly, and the chief audit officials of Canada, Sweden and the Ukrainian S.S.R. were elected to the Audit Board. The Members of this Board will normally serve for three years. The audit of the accounts for the financial year 1946 was completed in the spring of 1947, and the auditor's report was prepared for submission to the second session of the General Assembly in September 1947.

7. FORMULATION OF THE 1946 AND 1947 BUDGETS

Planning for the 1946 and 1947 annual budgets was begun in May 1946. The budget items were submitted to the Advisory Group of Experts for examination, as provided by resolution of the General Assembly. The recommendations of the Advisory Group were incorporated in the preliminary budget estimates, which were published in October 1946.

Supplementary estimates were submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly during the second part of the first session, after the publication of the preliminary estimates. In part these supplementary estimates related to expenditure on items for which the Advisory Group of Experts had felt that a more specific approval of policy was required from the General Assembly; in part they resulted from developments which occurred following submission of the preliminary estimates—for example, adoption by the General Assembly of the provisional staff retirement scheme.

Consequent upon the examination of the first and second annual budgets by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and by the Fifth Committee, a number of reductions were made in the estimates first submitted, while a greater breakdown of the estimates by increase in the number of appropriation sections was effected.

The General Assembly, without dissent, approved the budget figures recommended by its Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee. The approved figures compare with those included in the provisional budget as follows:

¹The first appropriation section under the provisional budget, $1,500,000, covered "expenses of the General Assembly, Councils and Commissions"—that is, not only the travel of representatives, etc., but rental costs, printing costs and other charges resulting from sessions of the bodies concerned. In the first and second annual budgets the expenditure other than travel and transportation of the representatives is included in "Common Services." Certain lesser variations are involved also in the scope of other sections.

²Provisions for meeting unforeseen expenses included under Working Capital Fund.

As the table shows, there were only five appropriation sections in the provisional budget, but there are eight sections in the first annual budget for 1946. Of these eight, two were not required for 1947, but as a result of the introduction of a new item relating to advisory social welfare functions, and the breakdown of another 1946 section into two sections for 1947, there remain eight sections in the 1947 budget. Moreover, whereas the Secretary-General was empowered to transfer credits between sections for 1946, such transfers were not permitted under the 1947 budget. The budget estimates for 1948 show a further detailed breakdown of estimated expenses for that year based on accumulated experience in 1946 and 1947. The estimates for 1948 involved a further additional variation from past estimates along the lines of more detailed departmental and activities estimating.

8. BUDGETARY AND FINANCIAL RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE SPECIALIZED AGENCIES

In cognizance of the desirability of establishing close budgetary and financial relationships between the United Nations and each of the specialized agencies, a committee of the Economic and Social Council, with the assistance of the Secretariat, drafted provisions of general agreements concerning appropriate arrangements for the inclusion of the budgets of the specialized agencies within the general budget of the United Nations. In view of the numerous questions with respect to timing and procedure, the draft agreements specified that detailed arrangements should be defined in supplementary agreements with each of the agencies. Pending the conclusion of such arrangements, the draft agreements provided that the specialized agencies should consult with the United Nations during the preparation of their budgets; that they should transmit their proposed budgets to the United Nations annually at the same time as such budgets were transmitted to their Members; and that the General Assembly should examine these budgets or proposed budgets and make recommendations to the agencies on such matters as it deemed necessary. The interim arrangements also provided that representatives of the specialized agencies should be entitled to participate without vote in the deliberations of the General Assembly, or in committees thereof, in which their budgets were under consideration.

There are a number of difficulties in the way of complete co-ordination of the budgets of the United Nations and the specialized agencies. However, the Secretary-General has been authorized by the General Assembly to pursue this matter and other matters of co-ordination with the agencies. In February 1947 a Co-ordination Committee comprised of the Secretary-General and the corresponding officers of the specialized agencies was established to give effect to this objective. Serving the Co-ordination Committee are four Consultative Committees comprised of operating officials. These include a Consultative Committee on Budgetary and Financial Matters and a Consultative Committee on Personnel Matters. Consultations have been proceeding in these Consultative Committees with regard to adoption of standard budgetary practices and forms, establishment of common salary scales, common recruitment through an International Personnel Advisory Board, common collection of contributions and other common administrative services.

As indicated earlier, the Secretary-General has also been authorized by the terms of the Working Capital Fund Resolution of the General Assembly to make loans from the working capital fund to specialized agencies under specified conditions.

9. APPORTIONMENT OF EXPENSES

The General Assembly, at its 31st plenary meeting held on February 13, 1946, appointed a Committee on Contributions¹, with instructions to prepare a detailed scale of apportionment of expenses for consideration by the General Assembly at the second part of the first session. The General Assembly called the attention of the Committee to the following general principles with respect to the apportionment of expenses:

The expenses of the United Nations should be apportioned broadly according to capacity to pay. It is, however, difficult to measure such capacity merely by statistical means, and impossible to arrive at any definite formula. Comparative estimates of national income would appear prima facie to be the fairest guide. Other factors which should be taken into account in order to prevent anomalous assessments include the following:

- (a) comparative income per head of population, in the case of populous states with low average income per head;
- (b) temporary dislocation of national economies arising out of the Second World War;

(c) the ability of Members to secure foreign currency.

Two opposite tendencies should also be guarded against: some Members may desire unduly to minimise their contributions, whereas others may desire to increase them unduly for reasons of prestige. If a ceiling is imposed on contributions the ceiling should not be such as seriously to obscure the relation between a nation's contributions and its capacity to pay. The Committee should be given discretion to consider all data relevant to capacity to pay and all other pertinent factors in arriving at its recommendations. Once a scale has been fixed by the General Assembly it should not be subjected to a general revision for at least three years or unless it is clear that there have been substantial changes in relative capacities to pay.¹

The Committee on Contributions began its deliberation on June 18, 1946. In accordance with its terms of reference, the Committee confined its work to making estimates of relative capacity to pay, but recognized that there were factors other than capacity to pay which might affect the question of the scale of contributions.

The Committee took into account in its estimates the effects of war dislocations, war improvement, availability of foreign exchange and per capita incomes; made adjustments to the scale derived from the original national income figures; and arrived at a scale of relative capacities to pay which it submitted to the second part of the first session of the General Assembly. The Fifth Committee of the General Assembly decided, however, that the proposed scale had certain features requiring further consideration, and appointed a Sub-Committee to reconsider the scale, taking account of factors other than capacity to pay. The Sub-Committee proposed revised scales for 1946 and 1947 which were subsequently agreed upon by the General Assembly.²

*I. The International Labour Organisation*¹

The International Labour Organisation was established in 1919 as an autonomous institution associated with the League of Nations. The original members of ILO were the original members of the League, and thereafter membership in the League carried with it, but was not necessary for, membership in the Organisation.

Six of the original members of the League ceased to be members of it, but retained their membership in ILO. These were Brazil, Haiti, Peru, Chile, Venezuela and Hungary. The United States joined the Organisation in 1934. Egypt became a member in 1936, before becoming a member of the League. Costa Rica, in 1942, and Italy and Guatemala, in 1945, rejoined the Organisation after having ceased to be members. Iceland was admitted to membership in 1945.

The first General Conference of the Organisation was held at Washington, D. C., in 1919, and the second at Genoa, Italy, in 1920. Thereafter, until 1939, sessions of the General Conference were held at the Organisation's seat at Geneva.

A special session was held at New York in 1941, and regular sessions at Philadelphia in 1944, at Paris in 1945, and at Seattle and Montreal in 1946.

B. PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

The Preamble of the Organisation's Constitution states that universal peace "can be established only if it is based upon social justice"; that unjust conditions of labor imperil "the peace and harmony of the world"; and that an improvement in such conditions "is urgently required: as, for example, by the regulation of the hours of work, including the establishment of a maximum working day and week, the regulation of the labour supply, the prevention of unemployment, the provision of an adequate living wage, the protection of the worker against sickness, disease and injury arising out of his employment, the protection of children, young persons and women, provision for old age and injury, protection of the interests of workers when employed in countries other than their own, recognition of the principle of equal remuneration for work of equal value, recognition of the principle of freedom of association, the organization of vocational and technical education and other measures."

The 26th session of the General Conference, held at Philadelphia in April and May 1944, adopted a "Declaration concerning the Aims and Purposes of the International Labour Organisation." Under an amendment to the Constitution adopted by the 29th session of the Conference in October 1946, the objects set forth in this Declaration are included among those to be promoted by the Organisation, and the text of the Declaration is annexed to the Constitution.

The Declaration re-defines the functions and responsibilities of the Organisation. It reaffirms the fundamental principles upon which the Organisation is based and, in particular, that

- (a) labor is not a commodity;
- (b) freedom of expression and of association are essential to sustained progress;
- (c) poverty anywhere constitutes a danger to prosperity everywhere;
- (d) the war against want requires to be carried on with unrelenting vigor within each nation, and by continuous and concerted international effort in which the representatives of workers and employers, enjoying equal status with those of Governments, join with them in free discussion and democratic decision with a view to the promotion of the common welfare.

The Declaration affirms that "all human beings . . . have the right to pursue both their material well-being and their spiritual development in conditions of freedom and dignity, of economic security and equal opportunity," and adds that the "attainment of the conditions in which this shall be possible must constitute the central aim of national and international policy." The Declaration then says that "it is a responsibility of the International Labour Organisation to examine and consider all international economic and financial policies and measures in the light of this fundamental objective," and that, in discharging the tasks entrusted to it, the Organisation, "having considered all relevant economic and financial factors, may include in its decisions and recommendations any provisions which it considers appropriate."

The Declaration goes on to recognize the solemn obligation of the Organisation to promote programs to achieve full employment and the raising of standards of living, recognition of the right of collective bargaining, extension of social security, etc. It embodies a pledge that the Organisation will co-operate with other international bodies in the achievement of the objectives it sets forth and in the promotion of the health, education and well-being of all peoples.

C. ORGANIZATION

The International Labour Organisation consists of (1) a General Conference of representatives of the members, (2) a Governing Body, and (3) an International Labour Office controlled by the Governing Body.

The General Conference meets at least once a year. It is composed of four representatives of each member State, of whom two are government delegates and the other two are delegates representing, respectively, the employers and the workers of each member. Each delegate may be accompanied by not more than two advisers for each item on the agenda of the session. The decisions of the Conference may take the form of International Labour Conventions or of Recommendations. The member States are obligated to consider Conventions for possible ratification. If a member ratifies a Convention, it is obligated to apply its provisions, and to submit annual reports to the International Labour Office on the manner in which it is doing so. Recommendations are not required to be considered for possible ratification, but members are under obligation to consider them "with a view to effect being given to them by national legislation or otherwise." The Conference may also go on record in the form of Resolutions.

The Governing Body is composed of 32 members. Sixteen of these represent governments, eight the employers, and eight the workers. Eight of the sixteen government representatives are appointed by the eight member States of chief industrial importance. The other eight government representatives are appointed by member States chosen by the government delegates to the Conference in an election held every three years, in which the eight States of chief industrial importance do not participate. The employer and worker members are elected, respectively, by the employer and worker delegates to the Conference and their advisers. The Governing Body's responsibilities include the selection of items for the agenda of the Conference, the appointment of the Director-General of the International Labour Office, the general supervision of the Office and of the various committees and commissions which supplement the principal organs of the Organisation, and the consideration of proposals for the Organisation's budget.

The International Labour Office provides the secretariat of the Conference and of the Governing Body, prepares documents on the items of the agenda of the Conference and of the Governing Body, collects and distributes information on all subjects within the Organisation's competence, assists governments in the drafting of legislation and regulations, conducts such special investigations as may be ordered by the Conference or by the Governing Body, provides machinery to assist in the ensuring of the effective application of Conventions, and issues a variety of periodical and other publications dealing with problems of industry and employment. These include the International Labour Review, published monthly; the Industrial Safety Survey, quarterly; the Legislative Series, quarterly; the Official Bulletin; the Year Book of Labour Statistics; the Bibliography of Industrial Hygiene, annually; and various studies, reports and pamphlets. The studies and reports have been devoted to such subjects as industrial relations, economic conditions, employment and unemployment, wages and hours of work, the disabled, industrial hygiene, safety, housing and welfare, co-operation, employment of women and children, education, agriculture, professional workers, social insurance, statistics, migration and seamen. The documentation for the Conference and the Governing Body, and many of the periodicals and other publications are published in English, French and Spanish.

Various committees and commissions assist in furthering the work of the Organisation in specific fields. These include the Joint Maritime Commission, the Committee on Accident Prevention, the Permanent Agriculture Committee, the Committee on Industrial Hygiene, the Committee on Women's Work, the Committee on Social Policy in Dependent Territories, the International Development Works Committee, the Permanent Migration Committee, the Committee of Statistical Experts, the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions, the Advisory Committee on Co-operation, the Committee on Indigenous Labour, the Consultative Committee on Juvenile Labour, and Industrial Committees for the following eight industries: Coal Mining; Textiles; Building, Civil Engineering and Public Works; Metal Trades; Iron and Steel Production; Inland Transport; Petroleum Production and Refining; Chemicals.

In addition to the working headquarters of the International Labour Office at Montreal and the office at Geneva, there is a Liaison Office with the United Nations and branch offices in China, France, India, Italy, the United Kingdom, and the United States.

Correspondents are maintained in the following countries: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, Egypt, Greece, Hungary, Iraq, Mexico, Peru, Poland, Sweden, Uruguay, Venezuela.

D. HISTORY

Throughout the years between its establishment and the outbreak of the Second World War, the Organisation played a leading role in promoting the improvement of labor conditions throughout the world and was one of the most vital influences in international relations.

In 1940, in order to ensure that the International Labour Office should be able to continue to function freely, its working headquarters were established at Montreal, Canada. During the war years many of the Organisation's activities were maintained, certain new work was undertaken, and its resources were mobilized to place at the disposal of each of the Allies the experience of the others in matters within the Organisation's competence, the product of this research being made available in a series of studies. A special Conference of the Organisation, which marked the first large-scale meeting of Allied representatives since the outbreak of war, was held in New York in 1941, and a series of seven meetings of United States and Canadian representatives concerned with manpower mobilization problems was organized during 1941 and 1942. A meeting of the Governing Body was held in 1941, a session of the Emergency Committee of the Governing Body in 1942, and regular Governing Body sessions were resumed in 1943. Regular sessions of the General Conference were resumed in 1944 after a five-year interval. The machinery of the ILO makes provision for holding regional conferences enabling the Organisation to give more detailed attention to the problems of particular areas than is possible at a general session. Two such regional conferences of the American member countries were held before the war—one in Santiago, Chile, in 1936 and the second in Havana, Cuba, in 1939. In 1946 a third took place at Mexico City, from April 1 to 16. This Conference considered a report on the social and economic problems of the Americas and technical questions dealing with vocational training, labor inspection and industrial relations.

✓ From 1919 to the end of June 1947 there were 30 sessions of the General Conference of the Organisation, and 102 sessions of the Governing Body. Five of the Conference sessions were devoted exclusively to the drafting of international regulations governing social conditions in the maritime industry.

To date, the Conference has adopted 80 International Labour Conventions¹ and 80 Recommendations. The Conventions have received a total of 929 ratifications and 53 are at present in force. The Conventions and Recommendations constitute an International Labour Code² which embodies standards of policy covering many aspects of the conditions of life and work.

In May 1946, following negotiations between a delegation of the Governing Body and a committee of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, a draft agreement defining the terms of relationship between the organizations was concluded.³ On June 21 the Economic and Social Council unanimously accepted the agreement and recommended it to the General Assembly of the United Nations for approval. The agreement was unanimously approved by the 29th session of the International Labour Conference on October 2 and by the General Assembly on December 14, 1946. This brought the agreement into force.

E. REVISION OF CONSTITUTION

The 26th session of the Conference at Philadelphia in 1944 gave consideration to the Organisation's future status, policy and program and to its relationship with the general international organization that had been projected a few months earlier by the conference of Foreign Ministers at Moscow. The products of this consideration were the Declaration of Philadelphia and the organization of machinery designed to lead to a revision of the ILO Constitution with a view to remodelling and re-equipping the Organisation to enable it to discharge its responsibilities more effectively.

The 27th session of the Conference, held at Paris in October and November 1945, reaffirmed the Organisation's desire, as expressed by the Governing Body at its session in January 1945, to be associated with the United Nations. The Conference at the same time adopted an Instrument for the Amendment of the Constitution⁴ which provided (a) that any Member of the United Nations could become a member of the Organisation by declaring its intention to accept the obligations of membership; (b) that the Organisation might make budgetary and financial arrangements with the United Nations, and that, pending an agreement on such arrangements, the Conference should make its own arrangements; and (c) that the Constitution could be amended in future by a decision of the Conference ratified or accepted by two-thirds of the members, including five of the eight states of chief industrial importance. This Instrument came into force on September 26, 1946.

Following the 28th (Maritime) session of the International Labour Conference held at Seattle from June 6 to 29, 1946, the 29th session took place at Montreal from September 19 to October 10, 1946. In addition to approving the draft agreement with the United Nations, the Conference unanimously adopted an Instrument for the Amendment of the Constitution, 1946, and an International Labour Convention for the partial revision, in consequence of the dissolution of the League of Nations, of the Conventions adopted at the previous 28 sessions.

The Instrument for the Amendment of the Constitution, 1946, when it has come into force, will have, among others, the following effects: (1) to add the Declaration of Philadelphia to the Constitution as an annex; (2) to delete all references to the League of Nations; (3) to facilitate co-operation between the Organisation and the United Nations; (4) to clarify and give greater recognition to the position in the Organisation's structure occupied by the Governing Body; (5) to change the title of the Director of the International Labour Office to Director-General; (6) to clarify the obligations of the members in respect to International Labour Conventions with a view to their wider ratification and better application, and to provide for improved reporting on the manner in which these obligations are being discharged; (7) to require members to report, in respect to unratified Conventions and to Recommendations, the position of their law and practice in regard to the matters dealt with in the Conventions and Recommendations and to show the extent to which effect has been given or is proposed to be given to the provisions of the Conventions and Recommendations; (8) to clarify the obligations of the members in respect to Recommendations; (9) to clarify the obligations of federal States in respect to Conventions and Recommendations;

(10) to improve the procedure for the application of Conventions in non-metropolitan territories; (11) to empower the Governing Body to recommend to the Conference measures to secure compliance with the terms of ratified Conventions.

F. ACTIVITIES DURING 1946-47

The 30th session of the International Labour Conference convened in Geneva on June 19, 1947. It had before it a seven-point agenda. This included three technical questions—social policy in dependent territories, organization of labor inspection in industrial and commercial undertakings, and employment service organization. Two other questions were those with which every session of the Conference is required to deal—a report of the Director-General of the International Labour Office and a survey of the manner in which the member countries are applying the Conventions they have ratified. The sixth item was the Organisation's 1948 budget, and the seventh the question of freedom of association referred to the ILO by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations.

In addition to two sessions of the International Labour Conference, a regional conference, three sessions of the Governing Body, meetings of the Governing Body's committees, two sessions of the Conference Delegation on Constitutional Questions, and the negotiations between the Organisation and the United Nations, ILO activities in 1946 included twelve committee sessions held in widely-scattered parts of the world.

The committees meeting during the year included six of the seven international industrial committees which had a short time before become a part of ILO's machinery. The Committees on Coal Mining and Inland Transport held their first sessions in London in January; a meeting of the Iron and Steel Production Committee followed in Cleveland, Ohio, in April; the Committee on the Metal Trades met in Toledo, Ohio, in May; the Committees on Building, Civil Engineering and Public Works, and on Textiles met in Brussels in November.

At its second session of the year, held in San Francisco in July, the Committee on Accident Prevention completed its work on a proposed model safety code for the world's factories. While the Accident Prevention Committee was in session, there were simultaneous meetings in Montreal of the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and of a group of the members of the Committee on Women's Work. These meetings were followed in August by the inaugural session of the Permanent Migration Committee, which had been set up in 1940 by the Governing Body but which had been prevented by the war from meeting earlier.

During the first six months of 1947, ILO committees held a total of five meetings. The Committee on Petroleum Production and Refining met in Los Angeles in February 1947. The prime achievement of the conference was the establishment of a mechanism of an international scale for worker-management co-operation in the industry. In March the Committee on Social Policy in Dependent Territories held its first session in London and the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions met in Geneva. The second sessions of the Industrial Committees on Coal Mining and on Inland Transport were convened in Geneva in April and May respectively.

An official International Labour Office mission visited a number of countries in the Far East to complete and verify the information contained in reports prepared for a preparatory regional Asiatic Conference of ILO to be held in New Delhi, India, in October, 1947. Members of the mission, which assembled at New Delhi on January 30, visited Indian provincial and state centers, China, Burma, the Malayan Union, Singapore, Siam, the Philippines and Ceylon.

G. BUDGET

The budget of the Organisation for the calendar year 1947, as approved by the 29th session of the Conference, totals 16,052,980 Swiss francs or approximately U. S. $3,733,000. The budget was approved by the Conference under the authority conferred upon it by Article 13 of the Constitution, as amended by the Instrument for the Amendment of the Constitution, 1945. This article provides that "the arrangements for the approval, allocation and collection of the budget... shall be determined by the Conference by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast by the delegates present, and shall provide for the approval of the budget and of the arrangements for the allocation of expenses among the Members of the Organisation by a Committee of Government Representatives."

The procedure governing the approval, allocation and collection of the budget was defined in financial regulations adopted provisionally by the Conference on the understanding that they would be referred to the Governing Body for further consideration during the interval preceding the next session of the Conference. These regulations provided that budget estimates made by the International Labour Office should first be considered by the Governing Body in time for the estimates and the Governing Body's report on them, to be sent to the members two months before the annual Conference. The regulations provided further that the estimates, as approved by the Governing Body, should then be submitted to the Conference, which in turn should refer them to a committee of one government representative of each of the members, this committee in turn submitting the estimates to the Conference for final approval.

The budget for 1947, in Swiss francs, is as follows:

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION² PREAMBLE

Whereas universal and lasting peace can be established only if it is based upon social justice;

And whereas conditions of labour exist involving such injustice, hardship and privation to large numbers of people as to produce unrest so great that the peace and harmony of the world are imperilled; and an improvement of those conditions is urgently required: as, for example, by the regulation of the hours of work, including the establishment of a maximum working day and week, the regulation of the labour supply, the prevention of unemployment, the provision of an adequate living wage, the protection of the worker against sickness, disease and injury arising out of his employment, the protection of children, young persons and women, provision for old age and injury, protection of the interests of workers when employed in countries other than their own, recognition of the principle of equal remuneration for work of equal value, recognition of the principle of freedom of association, the organization of vocational and technical education and other measures;

Whereas also the failure of any nation to adopt humane conditions of labour is an obstacle in the way of other nations which desire to improve the conditions in their own countries;

The High Contracting Parties, moved by sentiments of justice and humanity as well as by the desire to secure the permanent peace of the world, and with a view to attaining the objectives set forth in this Preamble, agree to the following Constitution of the International Labour Organisation:

CHAPTER I—ORGANISATION

ARTICLE 1.

1. A permanent organisation is hereby established for the promotion of the objects set forth in the Preamble to this Constitution, and in the Declaration concerning the aims and purposes of the International Labour Organisation adopted at Philadelphia on 10 May 1944, the text of which is annexed to this Constitution.

2. The Members of the International Labour Organisation shall be the States which were Members of the Organisation on 1 November 1945, and such other States as may become Members in pursuance of the provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 of this article.

3. Any original Member of the United Nations and any State admitted to membership of the United Nations by a decision of the General Assembly in accordance with the provisions of the Charter may become a Member of the International Labour Organisation by communicating to the Director-General of the International Labour Office its formal acceptance of the obligations of the Constitution of the International Labour Organisation.

4. The General Conference of the International Labour Organisation may also admit Members to the Organisation by a vote concurred in by two thirds of the delegates attending the session, including two thirds of the Government delegates present and voting. Such admission shall take effect on the communication to the Director-General of the International Labour Office by the Government of the new Member of its formal acceptance of the obligations of the Constitution of the Organisation.

5. No Member of the International Labour Organisation may withdraw from the Organisation without giving notice of its intention so to do to the Director-General of the International Labour Office. Such notice shall take effect two years after the date of its reception by the Director-General, subject to the Member having at that time fulfilled all financial obligations arising out of its membership. When a Member has ratified any international labour Convention, such withdrawal shall not affect the continued validity for the period provided for in the Convention of all obligations arising thereunder or relating thereto.

6. In the event of any State having ceased to be a Member of the Organisation, its re-admission to membership shall be governed by the provisions of paragraph 3 or paragraph 4 of this article as the case may be.

ARTICLE 2.

The permanent organisation shall consist of

(a) a General Conference of representatives of the Members:

(b) a Governing Body composed as described in Article 7; and

(c) an International Labour Office controlled by the Governing Body.

ARTICLE 3.

1. The meetings of the General Conference of representatives of the Members shall be held from time to time as occasion may require, and at least once in every year. It shall be composed of four representatives of each of the Members, of whom two shall be Government delegates and the two others shall be delegates representing respectively the employers and the workpeople of each of the Members.

2. Each delegate may be accompanied by advisers, who shall not exceed two in number for each item on the agenda of the meeting. When questions specially affecting women are to be considered by the Conference, one at least of the advisers should be a woman.

3. Each Member which is responsible for the international relations of non-metropolitan territories may appoint as additional advisers to each of its delegates:

(a) persons nominated by it as representatives of any such territory in regard to matters within the self-governing powers of that territory; and

(b) persons nominated by it to advise its delegates in regard to matters concerning non-self-governing territories.

4. In the case of a territory under the joint authority of two or more Members, persons may be nominated to advise the delegates of such Members.

5. The Members undertake to nominate non-Government delegates and advisers chosen in agreement with the industrial organisations, if such organisations exist, which are most representative of employers or workpeople, as the case may be, in their respective countries.

6. Advisers shall not speak except on a request made by the delegate whom they accompany and by the special authorisation of the President of the Conference, and may not vote.

7. A delegate may by notice in writing addressed to the President appoint one of his advisers to act as his deputy, and the adviser, while so acting, shall be allowed to speak and vote.

8. The names of the delegates and their advisers will be communicated to the International Labour Office by the Government of each of the Members.

9. The credentials of delegates and their advisers shall be subject to scrutiny by the Conference, which may, by two thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present, refuse to admit any delegate or adviser whom it deems not to have been nominated in accordance with this article.

ARTICLE 4.

1. Every delegate shall be entitled to vote individually on all matters which are taken into consideration by the Conference.

2. If one of the Members fails to nominate one of the non-Government delegates whom it is entitled to nominate, the other non-Government delegate shall be allowed to sit and speak at the Conference, but not to vote.

3. If in accordance with Article 3 the Conference refuses admission to a delegate of one of the Members, the provisions of the present article shall apply as if that delegate had not been nominated.

ARTICLE 5.

The meetings of the Conference shall, subject to any decisions which may have been taken by the Conference itself at a previous meeting, be held at such place as may be decided by the Governing Body.

ARTICLE 6.

Any change in the seat of the International Labour Office shall be decided by the Conference by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast by the delegates present.

ARTICLE 7.

1. The Governing Body shall consist of thirty-two persons:

Sixteen representing Governments,
Eight representing the Employers, and Eight representing the Workers.

2. Of the sixteen persons representing Governments, eight shall be appointed by the Members of chief industrial importance, and eight shall be appointed by the Members selected for that purpose by the Government delegates to the Conference, excluding the delegates of the eight Members mentioned above.

Of the sixteen Members represented six shall be non-European States.

3. The Governing Body shall as occasion requires determine which are the Members of the Organisation of chief industrial importance and shall make rules to ensure that all questions relating to the selection of the Members of chief industrial importance are considered by an impartial committee before being decided by the Governing Body. Any appeal made by a Member from the declaration of the Governing Body as to which are the Members of chief industrial importance shall be decided by the Conference, but an appeal to the Conference shall not suspend the application of the declaration until such time as the Conference decides the appeal.

4. The persons representing the Employers and the persons representing the Workers shall be elected respectively by the Employers' delegates and the Workers' delegates to the Conference.

Two Employers' representatives and two Workers' representatives shall belong to non-European States.

5. The period of office of the Governing Body shall be three years. If for any reason the Governing Body elections do not take place on the expiry of this period, the Governing Body shall remain in office until such elections are held.

6. The method of filling vacancies and of appointing substitutes and other similar questions may be decided by the Governing Body subject to the approval of the Conference.

7. The Governing Body shall, from time to time, elect from its number a Chairman and two Vice-Chairmen, of whom one shall be a person representing a Government, one a person representing the Employers, and one a person representing the Workers.

8. The Governing Body shall regulate its own procedure and shall fix its own times of meeting. A special meeting shall be held if a written request to that effect is made by at least twelve of the representatives on the Governing Body.

ARTICLE 8.

1. There shall be a Director-General of the International Labour Office, who shall be appointed by the Governing Body, and, subject to the instructions of the Governing Body, shall be responsible for the efficient conduct of the International Labour Office and for such other duties as may be assigned to him.

2. The Director-General or his deputy shall attend all meetings of the Governing Body.

ARTICLE 9.

1. The staff of the International Labour Office shall be appointed by the Director-General under regulations approved by the Governing Body.

2. So far as is possible with due regard to the efficiency of the work of the Office, the Director-General shall select persons of different nationalities.

3. A certain number of these persons shall be women.

4. The responsibilities of the Director-General and the staff shall be exclusively international in character. In the performance of their duties, the Director-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any Government or from any other authority external to the Organisation. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organisation.

5. Each Member of the Organisation undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Director-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

ARTICLE 10.

1. The functions of the International Labour Office shall include the collection and distribution of information on all subjects relating to the international adjustment of conditions of industrial life and labour, and particularly the examination of subjects which it is proposed to bring before the Conference with a view to the conclusion of international Conventions, and the conduct of such special investigations as may be ordered by the Conference or by the Governing Body.

2. Subject to such directions as the Governing Body may give, the Office will

(a) prepare the documents on the various items of the agenda for the meetings of the Conference;

(b) accord to Governments at their request all appropriate assistance within its power in connection with the framing of laws and regulations on the basis of the decisions of the Conference and the improvement of administrative practices and systems of inspection;

(c) carry out the duties required of it by the provisions of this Constitution in connection with the effective observance of Conventions;

(d) edit and issue, in such languages as the Governing Body may think desirable, publications dealing with problems of industry and employment of international interest.

3. Generally, it shall have such other powers and duties as may be assigned to it by the Conference or by the Governing Body.

ARTICLE 11.

The Government departments of any of the Members which deal with questions of industry and employment may communicate directly with the Director-General through the representative of their Government or the Governing Body of the International Labour Office, or failing any such representative, through such other qualified official as the Government may nominate for the purpose.

ARTICLE 12.

1. The International Labour Organisation shall co-operate within the terms of this Constitution with any general international organisation entrusted with the co-ordination of the activities of public international organisations having specialised responsibilities and with public international organisations having specialised responsibilities in related fields.

2. The International Labour Organisation may make appropriate arrangements for the representatives of public international organisations to participate without vote in its deliberations.

3. The International Labour Organisation may make suitable arrangements for such consultation as it may think desirable with recognized non-governmental international organisations, including international organisations of employers, workers, agriculturists and co-operators.

ARTICLE 13.

1. The International Labour Organisation may make such financial and budgetary arrangements with the United Nations as may appear appropriate.

2. Pending the conclusion of such arrangements or if at any time no such arrangements are in force—

(a) each of the Members will pay the travelling and subsistence expenses of its delegates and their advisers and of its representatives attending the meetings of the Conference or the Governing Body, as the case may be;

(b) all other expenses of the International Labour Office and of the meetings of the Conference or Governing Body shall be paid by the Director-General of the International Labour Office out of the general funds of the International Labour Organisation;

(c) the arrangements for the approval, allocation and collection of the budget of the International Labour Organisation shall be determined by the Conference by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast by the delegates present, and shall provide for the approval of the budget and of the arrangements for the allocation of expenses among the Members of the Organisation by a Committee of Government Representatives.

3. The expenses of the International Labour Organisation shall be borne by the Members in accordance with the arrangements in force in virtue of paragraph 1 or paragraph 2 (c) of this article.

4. A Member of the Organisation which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contribution to the Organisation shall have no vote in the Conference, in the Governing Body, in any committee, or in the elections of members of the Governing Body, if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years: Provided that the Conference may by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast by the delegates present permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

5. The Director-General of the International Labour Office shall be responsible to the Governing Body for the proper expenditure of the funds of the International Labour Organisation.

CHAPTER II—PROCEDURE

ARTICLE 14.

1. The agenda for all meetings of the Conference will be settled by the Governing Body, who shall consider any suggestion as to the agenda that may be made by the Government of any of the Members or by any representative organisation recognized for the purpose of Article 3, or by any public international organisation.

2. The Governing Body shall make rules to ensure thorough technical preparation and adequate consultation of the Members primarily concerned, by means of a preparatory Conference or otherwise, prior to the adoption of a Convention or Recommendation by the Conference.

ARTICLE 15.

1. The Director-General shall act as the Secretary-General of the Conference, and shall transmit the agenda so as to reach the Members four months before the meeting of the Conference, and, through them, the non-Government delegates when appointed.

2. The reports on each item of the agenda shall be despatched so as to reach the Members four months before the meeting of the Conference. The Governing Body shall make rules for the application of this provision.

ARTICLE 16.

1. Any of the Governments of the Members may formally object to the inclusion of any item or items in the agenda. The grounds for such objection shall be set forth in a statement addressed to the Director-General who shall circulate it to all the Members of the Organisation.

2. Items to which such objection has been made shall not, however, be excluded from the agenda, if at the Conference a majority of two thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present is in favour of considering them.

3. If the Conference decides (otherwise than under the preceding paragraph) by two thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present that any subject shall be considered by the Conference, that subject shall be included in the agenda for the following meeting.

ARTICLE 17.

1. The Conference shall elect a President and three Vice-Presidents. One of the Vice-Presidents shall be a Government delegate, one an Employers' delegate and one a Workers' delegate. The Conference shall regulate its own procedure and may appoint committees to consider and report on any matter.

2. Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Constitution or by the terms of any Convention or other instrument conferring powers on the Conference or of the financial and budgetary arrangements adopted in virtue of Article 13, all matters shall be decided by a simple majority of the votes cast by the delegates present.

3. The voting is void unless the total number of votes cast is equal to half the number of the delegates attending the Conference.

ARTICLE 18.

The Conference may add to any committees which it appoints technical experts without power to vote.

ARTICLE 19.

1. When the Conference has decided on the adoption of proposals with regard to an item in the agenda, it will rest with the Conference to determine whether these proposals should take the form: (a) of an international Convention, or (b) of a Recommendation to meet circumstances where the subject, or aspect of it, dealt with is not considered suitable or appropriate at that time for a Convention.

2. In either case a majority of two thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present shall be necessary on the final vote for the adoption of the Convention or Recommendation, as the case may be, by the Conference.

3. In framing any Convention or Recommendation of general application the Conference shall have due regard to those countries in which climatic conditions, the imperfect development of industrial organisation, or other special circumstances make the industrial conditions substantially different and shall suggest the modifications, if any, which it considers may be required to meet the case of such countries.

4. Two copies of the Convention or Recommendation shall be authenticated by the signatures of the President of the Conference and of the Director-General. Of these copies one shall be deposited in the archives of the International Labour Office and the other with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The Director-General will communicate a certified copy of the Convention or Recommendation to each of the Members.

5. In the case of a Convention—

(a) the Convention will be communicated to all Members for ratification;

(b) each of the Members undertakes that it will, within the period of one year at most from the closing of the session of the Conference, or if it is impossible owing to exceptional circumstances to do so within the period of one year, then at the earliest practicable moment and in no case later than eighteen months from the closing of the session of the Conference, bring the Convention before the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies, for the enactment of legislation or other action;

(c) Members shall inform the Director-General of the International Labour Office of the measures taken in accordance with this article to bring the Convention before the said competent authority or authorities, with particulars of the authority or authorities regarded as competent, and of the action taken by them;

(d) if the Member obtains the consent of the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies it will communicate the formal ratification of the Convention to the Director-General and will take such action as may be necessary to make effective the provisions of such Convention;

(e) if the Member does not obtain the consent of the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies, no further obligation shall rest upon the Member except that it shall report to the Director-General of the International Labour Office, at appropriate intervals as requested by the Governing Body, the position of its law and practice in regard to the matters dealt with in the Convention and showing the extent to which effect has been given, or is proposed to be given, to any of the provisions of the Convention by legislation, administrative action, collective agreement or otherwise and stating the difficulties which prevent or delay the ratification of such Convention.

6. In the case of a Recommendation—

(a) the Recommendation will be communicated to all Members for their consideration with a view to effect being given to it by national legislation or otherwise;

(b) each of the Members undertakes that it will, within a period of one year at most from the closing of the session of the Conference, or if it is impossible owing to exceptional circumstances to do so within the period of one year, then at the earliest practicable moment and in no case later than eighteen months after the closing of the Conference, submit the Recommendation to the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies for the enactment of legislation or other action;

(c) the Members will inform the Director-General of the International Labour Office of the measures taken in accordance with this article to bring the Recommendation before the said competent authority or authorities with particulars of the authority or authorities regarded as competent, and of the action taken by them;

(d) apart from bringing the Recommendation before the said competent authority or authorities, no further obligation shall rest upon the Members, except that they shall report to the Director-General of the International Labour Office, at appropriate intervals as requested by the Governing Body, the position of the law and practice in their country in regard to the matters dealt with in the Recommendation and showing the extent to which effect has been given, or is proposed to be given, to the provisions of the Recommendation and such modifications of these provisions as it has been found or may be found necessary to make in adopting or applying them.

7. In the case of a federal State, the following provisions shall apply:

(a) in respect of Conventions and Recommendations which the federal Government regards as appropriate under its constitutional system for federal action, the obligations of the federal State shall be the same as those of Members which are not federal States;

(b) in respect of Conventions and Recommendations which the federal Government regards as appropriate under its constitutional system, in whole or in part, for action by the constituent States, provinces, or cantons rather than for federal action, the federal Government shall—

(i) make, in accordance with its Constitution and the Constitutions of the States, provinces or cantons concerned, effective arrangements for the reference of such Conventions and Recommendations not later than eighteen months from the closing of the session of the Conference to the appropriate federal, State, provincial or cantonal authorities for the enactment of legislation or other action;

(ii) arrange, subject to the concurrence of the State, provincial or cantonal Governments concerned, for periodical consultations between the federal and the State, provincial or cantonal authorities with a view to promoting within the federal State co-ordinated action to give effect to the provisions of such Conventions and Recommendations;

(v) in respect of each such Recommendation, report to the Director-General of the International Labour Office, at appropriate intervals as requested by the Governing Body, the position of the law and practice of the federation and its constituent States, provinces or cantons in regard to the Recommendation, showing the extent to which effect has been given, or is proposed to be given, to the provisions of the Recommendation and such modifications of these provisions as have been found or may be found necessary in adopting or applying them.

8. In no case shall the adoption of any Convention or Recommendation by the Conference, or the ratification of any Convention by any Member, be deemed to affect any law, award, custom or agreement which ensures more favourable conditions to the workers concerned than those provided for in the Convention or Recommendation.

ARTICLE 20.

Any Convention so ratified shall be communicated by the Director-General of the International Labour Office to the Secretary-General of the United Nations for registration in accordance with the provisions of Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations but shall only be binding upon the Members which ratify it.

ARTICLE 21.

1. If any Convention coming before the Conference for final consideration fails to secure the support of two thirds of the votes cast by the delegates present, it shall nevertheless be within the right of any of the Members of the Organisation to agree to such Convention among themselves.

2. Any Convention so agreed to shall be communicated by the Governments concerned to the Director-General of the International Labour Office and to the Secretary-General of the United Nations for registration in accordance with the provisions of Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations.

ARTICLE 22.

These reports shall be made in such form and shall contain such particulars as the Governing Body may request.

ARTICLE 23.

1. The Director-General shall lay before the next meeting of the Conference a summary of the information and reports communicated to him by Members in pursuance of Articles 19 and 22.

ARTICLE 24.

In the event of any representation being made to the International Labour Office by an industrial association of employers or of workers that any of the Members has failed to secure in any respect the effective observance within its jurisdiction of any Convention to which it is a party, the Governing Body may communicate this representation to the Government against which it is made, and may invite that Government to make such statement on the subject as it may think fit.

ARTICLE 25.

If no statement is received within a reasonable time from the Government in question, or if the statement when received is not deemed to be satisfactory by the Governing Body, the latter shall have the right to publish the representation and the statement, if any, made in reply to it.

ARTICLE 26.

1. Any of the Members shall have the right to file a complaint with the International Labour Office if it is not satisfied that any other Member is securing the effective observance of any Convention which both have ratified in accordance with the foregoing articles.

2. The Governing Body may, if it thinks fit, before referring such a complaint to a Commission of Enquiry, as hereinafter provided for, communicate with the Government in question in the manner described in Article 24.

3. If the Governing Body does not think it necessary to communicate the complaint to the Government in question, or if, when they have made such communication, no statement in reply has been received within a reasonable time which the Governing Body considers to be satisfactory, the Governing Body may appoint a Commission of Enquiry to consider the complaint and to report thereon.

4. The Governing Body may adopt the same procedure either of its own motion or on receipt of a complaint from a delegate to the Conference.

5. When any matter arising out of Articles 25 or 26 is being considered by the Governing Body, the Government in question shall, if not already represented thereon, be entitled to send a representative to take part in the proceedings of the Governing Body while the matter is under consideration. Adequate notice of the date on which the matter will be considered shall be given to the Government in question.

ARTICLE 27.

The Members agree that, in the event of the reference of a complaint to the Commission of Enquiry under Article 26, they will each, whether directly concerned in the complaint or not, place at the disposal of the Commission all the information in their possession which bears upon the subject matter of the complaint.

ARTICLE 28.

1. When the Commission of Enquiry has fully considered the complaint, it shall prepare a report embodying its findings on all questions of fact relevant to determining the issue between the parties and containing such recommendations as it may think proper as to the steps which should be taken to meet the complaint and the time within which they should be taken.

ARTICLE 29.

1. The Director-General of the International Labour Office shall communicate the report of the Commission of Enquiry to the Governing Body and to each of the Governments concerned in the complaint, and shall cause it to be published.

2. Each of these Governments shall within three months inform the Director-General of the International Labour Office whether or not it accepts the recommendations contained in the report of the Commission; and if not, whether it proposes to refer the complaint to the International Court of Justice.

ARTICLE 30.

In the event of any Member failing to take the action required by paragraphs 5 (b), 6 (b) or 7 (b) (i) of Article 19 with regard to a Convention or Recommendation, any other Member shall be entitled to refer the matter to the Governing Body. ARTICLE 34

The defaulting Government may at any time inform the Governing Body that it has taken the steps necessary to comply with the recommendations of the Commission of Enquiry or with those in the decision of the International Court of Justice, as the case may be, and may request it to constitute a Commission of Enquiry to verify its contention. In this case the provisions of Articles 27, 28, 29, 31 and 32 shall apply, and if the report of the Commission of Enquiry or the decision of the International Court of Justice is in favour of the defaulting Government, the Governing Body shall forthwith recommend the discontinuance of any action taken in pursuance of Article 33.

CHAPTER III—GENERAL

ARTICLE 35.

1. The Members undertake that Conventions which they have ratified in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be applied to the non-metropolitan territories for whose international relations they are responsible, including any trust territories for which they are the administering authority, except where the subject matter of the Convention is within the self-governing powers of the territory or the Convention is inapplicable owing to the local conditions or subject to such modifications as may be necessary to adapt the Convention to local conditions.

2. Each Member which ratifies a Convention shall as soon as possible after ratification communicate to the Director-General of the International Labour Office a declaration stating in respect of the territories other than those referred to in paragraphs 4 and 5 below the extent to which it undertakes that the provisions of the Convention shall be applied and giving such particulars as may be prescribed by the Convention.

6. Acceptance of the obligations of a Convention in virtue of paragraphs 4 or 5 shall involve the acceptance on behalf of the territory concerned of the obligations stipulated by the terms of the Convention and the obligations under the Constitution of the Organisation which apply to ratified Conventions. A declaration of acceptance may specify such modifications of the provisions of the Convention as may be necessary to adapt the Convention to local conditions.

7. ARTICLE 36.

Amendments to this Constitution which are adopted by the Conference by a majority of two thirds of the votes cast by the delegates

1. Any question or dispute relating to the interpretation of this Constitution or of any subsequent Convention concluded by the Members in pursuance of the provisions of this Constitution shall be referred for decision to the International Court of Justice.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 1 of this article the Governing Body may make and submit to the Conference for approval rules providing for the appointment of a tribunal for the expeditious determination of any dispute or question relating to the interpretation of a Convention which may be referred thereto by the Governing Body or in accordance with the terms of the Convention. Any applicable judgment or advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice shall be binding upon any tribunal established in virtue of this paragraph. Any award made by such a tribunal shall be circulated to the Members of the Organisation and any observations which they may make thereon shall be brought before the Conference.

ARTICLE 38.

1. The International Labour Organisation may convene such regional conferences and establish such regional agencies as may be desirable to promote the aims and purposes of the Organisation.

2. The powers, functions and procedure of regional conferences shall be governed by rules drawn up by the Governing Body and submitted to the General Conference for confirmation.

ANNEX

DECLARATION CONCERNING THE AIMS AND PURPOSES OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION

The General Conference of the International Labour Organisation, meeting in its Twenty-sixth Session in Philadelphia, hereby adopts, this tenth day of May in the year nineteen hundred and forty-four, the present Declaration of the aims and purposes of the International Labour Organisation and of the principles which should inspire the policy of its Members.

I

The Conference reaffirms the fundamental principles on which the Organisation is based and, in particular, that:

- (a) Labour is not a commodity;
- (b) freedom of expression and of association are essential to sustained progress;
- (c) poverty anywhere constitutes a danger to prosperity everywhere;
- (d) the war against want requires to be carried on with unrelenting vigour within each nation, and by continuous and concerted international effort in which the representatives of workers and employers, enjoying equal status with those of Governments, join with them in free discussion and democratic decision with a view to the promotion of the common welfare.

II

Believing that experience has fully demonstrated the truth of the statement in the Constitution of the International Labour Organisation that lasting peace can be established only if it is based on social justice, the Conference affirms that:

- (a) all human beings, irrespective of race, creed or sex, have the right to pursue both their material well-being and their spiritual development in conditions of freedom and dignity, of economic security and equal opportunity;
- (b) the attainment of the conditions in which this shall be possible must constitute the central aim of national and international policy;
- (c) all national and international policies and measures, in particular those of an economic and financial character, should be judged in this light and accepted only in so far as they may be held to promote and not to hinder the achievement of this fundamental objective;

(d) it is a responsibility of the International Labour Organisation to examine and consider all international economic and financial policies and measures in the light of this fundamental objective;

(e) in discharging the tasks entrusted to it the International Labour Organisation, having considered all relevant economic and financial factors, may include in its decisions and recommendations any provisions which it considers appropriate.

III

The Conference recognizes the solemn obligation of the International Labour Organisation to further among the nations of the world programmes which will achieve:

(a) full employment and the raising of standards of living;

(b) the employment of workers in the occupations in which they can have the satisfaction of giving the fullest measure of their skill and attainments and make their greatest contribution to the common well-being;

(c) the provision, as a means to the attainment of this end and under adequate guarantees for all concerned, of facilities for training and the transfer of labour, including migration for employment and settlement;

(d) policies in regard to wages and earnings, hours and other conditions of work calculated to ensure a just share of the fruits of progress to all, and a minimum living wage to all employed and in need of such protection;

(e) the effective recognition of the right of collective bargaining, the co-operation of management and labour in the continuous improvement of productive efficiency, and the collaboration of workers and employers in the preparation and application of social and economic measures;

(f) the extension of social security measures to provide a basic income to all in need of such protection and comprehensive medical care;

(g) adequate protection for the life and health of workers in all occupations;

(h) provision for child welfare and maternity protection;

(i) the provision of adequate nutrition, housing and facilities for recreation and culture;

(j) the assurance of equality of educational and vocational opportunity.

IV

Confident that the fuller and broader utilisation of the world's productive resources necessary for the achievement of the objectives set forth in this Declaration can be secured by effective international and national action, including measures to expand production and consumption, to avoid severe economic fluctuations, to promote the economic and social advancement of the less developed regions of the world, to assure greater stability in world prices of primary products, and to promote a high and steady volume of international trade, the Conference pledges the full co-operation of the International Labour Organisation with such international bodies as may be entrusted with a share of the responsibility for this great task and for the promotion of the health, education and well-being of all peoples.

V

The Conference affirms that the principles set forth in this Declaration are fully applicable to all peoples everywhere and that, while the manner of their application must be determined with due regard to the stage of social and economic development reached by each people, their progressive application to peoples who are still dependent, as well as to those who have already achieved self-government, is a matter of concern to the whole civilized world.

ANNEX IV

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION

Article 57 of the Charter of the United Nations provides that specialized agencies established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities as defined in their basic instruments in economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related fields shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations.

The International Labour Conference, meeting in its twenty-seventh session in Paris on 3 November 1945, adopted a resolution confirming the desire of the International Labour Organization to enter into relationship with the United Nations on terms to be determined by agreement.

Therefore, the United Nations and the International Labour Organization agree as follows:

2. Representatives of the International Labour Organization shall be invited to attend meetings of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations (hereinafter called the Council) and of its commissions and committees and to participate, without vote, in the deliberations of these bodies with respect to items on their agenda in which the International Labour Organization has indicated that it has an interest.

Similarly, the Council and its commissions and the Trusteeship Council shall include on their agenda items proposed by the International Labour Organization.

ARTICLE IV.

Recommendations of the General Assembly and of the Council

1. The International Labour Organization, having regard to the obligation of the United Nations to promote the objectives set forth in Article 55 of the Charter and the function and power of the Council under Article 62 of the Charter, to make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related matters and to make recommendations concerning these matters to the specialized agencies concerned, and having regard, also to the responsibility of the United Nations, under Articles 58 and 63 of the Charter, to make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of such specialized agencies, agrees to arrange for the submission, as soon as possible, to the Governing Body, the Conference or such other organ of the International Labour Organization, as may be appropriate, of all formal recommendations which the General Assembly or the Council may make to it.

2. The International Labour Organization agrees to enter into consultation with the United Nations upon request, with respect to such recommendations, and in due course to report to the United Nations on the action taken, by the Organization or by its members, to give effect to such recommendations, or on the other results of their consideration.

3. The International Labour Organization affirms its intention of co-operating in whatever further measures may be necessary to make co-ordination of the activities of specialized agencies and those of the United Nations fully effective. In particular, it agrees to participate in, and to co-operate with, any body or bodies which the Council may establish for the purpose of facilitating such co-ordination, and to furnish such information as may be required for the carrying out of this purpose.

ARTICLE V.

Exchange of information and documents

1. Subject to such arrangements as may be necessary for the safeguarding of confidential material, the fullest and promptest exchange of information and documents shall be made between the United Nations and the International Labour Organization.

2. Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of paragraph 1:

(a) the International Labour Organization agrees to transmit to the United Nations regular reports on the activities of the International Labour Organization;

(b) the International Labour Organization agrees to comply to the fullest extent practicable with any request which the United Nations may make for the furnishing of special reports, studies or information, subject to the conditions set forth in article XV; and

(c) the Secretary-General shall, upon request, consult with the Director regarding the provision to the International Labour Organization of such information as may be of special interest to the Organization.

ARTICLE VI.

Assistance to the Security Council

ARTICLE VII.

Assistance to the Trusteeship Council

The International Labour Organization agrees to co-operate with the Trusteeship Council in the carrying out of its functions and in particular agrees that it will, to the greatest extent possible render such assistance as the Trusteeship Council may request, in regard to matters with which the Organization is concerned.

ARTICLE VIII.

2. The General Assembly authorizes the International Labour Organization to request advisory opinions of the International Court of Justice on legal questions arising within the scope of its activities other than questions concerning the mutual relationships of the Organization and the United Nations or other specialized agencies.

3. Such request may be addressed to the Court by the Conference, or by the Governing Body acting in pursuance of an authorization by the Conference.

4. When requesting the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion, the International Labour Organization shall inform the Economic and Social Council of the request.

ARTICLE X.

Headquarters and regional offices

1. The International Labour Organization, having regard to the desirability of the headquarters of specialized agencies being situated at the permanent seat of the United Nations, and to the advantages that flow from such centralization, agrees to consult the United Nations before making any decision concerning the location of its permanent headquarters.

2. Any regional or branch offices which the International Labour Organization may establish shall, so far as practicable, be closely associated with such regional or branch offices as the United Nations may establish.

ARTICLE XI.

Personnel arrangements

1. The United Nations and the International Labour Organization recognize that the eventual development of a single unified international civil service is desirable from the standpoint of effective administrative co-ordination, and, with this end in view, agree to develop common personnel standards, methods and arrangements designed to avoid serious discrepancies in terms and conditions of employment, to avoid competition in recruitment of personnel, and to facilitate interchange of personnel in order to obtain the maximum benefit from their services.

2. The United Nations and the International Labour Organization agree to co-operate to the fullest extent possible in achieving these ends and in particular they agree to:

(a) consult together concerning the establishment of an International Civil Service Commission to advise on the means by which common standards of recruitment in the secretariats of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies may be ensured;

(b) consult together concerning other matters relating to the employment of their officers and staff, including conditions of service, duration of appointments, classification, salary scales and allowances, retirement and pension rights and staff regulations and rules with a view to securing as much uniformity in these matters as shall be found practicable;

(d) co-operate in the establishment and operation of suitable machinery for the settlement of disputes arising in connection with the employment of personnel and related matters.

ARTICLE XII.

Statistical services

1. The United Nations and the International Labour Organization agree to strive for maximum co-operation, the elimination of all undesirable duplication between them, and the most efficient use of their technical personnel in their respective collection, analysis, publication and dissemination of statistical information.

They agree to combine their efforts to secure the greatest possible usefulness and utilization of statistical information and to minimize the burdens placed upon national governments and other organizations from which such information may be collected.

2. The International Labour Organization recognizes the United Nations as the central agency for the collection, analysis, publication, standardization and improvement of statistics serving the general purposes of international organizations.

3. The United Nations recognizes the International Labour Organization as the appropriate agency for the collection, analysis, publication, standardization and improvement of statistics within its special sphere, without prejudice to the right of the United Nations to concern itself with such statistics so far as they may be essential for its own purposes or for the improvement of statistics throughout the world.

4. The United Nations shall develop administrative instruments and procedures through which effective statistical co-operation may be secured between the United Nations and the agencies brought into relationship with it.

5. It is recognized as desirable that the collection of statistical information should not be duplicated by the United Nations or any of the specialized agencies whenever it is practicable for any of them to utilize information or materials which another may have available.

6. In order to build up a central collection of statistical information for general use, it is agreed that data supplied to the International Labour Organization for incorporation in its basic statistical series or special reports should, so far as practicable, be made available to the United Nations.

ARTICLE XIII.

Administrative and technical services

1. The United Nations and the International Labour Organization recognize the desirability, in the interest of administrative and technical uniformity and of the most efficient use of personnel and resources, of avoiding, whenever possible, the establishment and operation of competitive or overlapping facilities and services among the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

2. Accordingly, the United Nations and the International Labour Organization agree to consult together concerning the establishment and use of common administrative and technical services and facilities in addition to those referred to in articles XI, XII and XIV, in so far as the establishment and use of such services may from time to time be found practicable and appropriate.

2. The United Nations and the International Labour Organization agree to co-operate to the fullest extent possible in achieving these ends and, in particular, making appropriate arrangements for the inclusion of the budget of the Organization within a general budget of the United Nations. Any such arrangements which may be made shall be defined in a supplementary agreement between the two organizations.

3. In the preparation of the budget of the International Labour Organization the Organization shall consult with the United Nations.

4. The International Labour Organization agrees to transmit its proposed budget to the United Nations annually at the same time as such budget is transmitted to its members. The General Assembly shall examine the budget or proposed budget of the Organization and may make recommendations to it concerning any item or items contained therein.

5. Representatives of the International Labour Organization shall be entitled to participate, without vote, in the deliberations of the General Assembly or any committee thereof at all times when the budget of the Organization or general administrative or financial questions affecting the Organization are under consideration.

6. The United Nations may undertake the collection of contributions from those members of the International Labour Organization which are also Members of the United Nations in accordance with such arrangements as may be defined by a later agreement between the United Nations and the International Labour Organization.

7. The United Nations shall, upon its own initiative or upon the request of the International Labour Organization, arrange for studies to be undertaken concerning other financial and fiscal questions of interest to the Organization and to other specialized agencies with a view to the provision of common services and the securing of uniformity in such matters.

8. The International Labour Organization agrees to conform as far as may be practicable to standard practices and forms recommended by the United Nations.

ARTICLE XV.

Financing of special services

1. In the event of the International Labour Organization being faced with the necessity of incurring substantial extra expense as a result of any request which the United Nations may make for special reports, studies or assistance in accordance with articles V, VI or VII or with other provisions of this agreement, consultation shall take place with a view to determining the most equitable manner in which such expense shall be borne.

2. Consultation between the United Nations and the International Labour Organization shall similarly take place with a view to making such arrangements as may be found equitable for covering the costs of central administrative, technical or fiscal services or facilities or other special assistance provided by the United Nations.

This Agreement shall come into force on its approval by the General Assembly of the United Nations and the General Conference of the International Labour Organization.

II. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations

A. THE HOT SPRINGS CONFERENCE

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations was the first of the permanent United Nations organizations to be launched after the war. It fulfils the ideas of President Roosevelt, who, realizing that food is basic to human well-being and the future peace of the world, convened as early as May 1943 the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture at Hot Springs, Virginia.

The result of this Conference was clear agreement on such points as these:

The world has never had enough to eat. At least two-thirds of its people are ill-nourished; many face periodic starvation; and this in spite of the fact that two thirds of the world's people are farmers.

The modern science of nutrition proves beyond doubt that if all people could get enough of the right kinds of foods, the average level of health and well-being could be raised much higher than it is now.

The modern science of production shows how to produce enough of the right kinds of foods. To do it, farmers everywhere must have the opportunity to use modern production methods.

But production alone is not enough. Foods must be so distributed that the levels of consumption of those who do not have enough are progressively raised.

This implies an expanding world economy, in which each nation will play its own part, but all will act together. Only by acting together can nations, in the close-knit modern world, achieve peace, prosperity and rising standards of living.

B. INTERIM COMMISSION

On the recommendation of the Hot Springs Conference, the United Nations Interim Commission on Food and Agriculture was set up in July 1943 to make plans for a permanent organization which would deal not only with food and agriculture but with forestry and fisheries as well. Each of the governments which attended the Conference appointed a representative on the Interim Commission. The commission was assisted by a small international secretariat and by a number of technical committees on economics, nutrition and food management, agricultural production, forestry, fisheries, and statistics. The work of the Commission was financed by contributions advanced by member governments.

The Commission prepared a Constitution for FAO and submitted it to governments, more than twenty of which indicated their acceptance, thus fulfilling the terms of the Constitution and making the establishment of FAO possible; it also prepared a report on the suggested structure and functions of the Organization, and technical reports to serve as a working basis for the Organization's first conference.

FAO officially came into being with the signing of its Constitution on October 16, 1945. This ceremony took place at the opening meeting of the first session of the Conference, which was held in Quebec, Canada, from October 16 to November 1, 1945. Thus, the preparations begun at Hot Springs and continued for over two years at Washington came to an end, and the work of FAO began.

C. PURPOSES AND FUNCTIONS

The preamble to the Constitution of FAO tells the reason for its existence in a few words:

The Nations accepting this Constitution, being determined to promote the common welfare by furthering separate and collective action on their part for the purposes of raising levels of nutrition and standards of living of the peoples under their respective jurisdictions, securing improvements in the efficiency of the production and distribution of all food and agricultural products, bettering the condition of rural populations, and thus contributing toward an expanding world economy, hereby establish the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations . . . through which the Members will report to one another on the measures taken and the progress achieved in the fields of action set forth above.

The functions of the Organization are described in the FAO Constitution as follows:

1. The Organization shall collect, analyze, interpret and disseminate information relating to nutrition, food and agriculture.

2. The Organization shall promote and, where appropriate, shall recommend national and international action with respect to

(a) scientific, technological, social and economic research relating to nutrition, food and agriculture;

(b) the improvement of education and administration relating to nutrition, food and agriculture, and the spread of public knowledge of nutritional and agricultural science and practice;

(c) the conservation of natural resources and the adoption of improved methods of agricultural production;

(d) the improvement of the processing, marketing and distribution of food and agricultural products;

(e) the adoption of policies for the provision of adequate agricultural credit, national and international;

(f) the adoption of international policies with respect to agricultural commodity arrangements.

3. It shall also be the function of the Organization

(a) to furnish such technical assistance as governments may request;

(b) to organize, in cooperation with the governments concerned, such missions as may be needed to assist them to fulfil the obligations arising from their acceptance of the recommendations of the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture; and

(c) generally to take all necessary and appropriate action to implement the purposes of the Organization as set forth in the Preamble.

D. STRUCTURE

FAO consists of a Conference, an Executive Committee and a staff headed by a Director-General.

The Conference is composed of one representative from each member nation. Each nation has one vote in the Conference, which meets at least once each year to review the work of the Organization. The Conference determines the policy and approves the budget of the Organization.

The Executive Committee consists of from nine to fifteen members appointed by the Conference; only one member may be appointed from any member nation. The members of the Executive Committee exercise the powers delegated to them by the Conference on behalf of the whole Conference and not as representatives of their respective governments. The Committee acts for the Conference between sessions.

The Director-General of FAO, appointed by the Conference, has full power and authority to direct the work of the Organization, subject to the general supervision of the Conference and its Executive Committee. He appoints the staff of FAO and directs its work.

E. FIRST SESSION OF THE CONFERENCE

The first session of the Conference took place during a period of transition from war to peace. Many countries were concerned with the problem of readjusting their agriculture and overhauling their institutions and policies. At this session the Conference accomplished several things. First, it constructed the framework for operating FAO. It worked out rules of procedure and financial regulations, set up a budget for the first and second financial years, and worked out bases for the first year's activities. It appointed FAO's first Director-

General and an Executive Committee. In the technical fields numerous recommendations were made, out of which emerged two dominant lines of thought: (1) expansion of production and consumption, the one to be adjusted to the other in various specific ways, through international commodity arrangements and expanded trade, raising the nutrition level of vulnerable and low-consumption groups, reorientation of production and new uses of commodities; (2) recognition of the principle that agriculture and industry are interdependent and that, therefore, agricultural and industrial development must go hand in hand in the less developed countries.

An important organizational resolution approved by the Conference was one urging the closest relationship with the United Nations and the other specialized agencies established in connection therewith. Other recommendations and resolutions dealt with winding up the affairs of the International Institute of Agriculture, its Annex, the Centre International de Sylviculture, and the Comité International du Bois, transferring their libraries, archives and properties to FAO; and adopting after the first session the same procedure in the use of languages in proceedings and documentation as that decided upon by the United Nations.

F. ACTIVITIES BETWEEN FIRST AND SECOND SESSIONS

FAO activities between the first session of the Conference, which ended on November 1, 1945, and the second session, which began on September 2, 1946, may be summarized as follows:

The temporary headquarters of FAO were established in Washington. A nucleus of carefully chosen staff was appointed. To deal with the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistical and technical information, FAO set up five technical divisions consisting of Nutrition, Economics and Statistics, Agricultural Production and Research, Forestry and Forest Products, and Fisheries. A Rural Welfare Division is also to be established.

A member of the staff of FAO assumed direction of the work of the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome on August 1, 1946, and early in 1947 this became the Temporary European Regional Office of FAO. FAO plans to set up regional offices in China, India, the Middle East, and Latin America.

A detailed world survey of food production and consumption, the first of its kind, together with practicable consumption targets for the future, was drawn up to be submitted to the second session of the FAO Conference. This world survey was the essential foundation for much of FAO's future work. A survey for forestry and one for fisheries similar to that for agriculture were undertaken.

The facts of the continuing food crisis were brought to the attention of governments and peoples through a resolution passed at the first part of the first session of the General Assembly of the United Nations in London, and FAO, as the permanent Organization concerned with food, accepted the responsibility for co-ordinating activities undertaken to relieve the crisis. A special Meeting on Urgent Food Problems, attended by ministers and other responsible representatives from 22 nations, and from the principal international organizations concerned, was called by FAO in Washington on May 20, 1946, to make plans for dealing with the continuing crisis. As a result of this meeting, the Combined Food Board was replaced by a temporary International Emergency Food Council, with a beginning membership of nineteen nations, to deal with the food crisis; recommendations for national action to meet the continuing food crisis were agreed upon; and FAO was asked to draw up proposals, to be presented to its next Conference, for a long-term world program to assist in expanding both production and consumption of food.

The Economic and Social Council passed a resolution on June 21 requesting the Secretary-General to offer all possible assistance to the Director-General of the Food and Agriculture Organization in making surveys of existing and proposed inter-governmental organizations in this field and in preparing any new proposals with a view to ensuring that such proposals were in harmony with the broad pattern of United Nations policies.

A meeting of experts was held in London which laid the foundation for some of FAO's most important services, especially in statistics.

A mission was sent to Greece in May 1946 to work out long-term plans for the development of agriculture and fisheries in that country. It was composed of experts in crops, livestock, reclamation activities and agricultural economics. The mission worked in Greece through July 1946 and drew up a comprehensive plan covering immediate and long-range problems.

A draft agreement establishing relations between FAO and the United Nations was prepared in negotiations with the Economic and Social Council and later submitted to the FAO Conference.

G. SECOND SESSION OF THE CONFERENCE

The second session of the Conference, which met in Copenhagen from September 2 to 13, 1946, divided into three commissions: Commission A (Technical Questions); Commission B (Organization and Administration); and Commission C (World Food Policy). Commission A established six committees to consider matters falling under the following headings: Agriculture, Nutrition, Forestry, Fisheries, Economics and Statistics, and FAO Missions. Commission B divided its work between two committees: Constitution and Organization, and Finance. Commission C also divided up into two committees: World Food Board and 1946-47 Food Situation.

The various Committees of Commission A reviewed the technical work of FAO during the past year and laid down lines of general policy for the Organization's program during the year to come. As the session at Copenhagen was the first since the creation of FAO in October 1945 at Quebec, this phase of the work of the Conference was of special significance. Even greater interest, however, centered on long-term and short-term world food policy. This was dealt with by Commission C, which had before it a report by Sir John Boyd Orr, Director-General of FAO, embodying proposals for a World Food Board. Commission C suggested that the objective of the proposals be approved and that a Preparatory Commission be established to draw up concrete recommendations for achieving the two major objectives—namely, providing diets on a health standard for the peoples of all countries and stabilizing agricultural prices at levels fair to producers and consumers alike. This was made the subject of a formal resolution of the Conference.

The Conference designated sixteen members of FAO—Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Egypt, France, India, Netherlands, the Philippines, Poland, the United Kingdom and the United States—to be members of the Preparatory Commission, and invited three non-members of FAO—Argentina, Siam and the U.S.S.R.—to be members of the Commission. It requested the United Nations Economic and Social Council to send two representatives, one of whom would speak for the proposed International Trade Organization; the International Labour Organisation, the World Health Organization, the International Monetary Fund and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development were each asked to send one representative to the Preparatory Commission as advisors. The Commission was scheduled to meet in Washington before November 1, 1946.

On the report of Commission B, the Conference adopted resolutions and approved recommendations dealing with organizational, administrative, and financial matters, including amendments to the Constitution, Rules of Procedure, and Financial Regulations.

The Conference approved the agreement defining the relationships between the United Nations and FAO; this agreement¹ came into force on December 14, 1946, when it was approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations. The Conference granted the privilege of representation to the World Federation of Trade Unions, the International Co-operative Alliance and the International Federation of Agricultural Producers.

It admitted Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Portugal and Switzerland to the Conference, bringing the total membership in the FAO to 47.

The Conference endorsed the recommendations of the Washington Special Meeting on Urgent Food Problems for the maximum use of the year's food supplies and noted the need for continued enforcement of economy and allocation measures.

It accepted the conclusion of the FAO World Food Appraisal for 1946-47 that "despite the recent improvement in crop prospects in certain countries, there will remain during that year a serious gap between prospective export supplies and import needs of bread and other grains, as well as continuing shortages of fats, meat, sugar, and other essential foods." The Conference therefore recommended, among other measures:

1) That all countries carry out as far as practicable the Washington meeting recommendations for economizing in the use of grains;

2) That all members of the International Emergency Food Council report at least quarterly on what they are doing to implement the recommendations;

3) That consideration of urgent need be paramount in world distribution of scarce foods;

4) That more consumer goods be made available as an incentive to primary producers, particularly in the Far East and Africa;

5) That the UNRRA Geneva resolution calling for special financial aid to enable countries heretofore helped by UNRRA to continue imports of food and essential agricultural production supplies be placed on the agenda of the United Nations General Assembly; and

6) That maximum production of basic foods be encouraged during the 1947-48 season.

The Conference approved the preliminary report of the FAO Mission for Greece. It recommended that this report and the detailed report later completed be brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council and the interested international organizations.

H. FAO MISSIONS

The final report of the FAO Mission for Greece, which was published by FAO on March 14, 1947, made specific technical recommendations on long-term measures, including the following:

1) Broad development of water resources, including drainage, flood control, irrigation, and hydro-electric projects;

2) Modernization of agriculture, forestry and fisheries and extensive research and educational programs in these fields;

3) Increased agricultural production;

4) Extensive industrial development.

Before long-range development measures can be successful, the Mission states, vigorous efforts must be made to deal with immediate problems, such as

1) The current food shortage;

2) The need for outside financial aid for Greece to maintain essential imports after the withdrawal of UNRRA;

3) The need for continuing special feeding programs for children and other vulnerable groups;

4) The existing poor transportation facilities which are hindering efforts of reconstruction;

5) The necessity of checking inflation and restoring the flow of exports.

The report points out that immediate problems are aggravated by war devastation which, despite strenuous efforts by the farmers and people of Greece, has been only partly repaired.

It recommends that an initial loan of $100,000,000 for 1947-48 should be made by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development or by other public financial agencies. The loan, it recommended, should be used for the rehabilitation and development of transportation facilities, water and hydro-electric projects, farms and marketing, and private industries in accordance with a program for the development and modernization of Greek agriculture and industry.

The Mission recommended that a United Nations advisory mission for Greece be established to give technical aid and advice to the Greek Government in carrying through the proposed program and expending the external loans involved. This mission would be composed of representatives of FAO, the Economic and Social Council, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the International Monetary Fund, and other co-operating specialized international organizations.

At the request of the Polish Government, an FAO Mission similar in scope to the Mission to Greece was sent to Poland. Experts comprising the Mission met in Amsterdam on June 28 en route to Poland for a two-month survey of that country's major agricultural problems.

Other FAO missions are contemplated. FAO has been requested by the Governments of Siam, Hungary and Venezuela to send missions to their countries.

I. INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY FOOD COUNCIL

The International Emergency Food Council, established as a result of the Special Meeting on Urgent Food Problems, had held four meetings up to June 30, 1947. Its Secretary-General, nominated by FAO, is D. A. Fitzgerald; FAO furnishes a portion of the staff for the temporary organization, and the Directors-General of UNRRA and of FAO sit on its Central Committee.

Membership of the Council totals 34 countries and two international organizations: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, Egypt, Finland, France, Greece, Hungary, India, Ireland, Italy, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Philippines, Siam, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom, United States, FAO and UNRRA. Only two countries, the U.S.S.R. and the Argentine, with significant interests in the international trade of food and auxiliary materials have not as yet accepted the obligations of membership.

The IEFEC recommends allocations for the international distribution of export-import supplies of food. Through export control, the nations which have supplies of scarce foods for shipment direct them to the various destinations in the volumes recommended. By import controls, the nations needing scarce foods see to it that they bring in from each export source no more than the amounts recommended. Thus the distribution of the scarce and essential foods is carried on in a worldwide pattern that has been agreed to by the nations as equitable and efficient.

Although the Council can only recommend action by member nations, IEFEC reports that exports and imports of commodities under the purview of the Council are controlled by governmental regulations, and these regulations have been so exercised as to direct the flow of exports and imports in accordance with the agreements reached in the Council's commodity committees and accepted by members.

Member governments have reported the actions they have taken with respect to the recommendations made by the Meeting on Urgent Food Problems in May 1946.

Commodities at present under allocation because of short supply are: beans and peas, cereals, cocoa and spices, dairy products, fats, oils and feeds, fertilizers, fishery products, fruits and vegetables, meat and meat products, rice, seeds, and sugar. Twelve commodity committees have been set up to deal with these products.

J. PREPARATORY COMMISSION ON WORLD FOOD PROPOSALS

The Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals met in Washington, D. C., from October 28, 1946, to January 24, 1947. The Commission made recommendations on:

(1) development of agricultural and nutritional programs to provide for a rapid increase in the world's food production and a better distribution of the supply to those in need;

(2) industrialization and general economic development in relation to purchasing power for food and to the employment of labor surplus in agriculture;

(3) stabilization of agricultural prices and means of expanding international trade in agricultural products by international commodity arrangements, together with suggestions as to the type of commodity arrangement that might be applicable in each case.

The Commission stressed the need for regular international consultation among governments and the co-ordination of national programs and international commodity programs to maintain a balance not only between production and nutrition but also between commodity and commodity. To this end it recommended that the FAO Conference, beginning at its third session, conduct an "annual review" at which national production and nutritional programs would be reviewed and the activities of all agricultural commodity councils and study groups examined. In view of the need for consultation, review, and action between annual reviews, the Commission suggested the establishment by the Conference of a World Food Council or Council of FAO, consisting of eighteen representatives of members of FAO. The Council would stimulate and assist in working out commodity arrangements, in which both the producer and consumer nations would participate, designed to stabilize agricultural prices in the international market and assure the creation of famine and emergency reserves.

The Commission noted the resolution of the London Session of the Preparatory Committee for an International Conference on Trade and Employment calling for the establishment of an Interim Co-ordinating Committee for International Commodity Arrangements. It therefore suggested that, pending the establishment of the proposed International Trade Organization, the United Nations create such a committee to keep informed of and facilitate inter-governmental consultation or action with respect to commodity arrangements. The Economie and Social Council, on March 28, 1947, accepted this suggestion and requested the Secretary-General of the United Nations to appoint a committee consisting of the Chairman, representing the Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment; a person nominated by FAO, to be concerned in particular with agricultural primary commodities; and a person to be concerned in particular with non-agricultural primary commodities. This committee was scheduled to meet in Geneva in July 1947.

The Preparatory Commission concluded that the closest co-operation of all the specialized agencies was necessary to develop production and stabilize prices.

K. FAO ACTIVITIES IN 1947

Activities of FAO to the end of June 1947 included a number of conferences, Executive Committee sessions, and meetings of FAO National Committees and technical committees.

The FAO Executive Committee met in Rome from March 3 to 6, 1947, to consider, among other questions, the report of the Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals. In consultation with delegates of European National FAO Committees which were meeting at the Temporary European Office of the FAO at the Institute of Agriculture in Rome the Executive Committee approved an agreement between FAO and UNRRA. As a result of this agreement, FAO has taken over a number of technical and advisory services initiated by UNRRA to increase food production in war devastated areas. The European countries concerned are: Austria, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Italy, Poland and Yugoslavia. Certain UNRRA personnel have also been taken over and UNRRA has made available to FAO $600,000 to carry on this work. The Executive Committee and the delegates of the FAO National Committees also discussed the organization and work of the Temporary European Office of FAO, and food and agricultural problems calling for joint action of European countries.

On March 6, 1947, members of the staff of FAO met in Rome with experts from European governments to consider what items should be included in a 1950 World Census of Agriculture. Other regional meetings will be held in Latin America, the Middle East and the Far East before the census actually takes place. Countries are urged to collect data for the census soon after their harvest seasons. In the northern hemisphere the year for which information will be gathered will be the calendar year 1949; in the southern hemisphere, from July 1, 1949, to June 30, 1950.

The Second Conference on Forestry Statistics convened in Rome on March 31.

A Sub-Committee on Animal Health met in Washington on March 31 to consider world problems in this field.

The ad hoc Salt Fish Working Party met in Washington, D. C., from April 21 to 25 to advise the Fisheries Division of FAO regarding comprehensive investigation and analysis of the salted fish situation with a view to supplying governments with information of use when considering the desirability of a commodity agreement.

An International Timber Conference was held in Mariánské Lázně (near Prague), Czechoslovakia, from April 28 to May 10, 1947, to consider lumber requirements for reconstruction in Europe and nearby Mediterranean countries as well as long-range programs for forest rehabilitation and the use of forest products. Representatives of 34 countries attended the Conference, as well as representatives of the Allied Control Council for Germany, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Emergency Economic Committee for Europe, the European Coal Organization and the World Federation of Trade Unions. The Conference worked out estimates of the quantities of lumber needed by various European countries for reconstruction and essential new building. To meet these needs, it estimated the supplies of wood obtainable from forests of European countries and ascertained the portion of European lumber requirements to be met by other parts of the world. The Conference also considered long-term problems such as the improvement of standards of housing in Europe, future forest policy, industrial policy and the development of new timber resources through opening of new forest regions in various parts of the world. FAO plans to convene similar international conferences in the Far East and in South America to lay the groundwork for a World Timber Conference scheduled for 1948.

The Rice Study Group met in India in May 1947. It investigated the technical problems relating to expansion of production, and those dealing with economic problems, such as improvement of rice marketing, stabilization of prices, establishment of reserves and co-ordination of national policies relating to production, distribution and consumption. The Study Group has prepared a report which will be submitted to the interested member governments and will form the basis for an international rice conference to be held later.

A Sub-Committee on Plant and Animal Stocks met in Washington from May 26 to 30 to discuss plans for a world catalog of all types of plants and animals of importance in agricultural production.

Experts from ten European countries met on June 23 at a Fisheries Conference in Rome to consider means of widening the distribution of fish in Europe.

Acting upon a resolution adopted on May 28 by the IEFC, FAO invited 52 nations and three international organizations to a Special Cereals Conference to be convened in Paris on July 9. The purpose of the Conference was to acquaint all nations with the fact that world grain stocks and production seemed likely to fall further short of world grain needs in 1947-48 than in 1946-47 and to formulate recommendations to ensure the best possible use of all available grain supplies.

L. THIRD SESSION OF THE CONFERENCE

The Executive Committee of FAO met in Washington in June to prepare the agenda for the third session of the FAO Conference, which is scheduled to convene in Geneva in August 1947. The Conference will consider the report of the Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals. As recommended in this report, the Conference will hold the first annual review of the world situation and outlook for food, agriculture, forestry, and fisheries, including national nutrition and food production programs, and it will consider the creation of a World Food Council. The Conference will have before it constitutional amendments which, if approved, will change the structure of the Executive Committee, as they provide that its members shall hereafter represent governments rather than the whole Conference as at present.

M. BUDGET

The first annual Conference held in Quebec in October 1945 approved the budget of the Organization for the first financial period.

This budget covered the period from October 16, 1945, to June 30, 1946, and amounted to $1,954,696, the details of which were:

It likewise had before it a draft Constitution prepared by the French Government and a number of proposals put forward by other governments and by various bodies and organizations.

After consideration of these drafts and proposals, the Conference drew up a Constitution establishing an Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and an Instrument establishing a Preparatory Educational, Scientific and Cultural Commission to function until UNESCO came into being.

The Conference also adopted the following resolution:

The seat of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization shall be in Paris.

This Resolution shall not in any way affect the right of the General Conference to take decisions in regard to this matter by a two-thirds majority.

The Constitution of UNESCO came into force on November 4, 1946, when the instruments of acceptance of twenty of its signatories had been deposited with the Government of the United Kingdom.

B. PURPOSES AND FUNCTIONS

As set out in Article I of its Constitution, the purpose of UNESCO is to contribute to peace and security by promoting collaboration among the nations through education, science and culture in order to further universal respect for justice, for the rule of law and for the human rights and fundamental freedoms which are affirmed for the peoples of the world, without distinction of race, sex, language or religion, by the Charter of the United Nations.

To realize this purpose UNESCO (a) collaborates in the work of advancing the mutual knowledge and understanding of peoples through all means of mass communication, (b) gives fresh impulse to popular education and to the spread of culture and (c) maintains, increases and diffuses knowledge.

C. STRUCTURE

The organs of UNESCO are a General Conference, an Executive Board and a Secretariat.

The General Conference consists of representatives of the States members of the Organization. It determines the policies and the main lines of work of the Organization. It may summon international conferences on education, the sciences and humanities and the dissemination of knowledge. It meets annually.

The Executive Board consists of eighteen members elected by the General Conference.

Under the authority of the General Conference the Board is responsible for the execution of the program adopted by the Conference. It meets in regular session at least twice a year.

The Secretariat consists of a Director-General and such staff as may be required. The Director-General is nominated by the Executive Board and is appointed by the General Conference for a period of six years as the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

D. THE PREPARATORY COMMISSION

Pending the coming into force of the UNESCO Constitution, a Preparatory Commission was established for the purpose of making arrangements for the first session of the General Conference, preparing its provisional agenda and the necessary documents and recommendations relating to all matters on the agenda, making studies and preparing recommendations concerning the program and the budget of the Organization and providing without delay for immediate action on urgent needs of educational, scientific and cultural reconstruction in devastated countries.

The Commission consisted of one representative of each of the governments signatory to the Instrument establishing it. This Instrument provided for the appointment of an Executive Secretary and such international staff as might be required. For working purposes, the Secretariat was organized temporarily into the following principal sections:

- (1) Education
- (2) Mass Communication
- (3) Libraries and Museums
- (4) Natural Sciences

Its seat continued to be in London until the middle of September 1946, when it was transferred to Paris, the official seat of UNESCO. The Preparatory Commission ceased to exist when the Director General of UNESCO assumed office.

E. FIRST SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

Convened on September 13, 1946, by the late Miss Ellen Wilkinson, Chairman of the Preparatory Commission, the first session of the General Conference of UNESCO opened in Paris on November 19, 1946. It was attended by some 500 delegates, consultants and observers, representing 48 States.

Delegations were present from the following 30 States which had accepted the Constitution of UNESCO at the time of the General Conference's first session:¹

Australia	Lebanon
Belgium	Mexico
Bolivia	Netherlands
Brazil	Norway
Canada	New Zealand
China	Peru
Czechoslovakia	Philippine Republic
Denmark	Poland
Dominican Republic	Saudi Arabia
Egypt	Syria
Ecuador	Turkey
France	United Kingdom
Greece	United States
Haiti	Union of South Africa
India	Venezuela

The following States which had signed the Final Act of the London Conference on November 16, 1946, but which had not yet accepted the Constitution of UNESCO, sent delegates who participated in the Conference without voting rights:

Argentina	Luxembourg
Chile	Nicaragua
Colombia	Panama
Cuba	Salvador
Guatemala	Uruguay
Iran	Yugoslavia
Iraq

It had further been decided to invite to the Conference observers from Members of the United Nations which had not participated in the London Conference; of these States, Costa Rica and Paraguay sent observers.

During the course of the Conference, Iceland, Sweden and Switzerland, which were not Members of the United Nations at that time, asked to send observers, and a favorable reply was given by the Conference to this request.

In addition to representatives from the United Nations and other specialized agencies, the Conference was attended by observers from a dozen inter-governmental international organizations whose interests were related to those of UNESCO, and an opportunity was offered to some 70 non-governmental international organizations to follow the Conference in an unofficial capacity.

Thus the first session of the General Conference of UNESCO was fully representative of all of the forces which in the world of today believe that a major contribution towards the maintenance of peace and the development of international understanding can be made by the furthering of international co-operation and exchanges in the field of education, science and culture.

The first session of the General Conference lasted three weeks. Its agenda included many important items, such as the election of the Executive Board of eighteen members provided for by the Constitution, the appointment of the Director-General and the adoption of various administrative and financial regulations.

But by far the main task of the Conference was to provide the Organization with a program adapted to the general purposes defined in its Constitution and with a budget enabling it to develop its activities on the scale required.

Concerning the latter, a decision was made to provide UNESCO during its first year of existence with a budget somewhat smaller than that proposed by the Preparatory Commission. The final figure adopted by the representatives of the 30 member States amounted to $6,950,000, including an amount of $950,000 covering the expenses of the Preparatory Commission.

In addition, it was decided to set up a Revolving Fund of $3,000,000. By a later decision of the Executive Board, it was agreed that only $1,000,000 of this Revolving Fund would be collected in 1947.

As to the program of the Organization, the General Conference endorsed to a large extent, although modifying in some cases, the proposals submitted to it by the Preparatory Commission, whose preliminary studies had covered the period between November 1945 and November 1946.

Due, however, to the limited time at its disposal and to the magnitude of the field to be covered, it was not possible for the General Conference to crystallize in all details the projects to be undertaken in 1947, nor to relate properly the plans proposed as to the financial resources granted to the Organization.

As a result it was necessary for the Executive Board to reconsider in great detail the decisions of the General Conference and to accept responsibility for drawing up the final plan of action.

F. UNESCO PROGRAM FOR 1947

The program of UNESCO, as finally adopted by its Executive Board in its second session, breaks down into two main groups of activities:

(a) Four large-scale projects of a comprehensive nature.

(b) Specialized activities within the fields of education, science and culture.

1. UNESCO-WIDE PROJECTS

Four large-scale projects of a comprehensive nature are being undertaken by UNESCO in 1947:

a. Reconstruction and Rehabilitation of Educational, Scientific and Cultural Life in Countries Devastated by War

In co-operation with other agencies and interested organizations, UNESCO is promoting a world-wide campaign for aid in educational, scientific and cultural reconstruction and rehabilitation. The purpose of the campaign is the collection of contributions in money, materials and services for distribution in the devastated areas. At the same time UNESCO is making a world-wide survey of existing needs.

UNESCO has requested information of requirements in sixteen devastated countries, and has circularized potential donor countries asking them for information as to available assistance. It has received large-scale contributions for this purpose from co-ordinating bodies, such as the American Commission for International Educational Reconstruction (CIER). It is expected that by the end of the present year contributions will reach the approximate figure of $48,000,000 and it is estimated that by the end of June 1948, the contributions will have reached UNESCO's goal of $100,000,000.

The head of the Reconstruction and Rehabilitation project made a tour of the United States and Canada to launch this campaign and the results of that tour have already produced individual gifts of money, fellowships, offers of assistance to artists in devastated areas and offers of assistance and exchange from technical schools in these countries to technical schools in the devastated countries.

A Temporary International Council for Educational Reconstruction (TICER) has been set up by UNESCO. It consists of representatives of non-governmental organizations active in the field of educational reconstruction and rehabilitation.

Contact with the Director of the International Children's Emergency Fund has been established, in order to ensure complete co-operation and avoidance of duplication, as well as the most fruitful results in the endeavors of both the ICEF and UNESCO.

In addition to a Reconstruction Newsletter which is published monthly in English, French and Spanish, one pamphlet entitled "The Teacher and the Post-War Child," which was made possible by a gift from the Greek Government, has already been printed. There are several other pamphlets and leaflets now under preparation and it is contemplated that they will be completed by the beginning of the school year in September.

Radio and television are also being used as a means of disseminating information about educational reconstruction.

Field survey work is under way and workers are already reporting from the following countries: Czechoslovakia, Greece, Poland and Yugoslavia, as well as Italy and Austria.

The provision of scientific and technical equipment has been the subject of discussion in a special committee formed to advise UNESCO on matters of distribution. The committee consists of two representatives from donor countries, two representatives from recipient countries and an independent chairman. This committee is concerned with the distribution of gifts received and the allocation of fellowships.

By virtue of the authority granted by the General Conference, UNESCO has been able to purchase $70,000 worth of war surplus and new material, especially scientific apparatus, which has been assembled for distribution to technical schools in the devastated countries. Plans are under way for the purchase of an additional $45,000 worth of technical equipment.

UNESCO also assisted the development of a program for international understanding in Youth Service Camps held during the summer of 1947 in France, Belgium, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

b. Fundamental Education

This project, one of the most important in UNESCO's program, is approached from two angles—teaching the illiterates of the world, who number more than one-half of the population of the globe, to read and write, and simultaneously campaigning for provision of a basic minimum of education for all the peoples of the world. In view of the wide interest in this project, both among governments and private groups, one of UNESCO's initial tasks is to co-ordinate and stimulate campaigns under way, as well as to act as an international clearing house for the exchange of information on techniques, materials and experts available in this field.

The Fundamental Education Program for 1947 includes three pilot projects for the experimental application of fundamental education techniques. These projects have been undertaken with the consent, and at the invitation of the governments concerned, and will be conducted with the advice and guidance of a UNESCO consultant. Discussions are proceeding rapidly towards commencing operations of these projects in Haiti, in China, and in the Tanganyika and Nyasaland areas of British East Africa. In addition, the Hylean Amazon project, which is discussed elsewhere, includes the study of fundamental education problems in the area.

A group of experts in fundamental education was convened by UNESCO in April 1947 and has produced a series of recommendations for the guidance of the program in this field. A meeting of experts in language problems in fundamental education was held for four days at the end of June to discuss this facet of the problem.

A regional study conference, consisting of representatives of Far Eastern countries and non-self-governing territories, was scheduled to be held in Nanking from September 1 to 12.

c. Education for International Understanding

This project, which is of a continuing character, includes eight distinct, but closely correlated activities in its 1947 phase:

(i) An analysis of the methods used for developing international understanding in primary schools, secondary schools and institutes of higher education.

(ii) A seminar for teachers to discuss education for international understanding which is being held in Paris during July and August of 1947. UNESCO's member States and countries which have signed but not yet ratified UNESCO's Constitution, as well as those which have applied for membership, have designated leading educators to attend the seminar and exchange ideas on technique and teaching for international understanding.

(iii) A study of materials and techniques which are used in adult education for developing international good-will.

(iv) Assistance to international relations clubs organized for the study of world affairs.

(v) A draft model of textbook analyses with a view to encouraging governments, educational authorities and schools to improve textbooks and teaching materials as aids to increasing understanding among peoples.

(vi) A survey of the conditions under which exchange of persons contributes to mutual respect and understanding among peoples.

(vii) Development of the program for exchange of personnel on a large scale so that the formerly occupied countries may benefit from recent developments in other parts of the world. This is integrated into UNESCO's fellowship program.

(viii) Research into the possibility of setting up International Study Centres, perhaps under the auspices of UNESCO.

d. Hylean Amazon Project

This is a far-reaching program of research into the needs and possibilities of the forested Amazon area, which comprises four million square miles in the heart of the South American continent.

In April 1947 a team of UNESCO scientists left for Rio de Janeiro to undertake preliminary investigations prior to the meeting of an international commission in Belem do Para, Brazil, between August 10 and 18, to decide whether an international research institute should be established at the mouth of the Amazon River. This meeting was to be attended by representatives of Brazil, Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela, as well as Great Britain, France, the Netherlands and the United States.

The team of scientists making the preliminary investigations included a tropical botanist, an expert on tropical diseases, an anthropologist (on loan from the United Nations) and an anthropologist specializing in fundamental education.

It was contemplated that, if established, the International Institute of the Hylean Amazon might serve as a clearing house for scientific information emanating from the region and would correlate the activities of scientific expeditions exploring the area. Ultimately international research groups would attack the innumerable scientific and social problems of the Amazon. Their findings would be made available to the world so that both the Amazon area and the outside world might derive mutual benefit.

2. SPECIALIZED ACTIVITIES IN THE FIELDS OF EDUCATION, SCIENCE AND CULTURE

a. Education

Besides the Fundamental Education Program and Education for International Understanding, UNESCO is encouraging and promoting adult education programs, particularly by collecting and disseminating information on new methods and by studying techniques and the sociological background of adult education and its relation to school education. The possibility of setting up an international association for adult education is under consideration and plans are being made for an international conference of adult education experts, to be held in 1948.

In co-operation with the United Nations Statistical Commission and the statistical experts of the United Nations Secretariat, UNESCO is beginning work in the co-ordination, standardization and improvement of educational statistics. In addition to statistics, work has been begun on standardization of educational terminology. Consideration is being given to the possibility of eventually publishing an international year book containing information on educational projects and trends as well as statistics. A committee of experts in education statistics met at the end of March and a document resulting from that meeting has been published.

UNESCO member States and other inter-governmental organizations may now seek advice from UNESCO on general questions relating to the collection, interpretation and dissemination of statistical data on education.

Interested persons and organizations will be invited to submit suggestions for the drafting of an International Teachers' Charter, a project which appears to be particularly urgent in view of the present difficulties being encountered by the teaching profession throughout the world. This is one aspect of the UNESCO program to raise the status of teachers.

A special investigation of the effects of war upon children and of successful treatment of children handicapped by war is being made.

The education program is closely correlated with the programs relating to Social Sciences, Philosophy and Humanities, Libraries and Museums, and Arts and Letters.

b. Natural Sciences

Natural Sciences play a major role in the Reconstruction and Rehabilitation project, particularly in relation to scientific and technical schools, colleges, universities and research institutes in the war-devastated areas. The program for distribution of scientific and technical apparatus has been integrated into this UNESCO-wide program.

However, the major specific activity being undertaken here is the establishment of Field Science Co-operation Offices in locations remote from the world centres of science and technology. These offices are designed to facilitate contact between scientists and technologists in various parts of the world to assist in the solution of problems of scientific literature, translations and reprints and to facilitate the exchange of scientific personnel in the areas concerned. The Offices will serve as reception and distribution offices for scientific information, particularly of problems indigenous to the region. In addition to the office already established in the Hylean Amazon, two more offices are located in the Far East and the Middle East. An office will be established in south Asia in 1948.

Work is also beginning, in co-operation with international scientific organizations brought together in the International Council of Scientific Unions, on the study of scientific documentation, scientific work of international significance, scientific apparatus information, scientific cinema films, a world register of scientists and facilitation of travel of scientists throughout the world.

At the request of the United Nations, UNESCO has prepared a detailed report on the possibility of the establishment of International Scientific Laboratories and Observatories.

c. Social Sciences

One of the main projects which has been begun is a study of tensions affecting international understanding. A basic memorandum outlining the importance of this project and recommending areas for research and action has been prepared and circulated for comment to 450 social scientists in countries throughout the world, as well as to the United Nations, other specialized agencies and member governments.

Consideration is being given to the possibility of publishing a Social Science Year Book, and to the need for establishing an abstracting service in the field of Social Sciences.

In co-operation with the United Nations, UNESCO is considering the problem of housing and town planning and activities to be undertaken in the study of international law.

d. Philosophy and Humanities

A preliminary survey of the international aspects of philosophy and humanistic studies as they are related to UNESCO's objectives has been undertaken.

A preliminary enquiry is under way as to the possibility of a large-scale survey of possible "borrowings" between civilizations and as to how UNESCO's activities in the humanistic field can contribute to the maintenance of peace.

In collaboration with the United Nations, UNESCO is engaged in work on the proposed International Bill of Human Rights, and is surveying a project for the translation of the classics, in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations General Assembly¹ and the Economic and Social Council.²

e. Arts and Letters

The Arts and Letters program includes projects in the fields of literature and theatre, as well as music and the visual arts.

In the field of literature a consultant has been appointed to lead an investigation of world literary journals with a view to creating an exchange centre for all types of literary material, thus promoting greater understanding between peoples through world-wide interchange of works. Material for an anthology of works of writers who suffered under Axis occupation will be collected through international associations and the national commissions of UNESCO.

Together with an investigation of reproduction techniques in music and the visual arts, a study will be made into the extent and conditions of cultural exchange between nations with a view to making known the experience, knowledge and achievements in the cultural field of each individual country so that all nations may share and benefit. The expansion of current cultural interchange programs which would result from this exchange of knowledge and experience will be an essential contributing factor to international understanding.

In the field of the theatre, there was to be a meeting in Paris during July 1947 of experts from various countries to discuss the possible organization of an international theatre institute to promote wide interchange of theatrical productions and dramatic literature. The institute will function as an independent body supported by private or by State initiative.

The 1947 UNESCO Conference will also be presented with the outline of a plan designed to place the methods and achievements of those countries where the arts are used to full advantage in general education at the disposal of those nations where the arts are not so advantageously utilized.

f. Libraries and Museums

During 1947 the major interest has been in library reconstruction with special emphasis on the needs of public libraries, and the creation of public libraries in countries with undeveloped systems. Great progress has been made in establishing accurate information on needs and resources and in assisting inter-library exchanges and contacts. In co-operation with the reconstruction project two questionnaires have been sent out since April, and a monthly UNESCO Bulletin for Libraries has been issued, 5,000 copies being distributed in 61 countries.

In February 1947, UNESCO took over the Inter-Allied Book Centre, the liquidation of whose assets was expected to be terminated at the end of August.

² See p. 541.

The important UNESCO Book Coupon Scheme has been outlined in a document which has been circulated to member States and which was discussed at a meeting of the International Federation of Library Associations in May 1947. It is possible that the scheme may be operated experimentally in a sample area so that specific evidence of its feasibility may be available for the UNESCO General Conference.

The Libraries Program also includes studies of exchange, distribution and loan of books, improvement of bibliographical services and studies of techniques of reproduction.

A "service library" for specialists in UNESCO is being established. It includes material from the library of the Institute of Intellectual Co-operation, whose assets, by a resolution of the General Assembly, have been loaned to UNESCO.

An exhibition on public libraries is being prepared for the 1947 Conference. It will be designed as an exhibition for circulation and is one of the main activities in promotion of public libraries projected for 1948. Progress has been made in the establishment of a program for archives, and a valuable report has been received from a special consultant.

The Museums Program includes science, art and historical museums, as well as zoological gardens and nature reserves. Its principal concern this year is with a survey of the losses and needs of museums and monuments in Europe. Further, investigators have already begun to survey conditions from Greece to Poland and from Poland to Italy. In this activity UNESCO is working closely with the newly formed International Council of Museums, which is assembling detailed and current documentation on museums all over the world.

UNESCO has fallen heir to the assets of the International Museums Office and these are being incorporated into the library of UNESCO House. Consideration is being given to the continuation of the publication of Museumion which was the technical publication of this Office.

g. Mass Communication

This program is divided into three parts, one dealing with films, one with radio and one with the press. Its major interests break down into the following categories:

- (i) The free flow of information and the removal of barriers.
- (ii) Commission on Technical Needs.

- (iii) Exchange of persons and information.

In the field which pertains to the free flow of information, UNESCO has been represented and has presented its views at a number of international conferences and other meetings, such as the United Nations Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press, the International Telecommunications Union Conference and the Universal Postal Union Conference. UNESCO will continue to take an active part in any conferences devoted to this question, particularly the proposed United Nations International Conference, which is scheduled to be held in 1948.

A Commission on Technical Needs has been established to survey the needs of the war-damaged countries in the fields of press, radio and film. This year field inquiries are under way in France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Holland, Norway, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Greece, Poland, China and the Philippines. All field workers making these surveys were to have returned to UNESCO headquarters by July 15 and the reports of the entire survey were to be completed by the beginning of August. Invitations were sent to fifteen experts from various countries to meet as a commission to consider the results of this survey. The meeting was to take place in Paris from August 25 to 30 to prepare a final report for submission to the UNESCO 1947 General Conference, and, at its request, to the United Nations Sub-Commission on Freedom of Information and of the Press.

The UNESCO Fellowship Program and the exchange of information is closely related to this program. The Organization therefore is vitally interested in the work of the proposed Conference on Passport and Frontier Formalities, particularly as this will affect the free passage of persons engaged in work with mass media and the free flow of all the materials of mass media, such as films, news, periodicals, etc.

In the field of radio, UNESCO, in collaboration with the United Nations, is studying the feasibility of a worldwide radio network. Nineteen governments were invited to send experts to two meetings which were to be held during August to consider this question. The United Nations and the International Broadcasting Organization were invited to send observers to these meetings, at which it was hoped that the lines would be set for development of international co-operative ventures in the production and transmission of radio programs serving UNESCO's objectives. Work on UNESCO radio programs and a clearing house of radio information has already been begun.

In the field of films UNESCO is engaged in stimulating the production and wider international distribution of films and in the compilation of International Film Catalogs on subjects within UNESCO's field of competence. International catalogs are being compiled on the following subjects:

- Fundamental Education
- International Understanding
- Painting and Culture
- Libraries and Museums
- Agriculture
- Nutrition
- Town and Country Planning
- Health, Medicine and Surgery

Four of these catalogues will be published during 1947, with the collaboration of the United Nations and other specialized agencies concerned, through the medium of the United Nations Film Board.

Progress has been achieved in relation to the proposed convention for facilitating the international distribution of visual and auditory materials of an educational, scientific and cultural character.

In the field of press UNESCO will be particularly interested in the work of the United Nations Conference on Freedom of Information and of the Press. In addition, a service for an exchange of articles is being set up and will soon be in operation. UNESCO is in close contact with the International Organization of Journalists, at whose second congress in Prague it was represented.

Arrangements are being made for the reprinting in other countries of articles relative to UNESCO's priority projects for 1947, which have appeared in national publications.

G. SECOND SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

The second session of the General Conference of UNESCO is scheduled to convene in Mexico City in November 1947. It will have before it progress reports covering the activities of all sections of the UNESCO program, and proposed plans for 1948. The Conference is to approve the program of work and the budget of the Organization for the year 1948.

This session of the General Conference will be marked, as was the last, by a series of exhibitions constituting UNESCO Month.

H. BUDGET

During the period the Preparatory Commission was in London, the expenses of its maintenance were met by the Government of the United Kingdom on the understanding that the amount of the expenses so incurred would be deducted from the contributions of that Government to the new Organization, and that it would be open to the Commission, if circumstances so warranted, to seek contributions from other governments.

When the Commission was transferred to Paris, the financial responsibility passed to the French Government on the same terms.

Although the Preparatory Commission had recommended a budget of $7,565,000 for the first financial year of the Organization (1947), with a supplementary budget of $343,700 for educational, scientific and cultural reconstruction during this period, the budget for 1947, as adopted by the General Conference, totaled $6,000,000. In addition an amount of $950,000 was approved to cover the costs of the Preparatory Commission and the expenses incidental to the convening of the first General Conference. Since the allocation of the budget to the various projects requires adjustment and alteration as the UNESCO program develops and matures, the General Conference provided the Director-General with the necessary authority to effect transfers within the budget during the financial year 1947. The Executive Board, meeting in April 1947, approved the estimated allocation of funds shown below. As large a sum as possible was left undistributed to provide the Director-General with funds for new activities, revised estimates, or increased costs. The estimated distribution of funds for 1947 was as follows:

1947 Budget Estimates

Conferences and Meetings	$ 107,862
Personnel Services	2,479,506
Common Services	965,935
Grants and Subsidies	731,399
Expenses on Initial Recruitment.....	858,047
Preparatory Commission	1,074,641
Re-education of Ex-enemy Countries.....	50,000
Distributed Appropriation	6,267,390
Undistributed Appropriation	682,610
TOTAL APPROPRIATION	$6,950,000

The General Conference also established a revolving fund of $3,000,000, only $1,000,000 of which was to be collected in 1947.

Contributions to the budget and deposits to the revolving fund are made by members of UNESCO according to the scale adopted for the administrative budget of the United Nations, with adjustments to provide for the difference in membership of the two organizations.

ANNEX II

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION

The Governments of the States parties to this Constitution on behalf of their peoples declare, that since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed; that ignorance of each other's ways and lives has been a common cause, throughout the history of mankind, of that suspicion and mistrust between the peoples of the world through which their differences have all too often broken into war;

¹ Mr. Eisenhower is substitute for Archibald MacLeish, who resigned from the Board on May 1, 1947.

that the great and terrible war which has now ended was a war made possible by the denial of the democratic principles of the dignity, equality and mutual respect of men, and by the propagation, in their place, through ignorance and prejudice, of the doctrine of the inequality of men and races; that the wide diffusion of culture, and the education of humanity for justice and liberty and peace are indispensable to the dignity of man and constitute a sacred duty which all the nations must fulfil in a spirit of mutual assistance and concern; that a peace based exclusively upon the political and economic arrangements of governments would not be a peace which could secure the unanimous, lasting and sincere support of the peoples of the world, and that the peace must therefore be founded, if it is not to fail, upon the intellectual and moral solidarity of mankind.

for these reasons, the States parties to this Constitution, believing in full and equal opportunities for education for all, in the unrestricted pursuit of objective truth, and in the free exchange of ideas and knowledge, are agreed and determined to develop and to increase the means of communication between their peoples and to employ these means for the purposes of mutual understanding and a truer and more perfect knowledge of each other's lives;

in consequence whereof they do hereby create the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation for the purpose of advancing, through the educational and scientific and cultural relations of the peoples of the world, the objectives of international peace and of the common welfare of mankind for which the United Nations Organisation was established and which its Charter proclaims.

ARTICLE I.

Purposes and Functions

1. The purpose of the Organisation is to contribute to peace and security by promoting collaboration among the nations through education, science and culture in order to further universal respect for justice, for the rule of law and for the human rights and fundamental freedoms which are affirmed for the peoples of the world, without distinction of race, sex, language or religion, by the Charter of the United Nations.

2. To realise this purpose the Organisation will:

(a) collaborate in the work of advancing the mutual knowledge and understanding of peoples, through all means of mass communication and to that end recommend such international agreements as may be necessary to promote the free flow of ideas by word and image;

(b) give fresh impulse to popular education and to the spread of culture;

by collaborating with Members, at their request, in the development of educational activities;

by instituting collaboration among the nations to advance the ideal of equality of educational opportunity without regard to race, sex or any distinctions, economic or social; by suggesting educational methods best suited to prepare the children of the world for the responsibilities of freedom;

(c) maintain, increase and diffuse knowledge;

by assuring the conservation and protection of the world's inheritance of books, works of art and monuments of history and science, and recommending to the nations concerned the necessary international conventions;

by encouraging co-operation among the nations in all branches of intellectual activity, including the international exchange of persons active in the fields of education, science and culture and the exchange of publications, objects of artistic and scientific interest and other materials of information;

by initiating methods of international co-operation calculated to give the people of all countries access to the printed and published materials produced by any of them.

3. With a view to preserving the independence, integrity and fruitful diversity of the cultures and educational systems of the States Members of this Organisation, the Organisation is prohibited from intervening in matters which are essentially within their domestic jurisdiction.

ARTICLE II.

Membership

1. Membership of the United Nations Organisation shall carry with it the right to membership of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation.

2. Subject to the conditions of the agreement between this Organisation and the United Nations Organisation, approved pursuant to Article X of this Constitution, States not members of the United Nations Organisation may be admitted to membership of the Organisation, upon recommendation of the Executive Board, by a two-thirds majority vote of the General Conference.

3. Members of the Organisation which are suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership of the United Nations Organisation shall, upon the request of the latter, be suspended from the rights and privileges of this Organisation.

4. Members of the Organisation which are expelled from the United Nations Organisation shall automatically cease to be members of this Organisation.

ARTICLE III.

Organs

The Organisation shall include a General Conference, an Executive Board and a Secretariat.

ARTICLE IV.

The General ConferenceA. Composition

1. The General Conference shall consist of the representatives of the States Members of the Organisation. The Government of each Member State shall appoint not more than five delegates, who shall be selected after consultation with the National Commission, if established, or with educational, scientific and cultural bodies.

B. Functions

2. The General Conference shall determine the policies and the main lines of work of the Organisation. It shall take decisions on programmes drawn up by the Executive Board.

3. The General Conference shall, when it deems it desirable, summon international conferences on education, the sciences and humanities and the dissemination of knowledge.

4. The General Conference shall, in adopting proposals for submission to the Member States, distinguish between recommendations and international conventions submitted for their approval. In the former case a majority vote shall suffice; in the latter case a two-thirds majority shall be required. Each of the Member States shall submit recommendations or conventions to its competent authorities within a period of one year from the close of the session of the General Conference at which they were adopted.

5. The General Conference shall advise the United Nations Organisation on the educational, scientific and cultural aspects of matters of concern to the latter, in accordance with the terms and procedure agreed upon between the appropriate authorities of the two Organisations.

6. The General Conference shall receive and consider the reports submitted periodically by Member States as provided by Article VIII.

7. The General Conference shall elect the members of the Executive Board and, on the recommendation of the Board, shall appoint the Director-General.

C. Voting

8. Each Member State shall have one vote in the General Conference. Decisions shall be made by a simple majority except in cases in which a two-thirds majority is required by the provisions of this Constitution. A majority shall be a majority of the Members present and voting.

D. Procedure

9. The General Conference shall meet annually in ordinary session; it may meet in extraordinary session on the call of the Executive Board. At each session the location of its next session shall be designated by the General Conference and shall vary from year to year.

IV. The International Civil Aviation Organization

A. THE CHICAGO CONFERENCE

In the early months of 1944 the United States initiated a series of exploratory discussions with other governments interested in the development of international civil aviation. These discussions revealed sufficient agreement among the principal air powers to justify the expectation that "final dispositions" could be reached at an international conference. Accordingly, the United States issued invitations to 55 allied and neutral states to meet in Chicago on November 1, 1944.

Fifty-two nations accepted the invitation. The deliberations of the representatives of these nations at Chicago resulted in the adoption of a number of resolutions and recommendations constituting the Final Act of the Conference. The Final Act contained the texts of a Convention on International Civil Aviation, an International Air Services Transit (Two Freedoms) Agreement, an International Air Transport (Five Freedoms) Agreement and an Interim Agreement on International Civil Aviation.

Previously, in 1919, the Paris Convention had established the International Commission for Air Navigation, which set up standards on technical matters. In 1928 the Pan-American Convention on Air Navigation was drawn up at Havana and pledged members to observe certain principles, including that of freedom of air passage, in their dealings with one another. The Paris and Havana Conventions were no longer considered adequate to meet the present situation in the air resulting from the enormous development of flight during the war.

The International Civil Aviation Organization came into being on April 4, 1947, 30 days after the Convention on International Civil Aviation had been ratified by 26 states, as required by the Convention.

The Convention on International Civil Aviation lays down certain principles and sets up machinery "in order that international civil aviation may be developed in a safe and orderly manner and that international air transport services may be established on the basis of equality of opportunity and operated soundly and economically."

B. STRUCTURE

The governing bodies of the Organization are the Assembly and the Council.

The Assembly of ICAO is composed of delegates from member States, each State represented being entitled to one vote. Decisions are made, unless otherwise provided, by a simple majority of the member States present. The Assembly is convened by the Council and meets annually.

The Assembly determines its own rules of procedure and is responsible for the financial arrangements of the Organization, including the approval of an annual budget. It also examines and takes action in matters referred to it by the Council and may, at its discretion, refer to the Council specific matters for the consideration of the latter body. Finally, the Assembly deals with such matters as come within the sphere of action of the Organization but are not specifically assigned to the Council.

The Council is the executive body of the Organization and derives its powers and authority from the Assembly and from the Convention itself. It is composed of 21 member States, elected by the Assembly for a period of three years. In electing these States, the Assembly must give adequate representation to: (1) those member States of major importance in air transport; (2) those member States not otherwise included which make the largest contribution to the provision of facilities for international civil air navigation; and (3) those member States not otherwise included whose election will ensure that all major geographical areas of the world are represented. At the first meeting of the Assembly, held in Montreal during May 1947, 21 States were elected to the Council on the following basis: eight for group (1), seven for group (2) and six for group (3).

Among other duties, the Council is charged with providing for the establishment of subsidiary working groups to assist it in furthering ICAO's work, much of which is of a highly technical or specialized nature. Two such bodies, established by the provisional organization, have already been functioning: the Air Navigation Committee, which covers the technical aspects of international civil aviation, and the Air Transport Committee, which covers its economic and statistical aspects. The Air Navigation Committee assigns its technical work to the following divisions: Accident Investigation; Aerodromes, Air Routes and Ground Aids; Aeronautical Maps and Charts; Airworthiness; Communications; Meteorological; Operations; Personnel Licensing; Rules of the Air and Air Traffic Control; Search and Rescue. The Air Transport Committee is assisted by the Division on the Facilitation of Air Transport. The first Assembly of ICAO decided to continue these Committees in their present form for the time being, and recommended that three new Committees be established: on International Air Law, on the Convention on International Civil Aviation and on Joint Support of Air Navigation Services.

The Council supervises and co-ordinates the work of its Committees, receives and considers their reports, transmits to each member State these reports together with the findings of the Council, and makes recommendations, with respect to technical matters, to the member States of the Organization individually or collectively.

The Council elects the President of the Council and appoints the Secretary General of ICAO. The President of the Council convenes and presides at meetings of the Council and acts as the Council's permanent representative. The Secretary General is the chief executive and administrative officer of the Organization. He is responsible to the Council for carrying out duties assigned to him by that body. He selects and appoints the staff of the Secretariat, whose activities he supervises and directs.

C. THE PROVISIONAL ORGANIZATION

The Interim Agreement provided that a Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization be established, with headquarters in Canada, to operate until the coming into force of the permanent Organization. PICAQ came into being on June 6, 1945, when 26 states had ratified the Interim Agreement.

The provisional organization was governed by an Interim Assembly and an Interim Council. The structure and functions of these organs correspond to those of the Assembly and Council of ICAO.

A Canadian Preparatory Committee was formed in June 1945 to make all necessary arrangements for the first session of PICAQ. The Committee selected Montreal, because of its accessibility by air transport, as the most suitable Canadian city for the site of the Organization. It set August 15, 1945, as the date for the opening of the first session of the Interim Council.

The Interim Council, which remained in substantially continuous session from August 15, 1945, to April 2, 1947, in turn arranged for the calling of the first session of the Interim Assembly in Montreal, beginning May 21, 1946.

The Interim Assembly was in session until June 7, 1946. It was attended by representatives of the Governments of 44 member States of PICAQ. In addition, observers from ten non-member States and from eight international organizations attended the first session of the Interim Assembly.

The Interim Assembly adopted a total of 53 resolutions. In addition to administrative and budgetary questions, it dealt with a number of substantive matters such as development of a multilateral agreement on commercial rights in international civil air transport; facilitation of international air transport; draft conventions on private international air law; problems of international air mail; statistical reporting forms; PICAQ recommendations for standards, practices and procedures; unification of numbering and systems of dimensioning; convention on recordation of titles to aircraft and aircraft mortgages; amendments to the Warsaw convention.

In accordance with the terms of the Convention on International Civil Aviation, the ICAO Interim Assembly chose Montreal, Canada, as the permanent site of ICAO's headquarters.

The Interim Assembly authorized the Interim Council to enter into negotiations with the United Nations with a view to concluding an agreement defining the relationship between the two organizations. Accordingly, an agreement between the United Nations and ICAO was drawn up by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations and a negotiating delegation of PICAQ. On October 3, 1946, the agreement was recommended by the Economic and Social Council to the General Assembly of the United Nations for approval. The General Assembly, on December 14, approved the agreement with ICAO provided that "that Organization complies with any decision of the General Assembly regarding Franco Spain." In its resolution condemning the Franco regime, the General Assembly had recommended, among other matters, "that the Franco Government of Spain be debarred from membership in international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations." The agreement, as approved by the General Assembly, was recommended for approval by the Interim Council to the first session of the ICAO Assembly when the permanent Organization came into being.

During its 20 months of existence, PICAQ brought about concerted action by the nations of the world in the organization and maintenance of facilities and services necessary for international air transport. Patterns for meteorological services, traffic control, communications, radio beacons, and the other facilities required for safe international flight were evolved through the co-operative action of PICAQ and its member States.

An example of the assistance rendered by PICAQ is the provision of air navigation facilities in the North Atlantic region. A North Atlantic regional air navigation meeting, held in Dublin from March 4 to 27, 1946, had recommended that a network of ocean weather stations be set up as an aid to safe and economic air operations over the North Atlantic. This meeting was followed by a conference of delegates from all the North Atlantic States held in London from September 17 to 25, 1946. The conference resulted in the conclusion of an agreement for the establishment of thirteen ocean weather stations at the positions recommended by the Meteorological Committee of the North Atlantic Regional Air Navigation Meeting. According to this agreement, these stations are to be maintained as follows: United States, 7; United Kingdom, 2; United States and Canada, jointly, 1; France, 1; Belgium and the Netherlands, jointly, 1; Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom, jointly, 1. The Governments of Ireland and Portugal will make annual monetary contributions towards the support of the stations. Another major aid to trans-oceanic flying established by the joint effort of member States is a Loran (long range navigation aid) station located at Vik, Iceland. Iceland signed the agreement to operate this station on May 14, 1947, and agreed to co-operate in financing the operations with five other States—Canada, France, Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States—which had previously signed the agreement. The agreement establishing this project, by PICAQ technical committees, was concluded after the permanent Organization came into being.

¹⁰⁰In addition to the regional air navigation meeting in the North Atlantic, the following regional meetings have been held:

Region	Location	Date
European-Mediterranean	Paris	April 24—May 15, 1946
Caribbean	Washington, D.C.	August 26—September 13, 1946
Middle East	Cairo	October 1-18, 1946
South Pacific	Melbourne	February 4-22, 1947
South American	Lima	June 17, 1947
South Atlantic	Rio de Janeiro	July 15, 1947

As a result of these meetings, the Organization undertook the compilation of regional route manuals, and recommended measures to correct deficiencies in air navigation facilities and services. Two further general regional air navigation meetings are projected for 1948: one for South East Asia, to be held in India, and one for the North Pacific, to be held in China.

Other regional meetings of a more limited character, such as the special European-Mediterranean meeting on air traffic control which convened in Paris on April 15, 1947, have been held to complete the work of main regional meetings or for other special purposes.

Three regional offices have been opened: the European-Mediterranean in Paris on August 12, 1946; the North Atlantic in Dublin on January 1, 1947; and the Middle East in Cairo on January 20, 1947. A temporary mission to the South Pacific is maintained at present at Melbourne, Australia.

PICAO began work on a plan for the simplification and standardization of customs, immigration, public health and other formalities which slow up international air traffic at border crossing points. It has sponsored international co-operation in the exchange of information on development and research work. It has compiled economic, statistical and legal information on air transport, and initiated studies of international air law.

The International Civil Aviation Organization is continuing the work of the provisional organization to bring about the peaceful and orderly development of world aviation.

D. FIRST SESSION OF THE ASSEMBLY

The first session of the ICAO Assembly met in Montreal, Canada, from May 6 to 27, 1947. It was attended by representatives of 36 of ICAO's contracting States, eleven non-contracting States, and seven international organizations.

The Assembly divided itself into six commissions to deal with the following questions: Constitutional and General Policy; Technical; Economic; Legal; Administrative and Financial; Financial and Technical Aid Through ICAO. These commissions, upon reaching agreements, submitted resolutions and recommendations to the Assembly for final decision.

Plans for a working agreement between ICAO and the United Nations occupied the first week of the Assembly. It approved the agreement¹ on May 13. In order to meet requirements established by the United Nations for admission as a specialized agency, the Assembly voted, by an amendment to the ICAO Convention, to expel Franco Spain from membership in the Organization.

The Assembly elected 21 nations to membership on the ICAO Council, which serves as the executive body of the Organization. The Council met immediately and elected Dr. Edward Warner, of the United States, as President of the Council and Dr. Albert Roper, of France, as Secretary General of ICAO. These officials had been serving in a similar capacity during the Organization's interim period.

The Assembly decided to broaden ICAO's primary function of encouraging world aviation agreement by permitting it to serve as arbiter of aviation disputes between member nations, providing all parties to a dispute requested arbitration. The Council was authorized to render an advisory report in such disputes, or, if the parties themselves agreed in advance to accept the Council's verdict, it could render a binding decision.

Pointing out that "increased attention to aircraft design features might make it possible to bring a stop to the present ever-rising runway requirements," the Assembly directed the Council, in consultation with the International Air Transport Association, to "study and report upon the trend of aircraft design and the relationship between airline operation and aerodrome design with the object of curbing the increasing cost of runway construction."

ICAO, it was decided, would use the metric measurement system in its own publications, except for distances, which would be in nautical miles, and speed, which would be expressed in knots. Further development of a standardized measurement system was referred to the Council for action.

Member States discussed a draft multilateral agreement by the Council on commercial rights in the air and decided to continue its work at a meeting to be convened in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on October 20, 1947.

International ownership and operation of major trunk airlines was discussed by the Assembly, and member nations were invited to submit plans or comments on the subject to the

Council for study and consideration at the next Assembly.

The Assembly approved the work of the Commission on Legal Questions, which drafted an international agreement governing property rights in aircraft. The matter of liens and mortgages against aircraft crossing international borders has been a difficult legal problem for years.

E. BUDGET

The general policy governing the apportionment of the expenses of ICAO has as its objective the equitable distribution of these expenses among the member States. The basic principle of apportionment is that of the relative capacity to pay of the member States, a principle that has been generally accepted for international organizations since its adoption by the League of Nations in 1925. Consideration is given to the relative interest of member States in international civil aviation. War damage suffered by member States is also a factor determining the scale of contributions.

The principle that contributions should in no case fall below a set minimum and in no case exceed a maximum percentage of the total budget is followed. Capacity to pay, applied without consideration for other factors, would result in exceedingly small assessments for a number of the States with relatively small national income. It seemed desirable to set a minimum into which category such States could be gathered and a maximum was fixed to remove the possibility of any State's assuming a disproportionate share of the expenses, tending thus to establish a dominant position in the Organization, with a diminution of the interest of the other States.

A unit system of expressing each State's contribution was adopted in preference to the percentage system so as to conveniently assess member States, with particular reference to those entering the Organization after the preparation of the budget. The budget of the Organization may be increased by the Council to the extent of the contributions of such new States when received.

Finally, the various delegations attending the Assembly meeting were asked to agree on the place in the scale which had been allocated to them. This was considered desirable as States would be more likely to meet their contributions promptly if they were satisfied that their place in the scale was such that it compared favorably with the position of other States of like status and that their position in the ICAO scale was comparable to that in the scales of other international organizations.

The budget for the 1946-47 period, as approved by the Interim Assembly of PICAQ, amounted to $1,960,000.

The first session of the Assembly of ICAO approved a budget in the amount of $2,600,000 for the fiscal period 1947-48. The largest items in the budget were $1,485,000 for salaries, $420,000 for overhead expenses, and $201,000 for conferences. The total budget was divided into 291 units, each unit representing $8,934.

Following is a summary of the budget, together with the scale of contributions of member States:

ANNEX II.

CONVENTION ON INTERNATIONAL CIVIL AVIATION*Preamble*

WHEREAS the future development of international civil aviation can greatly help to create and preserve friendship and understanding among the nations and peoples of the world, yet its abuse can become a threat to the general security; and

WHEREAS it is desirable to avoid friction and to promote that cooperation between nations and peoples upon which the peace of the world depends;

THEREFORE, the undersigned Governments having agreed on certain principles and arrangements in order that international civil aviation may be developed in a safe and orderly manner and that international air transport services may be established on the basis of equality of opportunity and operated soundly and economically;

Have accordingly concluded this Convention to that end.

PART I—AIR NAVIGATION

CHAPTER I

General Principles and Application of the Convention

Article 1

[Sovereignty]

The contracting States recognize that every State has complete and exclusive sovereignty over the air-space above its territory.

Article 2

[Territory]

For the purposes of this Convention the territory of a State shall be deemed to be the land areas and territorial waters adjacent thereto under the sovereignty, suzerainty, protection or mandate of such State.

Article 3

[Civil and state aircraft]

(a) This Convention shall be applicable only to civil aircraft, and shall not be applicable to state aircraft.

(b) Aircraft used in military, customs and police services shall be deemed to be state aircraft.

(c) No state aircraft of a contracting State shall fly over the territory of another State or land thereon without authorization by special agreement or otherwise, and in accordance with the terms thereof.

(d) The contracting States undertake, when issuing regulations for their state aircraft, that they will have due regard for the safety of navigation of civil aircraft.

Article 4

[Misuse of civil aviation]

Each contracting State agrees not to use civil aviation for any purpose inconsistent with the aims of this Convention.

CHAPTER II

Flight Over Territory of Contracting States

Article 5

[Right of non-scheduled flight]

Each contracting State agrees that all aircraft of the other contracting States, being aircraft not engaged in scheduled international air services shall have the right, subject to the observance of the terms of this Convention, to make flights into or in transit non-stop across its territory and to make stops for non-traffic purposes without the necessity of obtaining prior permission, and subject to the right of the State flown over to require landing. Each contracting State nevertheless reserves the right, for reasons of safety of flight, to require aircraft desiring to proceed over regions which are inaccessible or without adequate air navigation facilities to follow prescribed routes, or to obtain special permission for such flights.

Such aircraft, if engaged in the carriage of passengers, cargo, or mail for remuneration or hire on other than scheduled international air services, shall also, subject to the provisions of Article 7, have the privilege of taking on or discharging passengers, cargo, or mail, subject to the right of any State where such embarkation or discharge takes place to impose such regulations, conditions or limitations as it may consider desirable.

Article 6

[Scheduled air services]

No scheduled international air service may be operated over or into the territory of a contracting State, except with the special permission or other authorization of that State, and in accordance with the terms of such permission or authorization.

Article 7

[Cabotage]

Each contracting State shall have the right to refuse permission to the aircraft of other contracting States to take on in its territory passengers, mail and cargo carried for remuneration or hire and destined for another point within its territory. Each contracting State undertakes not to enter into any arrangements which specifically grant any such privilege on an exclusive basis to any other State or an airline of any other State, and not to obtain any such exclusive privilege from any other State.

Article 8

[Pilotless aircraft]

No aircraft capable of being flown without a pilot shall be flown without a pilot over the territory of a contracting State without special authorization by that State and in accordance with the terms of such authorization. Each contracting State undertakes to insure that the flight of such aircraft without a pilot in regions open to civil aircraft shall be so controlled as to obviate danger to civil aircraft.

Article 9

[Prohibited areas]

(a) Each contracting State may, for reasons of military necessity or public safety, restrict or prohibit uniformly the aircraft of other States from flying over certain areas of its territory, provided that no distinction in this respect is made between the aircraft of the State whose territory is involved, engaged in international scheduled airline services, and the aircraft of the other contracting States likewise engaged. Such prohibited areas shall be of reasonable extent and location so as not to interfere unnecessarily with air navigation. Descriptions of such prohibited areas in the territory of a contracting State, as well as any subsequent alterations therein, shall be communicated as soon as possible to the other contracting States and to the International Civil Aviation Organization.

(b) Each contracting State reserves also the right, in exceptional circumstances or during a period of emergency, or in the interest of public safety, and with immediate effect, temporarily to restrict or prohibit flying over the whole or any part of its territory, on condition that such restriction or prohibition shall be applicable without distinction of nationality to aircraft of all other States.

(c) Each contracting State, under such regulations as it may prescribe, may require any aircraft entering the areas contemplated in subparagraphs (a) or (b) above to effect a landing as soon as practicable thereafter at some designated airport within its territory.

Article 10

[Landing at customs airport]

Except in a case where, under the terms of this Convention or a special authorization, aircraft are permitted to cross the territory of a contracting State without landing, every aircraft which enters the territory of a contracting State shall, if the regulations of that State so require, land at an airport designated by that State for the purpose of customs and other examination. On departure from the territory of a contracting State, such aircraft shall depart from a similarly designated customs airport. Particulars of all designated customs airports shall be published by the State and transmitted to the International Civil Aviation Organization established under Part II of this Convention for communication to all other contracting States.

Article 11

[Applicability of air regulations]

Subject to the provisions of this Convention, the laws and regulations of a contracting State relating to the admission to or departure from its territory of aircraft engaged in international air navigation, or to the operation and navigation of such aircraft while within its territory, shall be applied to the aircraft of all contracting States without distinction as to nationality, and shall be complied with by such aircraft upon entering or departing from or while within the territory of that State.

Article 12

[Rules of the air]

Each contracting State undertakes to adopt measures to insure that every aircraft flying over or maneuvering within its territory and that every aircraft carrying its nationality mark, wherever such aircraft may be, shall comply with the rules and regulations relating to the flight and maneuver of aircraft there in force. Each contracting State undertakes to keep its own regulations in these respects uniform, to the greatest possible extent, with those established from time to time under this Convention. Over the high seas, the rules in force shall be those established under this Convention. Each contracting State undertakes to insure the prosecution of all persons violating the regulations applicable.

Article 13

[Entry and clearance regulations]

The laws and regulations of a contracting State as to the admission to or departure from its territory of passengers, crew or cargo of aircraft, such as regulations relating to entry, clearance, immigration, passports, customs, and quarantine shall be complied with by or on behalf of such passengers, crew or cargo upon entrance into or departure from, or while within the territory of that State.

Article 14

[Prevention of spread of disease]

Each contracting State agrees to take effective measures to prevent the spread by means of air navigation of cholera, typhus (epidemic), smallpox, yellow fever, plague, and such other communicable diseases as the contracting States shall from time to time decide to designate, and to that end contracting States will keep in close consultation with the agencies concerned with international regulations relating to sanitary measures applicable to aircraft. Such consultation shall be without prejudice to the application of any existing international convention on this subject to which the contracting States may be parties.

Article 15

[Airport and similar charges]

Every airport in a contracting State which is open to public use by its national aircraft shall likewise, subject to the provisions of Article 68, be open under uniform conditions to the aircraft of all the other contracting States. The like uniform conditions shall apply to the use, by aircraft of every contracting State, of all air navigation facilities, including radio and meteorological services, which may be provided for public use for the safety and expedition of air navigation.

Any charges that may be imposed or permitted to be imposed by a contracting State for the use of such airports and air navigation facilities by the aircraft of any other contracting State shall not be higher,

(a) As to aircraft not engaged in scheduled international air services, than those that would be paid by its national aircraft of the same class engaged in similar operations, and

(b) As to aircraft engaged in scheduled international air services, than those that would be paid by its national aircraft engaged in similar international air services. All such charges shall be published and communicated to the International Civil Aviation Organization: provided that, upon representation by an interested contracting State, the charges imposed for the use of airports and other facilities shall be subject to review by the Council, which shall report and make recommendations thereon for the consideration of the State or States concerned. No fees, dues or other charges shall be imposed by any contracting State in respect solely of the right of transit over or entry into or exit from its territory of any aircraft of a contracting State or persons or property thereon.

Article 16

[Search of aircraft]

The appropriate authorities of each of the contracting States shall have the right, without unreasonable delay, to search aircraft of the other contracting States on landing or departure, and to inspect the certificates and other documents prescribed by this Convention.

CHAPTER III

Nationality of Aircraft

Article 17

[Nationality of aircraft]

Aircraft have the nationality of the State in which they are registered.

Article 18

[Dual registration]

An aircraft cannot be validly registered in more than one State, but its registration may be changed from one State to another.

Article 19

[National laws governing registration]

The registration or transfer of registration of aircraft in any contracting State shall be made in accordance with its laws and regulations.

Article 20

[Display of marks]

Every aircraft engaged in international air navigation shall bear its appropriate nationality and registration marks.

Article 21

[Report of registrations]

Each contracting State undertakes to supply to any other contracting State or to the International Civil Aviation Organization, on demand, information concerning the registration and ownership of any particular aircraft registered in that State. In addition, each contracting State shall furnish reports to the International Civil Aviation Organization, under such regulations as the latter may prescribe, giving such pertinent data as can be made available concerning the ownership and control of aircraft registered in that State and habitually engaged in international air navigation. The data thus obtained by the International Civil Aviation Organization shall be made available by it on request to the other contracting States.

CHAPTER IV

Measures to Facilitate Air Navigation

Article 22

[Facilitation of formalities]

Each contracting State agrees to adopt all practicable measures, through the issuance of special regulations or otherwise, to facilitate and expedite navigation by aircraft between the territories of contracting States, and to prevent unnecessary delays to aircraft, crews, passengers and cargo, especially in the administration of the laws relating to immigration, quarantine, customs and clearance.

Article 23

[Customs and immigration procedures]

Each contracting State undertakes, so far as it may find practicable, to establish customs and immigration procedures affecting international air navigation in accordance with the practices which may be established or recommended from time to time, pursuant to this Convention. Nothing in this Convention shall be construed as preventing the establishment of customs-free airports.

Article 24

[Customs duty]

(a) Aircraft on a flight to, from, or across the territory of another contracting State shall be admitted temporarily free of duty, subject to the customs regulations of the State. Fuel, lubricating oils, spare parts, regular equipment and aircraft stores on board an aircraft of a contracting State, on arrival in the territory of another contracting State and retained on board on leaving the territory of that State shall be exempt from customs duty, inspection fees or similar national or local duties and charges. This exemption shall not apply to any quantities or articles unloaded, except in accordance with the customs regulations of the State, which may require that they shall be kept under customs supervision.

(b) Spare parts and equipment imported into the territory of a contracting State for incorporation in or use on an aircraft of another contracting State engaged in international air navigation shall be admitted free of customs duty, subject to compliance with the regulations of the State concerned, which may provide that the articles shall be kept under customs supervision and control.

Article 25

[Aircraft in distress]

Each contracting State undertakes to provide such measures of assistance to aircraft in distress in its territory as it may find practicable, and to permit, subject to control by its own authorities, the owners of the aircraft or authorities of the State in which the aircraft is registered to provide such measures of assistance as may be necessitated by the circumstances. Each contracting State, when undertaking search for missing aircraft, will collaborate in coordinated measures which may be recommended from time to time pursuant to this Convention.

Article 26

[Investigation of accidents]

In the event of an accident to an aircraft of a contracting State occurring in the territory of another contracting State, and involving death or serious injury, or indicating serious technical defect in the aircraft or air navigation facilities, the State in which the accident occurs will institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the accident, in accordance, so far as its laws permit, with the procedure which may be recommended by the International Civil Aviation Organization. The State in which the aircraft is registered shall be given the opportunity to appoint observers to be present at the inquiry and the State holding the inquiry shall communicate the report and findings in the matter to that State.

Article 27

[Exemption from seizure on patent claims]

(a) While engaged in international air navigation, any authorized entry of aircraft of a contracting State into the territory of another contracting State or authorized transit across the territory of such State with or without landings shall not entail any seizure or detention of the aircraft or any claim against the owner or operator thereof or any other interference therewith by or on behalf of such State or any person therein, on the ground that the construction, mechanism, parts, accessories or operation of the aircraft is an infringement of any patent, design, or model duly granted or registered in the State whose territory is entered by the aircraft, it being agreed that no deposit of security in connection with the foregoing exemption from seizure or detention of the aircraft shall in any case be required in the State entered by such aircraft.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this Article shall also be applicable to the storage of spare parts and spare equipment for the aircraft and the right to use and install the same in the repair of an aircraft of a contracting State in the territory of any other contracting State, provided that any patented part or equipment so stored shall not be sold or distributed internally in or exported commercially from the contracting State entered by the aircraft.

(c) The benefits of this Article shall apply only to such States, parties to this Convention, as either (1) are parties to the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property and to any amendments thereof; or (2) have enacted patent laws which recognize and give adequate protection to inventions made by the nationals of the other States parties to this Convention.

Article 28

[Air navigation facilities and standard systems]

Each contracting State undertakes, so far as it may find practicable to:

(a) Provide, in its territory, airports, radio services, meteorological services and other air navigation facilities to facilitate international air navigation, in accordance with the standards and practices recommended or established from time to time, pursuant to this Convention;

(b) Adopt and put into operation the appropriate standard systems of communications procedure, codes, markings, signals, lighting and other operational practices and rules which may be recommended or established from time to time, pursuant to this Convention;

(c) Collaborate in international measures to secure the publication of aeronautical maps and charts in accordance with standards which may be recommended or established from time to time, pursuant to this Convention.

CHAPTER V

Conditions to be Fulfilled With Respect to Aircraft

Article 29

[Documents carried in aircraft]

Every aircraft of a contracting State, engaged in international navigation, shall carry the following documents in conformity with the conditions prescribed in this Convention:

- (a) Its certificate of registration;
- (b) Its certificate of airworthiness;
- (c) The appropriate licenses for each member of the crew;
- (d) Its journey log book;
- (e) If it is equipped with radio apparatus, the aircraft radio station license;
- (f) If it carries passengers, a list of their names and places of embarkation and destination;
- (g) If it carries cargo, a manifest and detailed declarations of the cargo.

Article 30

[Aircraft radio equipment]

(a) Aircraft of each contracting State may, in or over the territory of other contracting States, carry radio transmitting apparatus only if a license to install and operate such apparatus has been issued by the appropriate authorities of the State in which the aircraft is registered. The use of radio transmitting apparatus in the territory of the contracting State whose territory is flown over shall be in accordance with the regulations prescribed by that State.

(b) Radio transmitting apparatus may be used only by members of the flight crew who are provided with a special license for the purpose, issued by the appropriate authorities of the State in which the aircraft is registered.

Article 31

[Certificates of airworthiness]

Every aircraft engaged in international navigation shall be provided with a certificate of airworthiness issued or rendered valid by the State in which it is registered.

Article 32

[Licenses of personnel]

(a) The pilot of every aircraft and the other members of the operating crew of every aircraft engaged in international navigation shall be provided with certificates of competency and licenses issued or rendered valid by the State in which the aircraft is registered.

(b) Each contracting State reserves the right to refuse to recognize, for the purpose of flight above its own territory, certificates of competency and licenses granted to any of its nationals by another contracting State.

Article 33

[Recognition of certificates and licenses]

Certificates of airworthiness and certificates of competency and licenses issued or rendered valid by the contracting State in which the aircraft is registered, shall be recognized as valid by the other contracting States, provided that the requirements under which such certificates or licenses were issued or rendered valid are equal to or above the minimum standards which may be established from time to time pursuant to this Convention.

Article 34

[Journey log books]

There shall be maintained in respect of every aircraft engaged in international navigation a journey log book in which shall be entered particulars of the aircraft, its crew and of each journey, in such form as may be prescribed from time to time pursuant to this Convention.

Article 35

[Cargo restrictions]

(a) No munitions of war or implements of war may be carried in or above the territory of a State in aircraft engaged in international navigation, except by permission of such State. Each State shall determine by regulations what constitutes munitions of war or implements of war for the purposes of this Article, giving due consideration, for the purposes of uniformity, to such recommendations as the International Civil Aviation Organization may from time to time make.

(b) Each contracting State reserves the right, for reasons of public order and safety, to regulate or prohibit the carriage in or above its territory of articles other than those enumerated in paragraph (a): provided that no distinction is made in this respect between its national aircraft engaged in international navigation and the aircraft of the other States so engaged; and provided further that no restriction shall be imposed which may interfere with the carriage and use on aircraft of apparatus necessary for the operation or navigation of the aircraft or the safety of the personnel or passengers.

Article 36

[Photographic apparatus]

Each contracting State may prohibit or regulate the use of photographic apparatus in aircraft over its territory.

CHAPTER VI

International Standards and Recommended Practices

Article 37

[Adoption of international standards and procedures]

Each contracting State undertakes to collaborate in securing the highest practicable degree of uniformity in regulations, standards, procedures, and organization in relation to aircraft, personnel, airways and auxiliary services in all matters in which such uniformity will facilitate and improve air navigation.

To this end the International Civil Aviation Organization shall adopt and amend from time to time, as may be necessary, international standards and recommended practices and procedures dealing with:

- (a) Communications systems and air navigation aids, including ground marking;
- (b) Characteristics of airports and landing areas;
- (c) Rules of the air and air traffic control practices;
- (d) Licensing of operating and mechanical personnel;
- (e) Airworthiness of aircraft;
- (f) Registration and identification of aircraft;
- (g) Collection and exchange of meteorological information;
- (h) Log books;
- (i) Aeronautical maps and charts;
- (j) Customs and immigration procedures;
- (k) Aircraft in distress and investigation of accident; and such other matters concerned with the safety, regularity, and efficiency of air navigation as may from time to time appear appropriate.

Article 38

[Departures from international standards and procedures]

Any State which finds it impracticable to comply in all respects with any such international standard or procedure, or to bring its own regulations or practices into full accord with any international standard or procedure after amendment of the latter, or which deems it necessary to adopt regulations or practices differing in any particular respect from those established by an international standard, shall give immediate notification to the International Civil Aviation Organization of the differences between its own practice and that established by the international standard. In the case of amendments to international standards, any State which does not make the appropriate amendments to its own regulations or practices shall give notice to the Council within sixty days of the adoption of the amendment to the international standard, or indicate the action which it proposes to take. In any such case, the Council shall make immediate notification to all other states of the difference which exists between one or more features of an international standard and the corresponding national practice of that State.

Article 39

[Endorsement of certificates and licenses]

(a) Any aircraft or part thereof with respect to which there exists an international standard of airworthiness or performance and which failed in any respect to satisfy that standard at the time of its certification, shall have endorsed on or attached to its airworthiness certificate a complete enumeration of the details in respect of which it so failed.

PART III—INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT

CHAPTER XIV

Information and Reports

CHAPTER XV

Airports and Other Air Navigation Facilities

Article 68

[Designation of routes and airports]

Each contracting State may, subject to the provisions of this Convention, designate the route to be followed within its territory by any international air service and the airports which any such service may use.

Article 69

[Improvement of air navigation facilities]

If the Council is of the opinion that the airports or other air navigation facilities, including radio and meteorological services, of a contracting State are not reasonably adequate for the safe, regular, efficient, and economical operation of international air services, present or contemplated, the Council shall consult with the State directly concerned, and other States affected, with a view to finding means by which the situation may be remedied, and may make recommendations for that purpose. No contracting State shall be guilty of an infraction of this Convention if it fails to carry out these recommendations.

Article 70

[Financing of air navigation facilities]

A contracting State, in the circumstances arising under the provisions of Article 69, may conclude an arrangement with the Council for giving effect to such recommendations. The State may elect to bear all of the costs involved in any such arrangement. If the State does not so elect, the Council may agree, at the request of the State, to provide for all or a portion of the costs.

Article 71

[Provision and maintenance of facilities by Council]

If a contracting State so requests, the Council may agree to provide, man, maintain, and administer any or all of the airports and other air navigation facilities, including radio and meteorological services, required in its territory for the safe, regular, efficient and economical operation of the international air services of the other contracting States, and may specify just and reasonable charges for the use of the facilities provided.

Article 72

[Acquisition or use of land]

Where land is needed for facilities financed in whole or in part by the Council at the request of a contracting State, that State shall either provide the land itself, retaining title if it wishes, or facilitate the use of the land by the Council on just and reasonable terms and in accordance with the laws of the State concerned.

Article 73

Within the limit of the funds which may be made available to it by the Assembly under Chapter XII, the Council may make current expenditures for the purposes of this Chapter from the general funds of the Organization. The Council shall assess the capital funds required for the purposes of this Chapter in previously agreed proportions over a reasonable period of time to the contracting States consenting thereto whose airlines use the facilities. The Council may also assess to States that consent any working funds that are required.

Article 74

[Technical assistance and utilization of revenues]

When the Council, at the request of a contracting State, advances funds or provides airports or other facilities in whole or in part, the arrangement may provide, with the consent of that State, for technical assistance in the supervision and operation of the airports and other facilities, and for the payment, from the revenues derived from the operation of the airports and other facilities, of the operating expenses of the airports and the other facilities, and of interest and amortization charges.

Article 75

[Taking over of facilities from Council]

A contracting State may at any time discharge any obligation into which it has entered under Article 70, and take over airports and other facilities which the Council has provided in its territory pursuant to the provisions of Articles 71 and 72, by paying to the Council an amount which in the opinion of the Council is reasonable in the circumstances. If the State considers that the amount fixed by the Council is unreasonable it may appeal to the Assembly against the decision of the Council and the Assembly may confirm or amend the decision of the Council.

Article 76

[Return of funds]

Funds obtained by the Council through reimbursements under Article 75 and from receipts of interest and amortization payments under Article 74 shall, in the case of advances originally financed by States under Article 73, be returned to the States which were originally assessed in the proportion of their assessments, as determined by the Council.

CHAPTER XVI

Joint Operating Organization and Pooled Services

Article 77

[Joint operating organizations permitted]

Nothing in this Convention shall prevent two or more contracting States from constituting joint air transport operating organizations or international operating agencies and from pooling their air services on any routes or in any regions, but such organizations or agencies and such pooled services shall be subject to all the provisions of this Convention, including those relating to the registration of agreements with the Council. The Council shall determine in what manner the provisions of this Convention relating to nationality of aircraft shall apply to aircraft operated by international operating agencies.

Article 78

[Function of Council]

The Council may suggest to contracting States concerned that they form joint organizations to operate air services on any routes or in any regions.

Article 79

[Participation in operating organizations]

A State may participate in joint operating organizations or in pooling arrangements, either through its government or through an airline company or companies designated by its government. The companies may, at the sole discretion of the State concerned, be state-owned or partly state-owned or privately owned.

PART IV—FINAL PROVISIONS

CHAPTER XVII

Other Aeronautical Agreements and Arrangements

Article 80

[Paris and Habana Conventions]

Each contracting State undertakes, immediately upon the coming into force of this Convention, to give notice of denunciation of the Convention relating to the Regulation of Aerial Navigation signed at Paris on October 13, 1919, or the Convention on Commercial Aviation signed at Habana on February 20, 1923, if it is a party to either. As between contracting States, this Convention supersedes the Conventions of Paris and Habana previously referred to.

Article 81

[Registration of existing agreements]

All aeronautical agreements which are in existence on the coming into force of this Convention, and which are between a contracting State and any other State or between an airline of a contracting State and any other State or the airline of any other State, shall be forthwith registered with the Council.

Article 82

[Abrogation of inconsistent arrangements]

The contracting States accept this Convention as abrogating all obligations and understandings between them which are inconsistent with its terms, and undertake not to enter into any such obligations and understandings. A contracting State which, before becoming a member of the Organization has undertaken any obligations toward a non-contracting State inconsistent with the terms of this Convention, shall take immediate steps to procure its release from the obligations. If an airline of any contracting State has entered into any such inconsistent obligations, the State of which it is a national shall use its best efforts to secure their termination forthwith and shall in any event cause them to be terminated as soon as such action can lawfully be taken after the coming into force of this Convention.

Article 83

[Registration of new arrangements]

Subject to the provisions of the preceding Article, any contracting State may make arrangements not inconsistent with the provisions of this Convention. Any such arrangement shall be forthwith registered with the Council, which shall make it public as soon as possible.

CHAPTER XVIII

Disputes and Default

Article 84

[Settlement of disputes]

If any disagreement between two or more contracting States relating to the interpretation or application of this Convention and its Annexes cannot be settled by negotiation, it shall, on the application of any State concerned in the disagreement, be decided by the Council. No member of the Council shall vote in the consideration by the Council of any dispute to which it is a party. Any contracting State may, subject to Article 85, appeal from the decision of the Council to an ad hoc arbitral tribunal agreed upon with the other parties to the dispute or to the Permanent Court of International Justice. Any such appeal shall be notified to the Council within sixty days of receipt of notification of the decision of the Council.

Article 85

[Arbitration procedure]

If any contracting State party to a dispute in which the decision of the Council is under appeal has not accepted the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and the contracting States parties to the dispute cannot agree on the choice of the arbitral tribunal, each of the contracting States parties to the dispute shall name a single arbitrator who shall name an umpire. If either contracting State party to the dispute fails to name an arbitrator within a period of three months from the date of the appeal, an arbitrator shall be named on behalf of that State by the President of the Council from a list of qualified and available persons maintained by the Council. If, within thirty days, the arbitrators cannot agree on an umpire, the President of the Council shall designate an umpire from the list previously referred to. The arbitrators and the umpire shall then jointly constitute an arbitral tribunal. Any arbitral tribunal established under this or the preceding Article shall settle its own procedure and give its decisions by majority vote, provided that the Council may determine procedural questions in the event of any delay which in the opinion of the Council is excessive.

Article 86

[Appeals]

Unless the Council decides otherwise, any decision by the Council on whether an international airline is operating in conformity with the provisions of this Convention shall remain in effect unless reversed on appeal. On any other matter, decisions of the Council shall, if appealed from, be suspended until the appeal is decided. The decisions of the Permanent Court of International Justice and of an arbitral tribunal shall be final and binding.

Article 87

[Penalty for non-conformity by airline]

Each contracting State undertakes not to allow the operation of an airline of a contracting State through the airspace above its territory if the Council has decided that the airline concerned is not conforming to a final decision rendered in accordance with the previous Article.

Article 88

[Penalty for non-conformity by State]

The Assembly shall suspend the voting power in the Assembly and in the Council of any contracting State that is found in default under the provisions of this Chapter.

CHAPTER XIX

War

Article 89

[War and emergency conditions]

In case of war, the provisions of this Convention shall not affect the freedom of action of any of the contracting States affected, whether as belligerents or as neutrals. The same principle shall apply in the case of any contracting State which declares a state of national emergency and notifies the fact to the Council.

CHAPTER XX

Annexes

Article 90

[Adoption and amendment of Annexes]

(a) The adoption by the Council of the Annexes described in Article 54, subparagraph (1), shall require the vote of two-thirds of the Council at a meeting called for that purpose and shall then be submitted by the Council to each contracting State. Any such Annex or any amendment of an Annex shall become effective within three months after its submission to the contracting States or at the end of such longer period of time as the Council may prescribe, unless in the meantime a majority of the contracting States register their disapproval with the Council.

(b) The Council shall immediately notify all contracting States of the coming into force of any Annex or amendment thereto.

CHAPTER XXI

Ratifications, Adherences, Amendments, and Denunciations

Article 91

[Ratification of Convention]

(a) This Convention shall be subject to ratification by the signatory States. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America, which will give notice of the date of the deposit to each of the signatory and adhering States.

(b) As soon as this Convention has been ratified or adhered to by twenty-six States it shall come into force between them on the thirtieth day after deposit of the twenty-sixth instrument. It shall come into force for each State ratifying thereafter on the thirtieth day after the deposit of its instrument of ratification.

(c) It shall be the duty of the Government of the United States of America to notify the government of each of the signatory and adhering States of the date on which this Convention comes into force.

Article 92

[Adherence to Convention]

(a) This Convention shall be open for adherence by members of the United Nations and States associated with them, and States which remained neutral during the present world conflict.

(b) Adherence shall be effected by a notification addressed to the Government of the United States of America and shall take effect as from the thirtieth day from the receipt of the notification by the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the contracting States.

Article 93

[Admission of other States]

States other than those provided for in Article 91 and 92 (a) may, subject to approval by any general international organization set up by the nations of the world to preserve peace, be admitted to participation in this Convention by means of a four-fifths vote of the Assembly and on such conditions as the Assembly may prescribe: provided that in each case the assent of any State invaded or attacked during the present war by the State seeking admission shall be necessary.

Article 94

[Amendment of Convention]

(a) Any proposed amendment to this Convention must be approved by a two-thirds vote of the Assembly and shall then come into force in respect of States which have ratified such amendment when ratified by the number of contracting States specified by the Assembly. The number so specified shall not be less than two-thirds of the total number of contracting States.

(b) If in its opinion the amendment is of such a nature as to justify this course, the Assembly in its resolution recommending adoption may provide that any State which has not ratified within a specified period after the amendment has come into force shall thereupon cease to be a member of the Organization and a party to the Convention.

Article 95

[Denunciation of Convention]

(a) Any contracting State may give notice of denunciation of this Convention three years after its coming into effect by notification addressed to the Government of the United States of America, which shall at once inform each of the contracting States.

(b) Denunciation shall take effect one year from the date of receipt of the notification and shall operate only as regards the State effecting the denunciation.

ARTICLE V

Recommendations of the United Nations

1. The International Civil Aviation Organization, having regard to the obligation of the United Nations to promote the objectives set forth in Article 55 of the Charter and the function and power of the Economic and Social Council under Article 62 of the Charter to make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international, economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related matters and to make recommendations concerning these matters to the specialized agencies concerned, and having regard also to the responsibility of the United Nations, under Article 58 and 63 of the Charter, to make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of such specialized agencies, agrees to arrange for the submission, as soon as possible, to its appropriate organ of all formal recommendations which the United Nations may make to it.

2. The International Civil Aviation Organization agrees to enter into consultation with the United Nations upon request with respect to such recommendations, and in due course to report to the United Nations on the action taken by the Organization or by its members to give effect to such recommendations, or on the other results of their consideration.

3. The United Nations recognizes the International Civil Aviation Organization as the central agency responsible for the collection, analysis, publication, standardization, improvement and dissemination of statistics within its special sphere, without prejudice to the rights of the United Nations to concern itself with such statistics so far as they may be essential for its own purposes or for the improvement of statistics throughout the world.

4. The United Nations shall, in consultation with the International Civil Aviation Organization and with the other specialized agencies where appropriate, develop administrative instruments and procedures through which effective statistical co-operation may be secured between the United Nations and the agencies brought into relationship with it.

Accordingly, the United Nations and the International Civil Aviation Organization agree to consult together concerning the establishment and use of common administrative and technical services and facilities in addition to those referred to in articles XII, XIII and XV, in so far as the establishment and use of such services may from time to time be found practicable and appropriate.

V. The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development

A. THE BRETTON WOODS CONFERENCE

The United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference met in Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, from July 1 to 22, 1944, at the invitation of President Franklin D. Roosevelt of the United States. Participating in the Conference were representatives of 44 United and Associated Nations.

The Conference was called to formulate definite proposals for an International Monetary Fund and an International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Two years of exploratory discussions between the monetary and financial experts of the United Nations had preceded the formal meeting at Bretton Woods, and large areas of agreement had already been reached by the time the Conference began.

At the inaugural session of the Conference on July 1, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Chairman of the United States delegation, was elected President of the Conference. On the following day the Conference established three Commissions, among which one, under the chairmanship of Lord Keynes, was to formulate proposals for the Bank. The Final Act of the Conference, which included the Articles of Agreement of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, was submitted to the Governments of the participating nations.

B. PURPOSES

The purposes of the bank, as stated in the Articles of Agreement, are:

(1) To assist in the reconstruction and development of territories of members by facilitating the investment of capital for productive purposes, including the restoration of economies destroyed or disrupted by war, the reconversion of productive facilities to peacetime needs and the encouragement of the development of productive facilities and resources in less developed countries.

(2) To promote private foreign investment by means of guarantees or participations in loans and other investments made by private investors; and when private capital is not available on reasonable terms, to supplement private investment by providing, on suitable conditions, finance for productive purposes out of its own capital, funds raised by it and its other resources.

(3) To promote the long-range balanced growth of international trade and the maintenance of equilibrium in balances of payments by encouraging international investment for the development of the productive resources of members, thereby assisting in raising productivity, the standard of living and conditions of labor in their territories.

(4) To arrange the loans made or guaranteed by it in relation to international loans through other channels so that the more useful and urgent projects, large and small alike, will be dealt with first.

(5) To conduct its operations with due regard to the effect of its investment on business conditions in the territories of members and, in the immediate post-war years, to assist in bringing about a smooth transition from a wartime to a peacetime economy.

Loans approved by the Bank are subject to the following conditions:

1. When the member in whose territories the project is located is not itself a borrower, the member or the central bank or some comparable agency of the member which is acceptable to the Bank fully guarantees the repayment of the principal and the payment of interest and other charges on the loan.

2. The Bank is satisfied that in the prevailing market conditions the borrower would be unable otherwise to obtain the loan under conditions which in the opinion of the Bank are reasonable for the borrower.

3. A competent committee, including members of the staff of the Bank and a representative of the applicant, has submitted a written report recommending the project after a careful technical, engineering, and economic study of the merits of the proposal.

4. In the opinion of the Bank the rate of interest and other charges are reasonable and such rate, charges and the schedule for repayment of principal are appropriate to the project.

5. In making or guaranteeing a loan, the Bank shall pay due regard to the prospects that the borrower, and, if the borrower is not a member, that the guarantor, will be in position to meet its obligations under the loan; and the Bank shall act prudently in the interests both of the particular member in whose territories the project is located and of the members as a whole.

6. In guaranteeing a loan made by other investors, the Bank receives suitable compensation for its risk.

7. Loans made or guaranteed by the Bank shall, except in special circumstances, be for the purpose of specific projects of reconstruction or development.

Moreover the Bank must make supervisory arrangements to ensure that the proceeds of any loan are used efficiently and only for the purposes for which the loan was granted.

In making and implementing of loans the Bank is prohibited by its Articles of Agreement from interfering in the political affairs of any member, nor may it be influenced by the political character of the member or members concerned. Only economic considerations are to be relevant to its decisions, and these considerations are to be weighed impartially in order to achieve the purposes of the Bank.

C. STRUCTURE

The Bank has a Board of Governors, Executive Directors, a President and a staff.

All powers of the Bank are vested in the Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor and one alternate appointed by each member. As stated in the Articles of Agreement, the Board may delegate to the Executive Directors authority to exercise any powers of the Board, except the power to:

- (1) Admit new members and determine the conditions of their admission.
- (2) Increase or decrease the capital stock.
- (3) Suspend a member.
- (4) Decide appeals from interpretations of this Agreement given by the Executive Directors.
- (5) Make arrangements to cooperate with other international organizations (other than informal arrangements of a temporary and administrative character).
- (6) Decide to suspend permanently the operations of the Bank and to distribute its assets.
- (7) Determine the distribution of the net income of the Bank.

There are twelve Executive Directors, five appointed by the five members having the largest number of shares, and seven elected by the Governors other than those representing the five members with the largest number of shares. The Executive Directors are appointed or elected every two years. They are responsible for the conduct of the general operations of the Bank and exercise all the powers delegated to them by the Board of Governors.

The President of the Bank is elected by the Executive Directors. He may not be a Governor or a Director. He is the Chairman of the Executive Directors. He is the chief of the operating staff and conducts, under the direction of the Executive Directors, the ordinary business of the Bank.

Except as otherwise provided by the Articles of Agreement, decisions of the Bank are made by a simple majority vote. Each member of the Bank has 250 votes plus one additional vote for each share of stock held. Each Governor casts all votes allotted to that member State which he represents. In the case of Executive Directors, an appointed Director casts as a unit all votes allotted to the member appointing him; an elected Executive Director casts as a unit the total number of votes allotted to those member States which elected him.

D. ACTIVITIES

The Articles of Agreement of the Bank came into force on December 27, 1945, when it was signed in Washington and the instruments of acceptance were deposited on behalf of 28 governments with approximately 80 per cent of the total subscriptions.

The United States, as the member having the largest number of shares in the Bank, issued an invitation to the other member governments to attend the Inaugural Meeting of the Board of Governors of the Bank, to be held in conjunction with the Inaugural Meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Monetary Fund. An invitation to send observers to the Inaugural Meeting was extended to those governments which participated in the Bretton Woods Conference but had not signed the Articles of Agreement. The United Nations Economic and Social Council was also invited to send an observer.

The Inaugural Meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development took place in Savannah, Georgia, from March 8 to 18, 1946. It was devoted mainly to organizational and administrative matters. The Board adopted the By-Laws of the Bank, which were complementary to the Articles of Agreement. It was decided that the Bank should be located within the metropolitan area of Washington, D. C., in the United States. The Board also decided that the time limit for admission to membership of participants in the Bretton Woods Conference should be extended to December 31, 1946, and that the applications for membership by Italy, Lebanon, Syria and Turkey should be referred to the Executive Directors for study and consideration.

On May 7 the Executive Directors of the Bank met in Washington and on June 4 elected Eugene Meyer (United States) President of the Bank. Mr. Meyer resigned as of December 18, 1946, and John J. McCloy (United States), who was subsequently elected, assumed his duties as President of the Bank on March 17, 1947.

The authorized capital of the Bank is $10,000,000,000. This capital stock is divided into shares of $100,000 each, available for subscription only to members. The present subscriptions of member governments amount to $8,024,500,000. However, the Bank is authorized to call only twenty per cent of its subscribed capital to serve as working funds. The other 80 per cent may be called only as and if needed to enable the Bank to meet interest and amortization requirements of its own obligations to private investors.

The Executive Directors fixed June 25, 1946, as the date upon which the Bank would formally begin operations and, as required by the Articles of Agreement, called for the balance of the initial two per cent of the capital subscription to be paid by members within 60 days of this date. One one-hundredths of one per cent of the capital subscription had already been paid by each member at the time of signature of the Articles of Agreement. As of June 25, 1946, the Executive Directors called for a further three per cent payable on or before November 25, 1946, and on September 25, 1946, for an additional five per cent of the capital subscription to be paid by November 25, 1946. The second ten per cent was paid by May 1947 in two instalments of five per cent each; the first of these instalments was due by February 25, 1947. The first two per cent of the subscription to the capital stock of the Bank was payable in gold on U.S. dollars, and the remaining eighteen per cent was payable in the local currency of each member.

The eighteen per cent of capital payable in the local currency of each member, equivalent approximately to $1,444,000,000 (including $571,500,000 paid by the United States), can be used only to make loans with the consent of the member or members whose currency is required for this purpose. Only the United States, whose currency is that primarily needed at present by borrowers, has so far found itself in a position to give such consent.

These calls made available to the Bank funds are equivalent to approximately $1,599,000,000, of which slightly more than $727,000,000 was in the form of U.S. dollars. These U.S. dollars included $635,000,000 paid by the United States and roughly $92,000,000 paid by other members in dollars, or in gold which was subsequently converted into dollars. The balance of approximately $872,000,000 was in the form of local currencies of members other than the United States.

To obtain further funds for lending, the Bank may borrow from private investors through the capital markets of its member countries, the consent of the member concerned being necessary for such operations.¹

The first annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the Bank convened on September 27, 1946. The Board approved the applications for membership of Italy, Lebanon, Syria and Turkey, provided they accepted membership by April 15, 1947, on the conditions approved by the Board. Their subsequent acceptance brought the total membership in the Bank to 44 nations. The increase of the subscriptions of France and Paraguay to the capital of the Bank was authorized. The Board of Governors selected London as the site of its second annual meeting, scheduled to convene in September 1947.

With regard to the question of an agreement between the United Nations and the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Economic and Social Council, at the request of the Bank, decided at its second session to postpone negotiations for bringing the organization into relationship with the United Nations. Exploratory discussions between the United Nations and the Bank were continued, and at its third session the Council directed the Secretary-General to strengthen and extend working relationships between the United Nations and the Bank so that formal negotiations could be started as soon as possible.

Loan operations of the Bank began with a loan of $250,000,000 to Crédit National to assist France in the reconstruction of her war-torn economy. The French Government originally applied for twice this amount, and the Bank has stated that, although it is not now prepared to make any commitments with regard to a further loan, it will be willing to consider an additional application from France later this year. The loan, which is guaranteed by the French Government, will serve to finance the purchase of essential raw materials, coal and machinery and will be repaid within 50 years.

Eight other loan applications have been received and are being studied. These applications have been filed by the following countries: Chile, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Iran, Luxembourg, Mexico, the Netherlands and Poland. Greece has stated its intention of applying for a loan when its plans for reconstruction projects have been completed.

Chile has applied for $40,000,000 to finance projects for the development of hydro-electric power plants, forest industries, railway electrification, transportation and port mechanization.

Czechoslovakia has applied for $350,000,000 to assist projects of reconstruction and development in industry, agriculture and transportation which require imports of capital equipment and raw materials.

Denmark has applied for $50,000,000 to finance imports of capital equipment and raw material for the reconstruction and modernization of industry and agriculture.

Iran has applied for $250,000,000 to develop and modernize agriculture, industry and transport. Details of the program have not yet been furnished.

Luxembourg has applied for $20,000,000 to aid in the reconstruction of devastated areas and the restoration of its economy.

Mexico has applied for $208,875,000 for the development of productive facilities, including irrigation and hydro-electric projects, highway construction, pipelines, railroads and harbor improvements.

The Netherlands has applied for $535,000,000 to finance a portion of the more urgent projects in an overall rehabilitation, reconstruction and industrialization program.

Poland has applied for $600,000,000 to finance imports of equipment and material for the reconstruction of coal mining, iron and steel, engineering, textiles, electricity and transport.

E. ADMINISTRATIVE BUDGETS

The Board of Governors on March 16, 1946, authorized the Temporary Secretary of the Bank to expend up to $200,000 to meet salaries and other administrative expenses of the Bank until permanent procedures were established. The Temporary Secretary made disbursements under such authority until July 15, 1946. Thereafter disbursements were made by the President or Vice-President of the Bank. Total disbursements through July 15, 1946, amounted to $75,703.40.

The expenses of the Bank to June 30, 1947, totalled $2,142,276.35. As indicated in the statement below, the Bank had an excess of expenses over income amounting to $938,647.01.

¹ The first issue of bonds by the Bank was made on July 15, 1947, when $100,000,000 in Ten Year 2½% and $150,000,000 in Twenty-Five Year 3% Bonds were successfully offered in the United States.

ANNEX II.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT

The Governments on whose behalf the present Agreement is signed agree as follows:

INTRODUCTORY ARTICLE

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development is established and shall operate in accordance with the following provisions:

ARTICLE I
PURPOSES

The purposes of the Bank are:

(i) To assist in the reconstruction and development of territories of members by facilitating the investment of capital for productive purposes, including the restoration of economies destroyed or disrupted by war, the re-conversion of productive facilities to peacetime needs and the encouragement of the development of productive facilities and resources in less developed countries.

(ii) To promote private foreign investment by means of guarantees or participations in loans and other investments made by private investors; and when private capital is not available on reasonable terms, to supplement private investment by providing, on suitable conditions, finance for productive purposes out of its own capital, funds raised by it and its other resources.

(iii) To promote the long-range balanced growth of international trade and the maintenance of equilibrium in balances of payments by encouraging international investment for the development of the productive resources of members, thereby assisting in raising productivity, the standard of living and conditions of labor in their territories.

(iv) To arrange the loans made or guaranteed by it in relation to international loans through other channels so that the more useful and urgent projects, large and small alike, will be dealt with first.

(v) To conduct its operations with due regard to the effect of international investment on business conditions in the territories of members and, in the immediate post-war years, to assist in bringing about a smooth transition from a wartime to a peacetime economy.

The Bank shall be guided in all its decisions by the purposes set forth above.

ARTICLE II

MEMBERSHIP IN AND CAPITAL OF THE BANK

Section 1. Membership

(a) The original members of the Bank shall be those members of the International Monetary Fund which accept membership in the Bank before the date specified in Article XI, Section 2 (e).

(b) Membership shall be open to other members of the Fund, at such times and in accordance with such terms as may be prescribed by the Bank.

Section 2. Authorized capital

(a) The authorized capital stock of the Bank shall be $10,000,000,000, in terms of United States dollars of the weight and fineness in effect on July 1, 1944. The capital stock shall be divided into 100,000 shares having a par value of $100,000 each, which shall be available for subscription only by members.

(b) The capital stock may be increased when the Bank deems it advisable by a three-fourths majority of the total voting power.

Section 3. Subscription of shares

(a) Each member shall subscribe shares of the capital stock of the Bank. The minimum number of shares to be subscribed by the original members shall be those set forth in Schedule A. The minimum number of shares to be subscribed by other members shall be determined by the Bank, which shall reserve a sufficient portion of its capital stock for subscription by such members.

(b) The Bank shall prescribe rules laying down the conditions under which members may subscribe shares of the authorized capital stock of the Bank in addition to their minimum subscriptions.

(c) If the authorized capital stock of the Bank is increased, each member shall have a reasonable opportunity to subscribe, under such conditions as the Bank shall decide, a proportion of the increase of stock equivalent to the proportion which its stock theretofore subscribed bears to the total capital stock of the Bank, but no member shall be obligated to subscribe any part of the increased capital.

Section 4. Issue price of shares

Shares included in the minimum subscriptions of original members shall be issued at par. Other shares shall be issued at par unless the Bank by a majority of the total voting power decides in special circumstances to issue them on other terms.

Section 5. Division and calls of subscribed capital

The subscription of each member shall be divided into two parts as follows:

(i) twenty percent shall be paid or subject to call under Section 7 (i) of this Article as needed by the Bank for its operations;

(ii) the remaining eighty per cent shall be subject to call by the Bank only when required to meet obligations of the Bank created under Article IV, Sections (a) (ii) and (iii).

Calls on unpaid subscriptions shall be uniform on all shares.

Section 6. Limitation on liability

Liability on shares shall be limited to the unpaid portion of the issue price of the shares.

Section 7. Method of payment of subscriptions for shares

Payment of subscriptions for shares shall be made in gold or United States dollars and in the currencies of the members as follows:

(i) under Section 5 (i) of this Article, two per cent of the price of each share shall be payable in gold or United States dollars, and, when calls are made, the remaining eighteen per cent shall be paid in the currency of the member;

(ii) when a call is made under Section 5 (ii) of this Article, payment may be made at the option of the member either in gold, in United States dollars or in the currency required to discharge the obligations of the Bank for the purpose for which the call is made;

(iii) when a member makes payments in any currency under (i) and (ii) above, such payments shall be made in amounts equal in value to the member's liability under the call. This liability shall be a proportionate part of the subscribed capital stock of the Bank as authorized and defined in Section 2 of this Article.

Section 8. Time of payment of subscriptions

(a) The two per cent payable on each share in gold or United States dollars under Section 7 (i) of this Article, shall be paid within sixty days of the date on which the Bank begins operations, provided that

(i) any original member of the Bank whose metropolitan territory has suffered from enemy occupation or hostilities during the present war shall be granted the right to postpone payment of one-half per cent until five years after that date;

(ii) an original member who cannot make such a payment because it has not recovered possession of its gold reserves which are still seized or immobilized as a result of the war may postpone all payment until such date as the Bank shall decide.

(b) The remainder of the price of each share payable under Section 7 (i) of this Article shall be paid as and when called by the Bank, provided that

(i) the Bank shall, within one year of its beginning operations, call not less than eight per cent of the price of the share in addition to the payment of two per cent referred to in (a) above;

(ii) not more than five per cent of the price of the share shall be called in any period of three months.

Section 9. Maintenance of value of certain currency holdings of the Bank

(a) Whenever (i) the par value of a member's currency is reduced, or (ii) the foreign exchange value of a member's currency has, in the opinion of the Bank, depreciated to a significant extent within that member's territories, the member shall pay to the Bank within a reasonable time an additional amount of its own currency sufficient to maintain the value, as of the time of initial subscription, of the amount of the currency of such member which is held by the Bank and derived from currency originally paid in to the Bank by the member under Article II, Section 7 (i), from currency referred to in Article IV, Section 2 (b), or from any additional currency furnished under the provisions of the present paragraph, and which has not been repurchased by the member for gold or for the currency of any member which is acceptable to the Bank.

(b) Whenever the par value of a member's currency is increased, the Bank shall return to such member within a reasonable time an amount of that member's currency equal to the increase in the value of the amount of such currency described in (a) above.

(c) The provisions of the preceding paragraphs may be waived by the Bank when a uniform proportionate change in the par values of the currencies of all its members is made by the International Monetary Fund.

Section 10. Restriction on disposal of shares

Shares shall not be pledged or encumbered in any manner whatever and they shall be transferable only to the Bank.

ARTICLE III

GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO LOANS AND GUARANTEES

Section 1. Use of resources

(a) The resources and the facilities of the Bank shall be used exclusively for the benefit of members with equitable consideration to projects for development and projects for reconstruction alike.

(b) For the purpose of facilitating the restoration and reconstruction of the economy of members whose metropolitan territories have suffered great devastation from enemy occupation or hostilities, the Bank, in determining the conditions and terms of loans made to such members, shall pay special regard to lightening the financial burden and expediting the completion of such restoration and reconstruction.

Section 2. Dealings between members and the Bank

Each member shall deal with the Bank only through its Treasury, central bank, stabilization fund or other similar fiscal agency, and the Bank shall deal with members only by or through the same agencies.

Section 3. Limitations on guarantees and borrowings of the Bank

The total amount outstanding of guarantees, participations in loans and direct loans made by the Bank shall not be increased at any time, if by such increase the total would exceed one hundred per cent of the unimpaired subscribed capital, reserves and surplus of the Bank.

Section 4. Conditions on which the Bank may guarantee or make loans

The Bank may guarantee, participate in, or make loans to any member or any political subdivision thereof and any business, industrial, and agricultural enterprise in the territories of a member, subject to the following conditions:

(i) When the member in whose territories the project is located is not itself the borrower, the member or the central bank or some comparable agency of the member which is acceptable to the Bank, fully guarantees the repayment of the principal and the payment of interest and other charges on the loan.

(ii) The Bank is satisfied that in the prevailing market conditions the borrower would be unable otherwise to obtain the loan under conditions which in the opinion of the Bank are reasonable for the borrower.

(iii) A competent committee, as provided for in Article V, Section 7, has submitted a written report recommending the project after a careful study of the merits of the proposal.

(iv) In the opinion of the Bank the rate of interest and other charges are reasonable and such rate, charges and the schedule for repayment of principal are appropriate to the project.

(v) In making or guaranteeing a loan, the Bank shall pay due regard to the prospects that the borrower, and, if the borrower is not a member, that the guarantor, will be in position to meet its obligations under the loan; and the Bank shall act prudently in the interests both of the particular member in whose territories the project is located and of the members as a whole.

(vi) In guaranteeing a loan made by other investors, the Bank receives suitable compensation for its risk.

(vii) Loans made or guaranteed by the Bank shall, except in special circumstances, be for the purpose of specific projects of reconstruction or development.

Section 5. Use of loans guaranteed, participated in or made by the Bank

(a) The Bank shall impose no conditions that the proceeds of a loan shall be spent in the territories of any particular member or members.

(b) The Bank shall make arrangements to ensure that the proceeds of any loan are used only for the purposes for which the loan was granted, with due attention to considerations of economy and efficiency and without regard to political or other non-economic influences or considerations.

(c) In the case of loans made by the Bank, it shall open an account in the name of the borrower and the amount of the loan shall be credited to this account in the currency or currencies in which the loan is made. The borrower shall be permitted by the Bank to draw on this account only to meet expenses in connection with the project as they are actually incurred.

ARTICLE IV OPERATIONS

Section 1. Methods of making or facilitating loans

(a) The Bank may make or facilitate loans which satisfy the general conditions of Article III in any of the following ways:

(i) By making or participating in direct loans out of its own funds corresponding to its unimpaired paid-up capital and surplus and, subject to Section 6 of this Article, to its reserves.

(ii) By making or participating in direct loans out of funds raised in the market of a member, or otherwise borrowed by the Bank.

(iii) By guaranteeing in whole or in part loans made by private investors through the usual investment channels.

(b) The Bank may borrow funds under (a) (ii) above or guarantee loans under (a) (iii) above only with the approval of the member in whose markets the funds are raised and the member in whose currency the loan is denominated, and only if those members agree that the proceeds may be exchanged for the currency of any other member without restriction.

Section 2. Availability and transferability of currencies

(a) Currencies paid into the Bank under

Article II, Section 7 (i), shall be loaned only with the approval in each case of the member whose currency is involved; provided, however, that if necessary, after the Bank's subscribed capital has been entirely called, such currencies shall, without restriction by the members whose currencies are offered, be used or exchanged for the currencies required to meet contractual payments of interest, other charges or amortization on the Bank's own borrowings, or to meet the Bank's liabilities with respect to such contractual payments on loans guaranteed by the Bank.

(b) Currencies received by the Bank from borrowers or guarantors in payment on account of principal of direct loans made with currencies referred to in (a) above shall be exchanged for the currencies of other members or reloaned only with the approval in each case of the members whose currencies are involved; provided, however, that if necessary, after the Bank's subscribed capital has been entirely called, such currencies shall, without restriction by the members whose currencies are offered, be used or exchanged for the currencies required to meet contractual payments of interest, other charges or amortization on the Bank's own borrowings, or to meet the Bank's liabilities with respect to such contractual payments on loans guaranteed by the Bank.

(c) Currencies received by the Bank from borrowers or guarantors in payment on account of principal of direct loans made by the Bank under Section 1 (a) (ii) of this Article, shall be held and used, without restriction by the members, to make amortization payments, or to anticipate payment of or repurchase part or all of the Bank's own obligations.

(d) All other currencies available to the Bank, including those raised in the market or otherwise borrowed under Section 1 (a) (ii) of this Article, those obtained by the sale of gold, those received as payments of interest and other charges for direct loans made under Sections 1 (a) (i) and (ii), and those received as payments of commissions and other charges under Section 1 (a) (iii), shall be used or exchanged for other currencies or gold required in the operations of the Bank without restriction by the members whose currencies are offered.

(e) Currencies raised in the markets of members by borrowers on loans guaranteed by the Bank under Section 1 (a) (iii) of this Article, shall also be used or exchanged for other currencies without restriction by such members.

Section 3. Provision of currencies for direct loans

The following provisions shall apply to direct loans under Sections 1 (a) (i) and (ii) of this Article:

(a) The Bank shall furnish the borrower with such currencies of members, other than the member in whose territories the project is located, as are needed by the borrower for expenditures to be made in the territories of such other members to carry out the purposes of the loan.

(b) The Bank may, in exceptional circumstances when local currency required for the purposes of the loan cannot be raised by the borrower on reasonable terms, provide the borrower as part of the loan with an appropriate amount of that currency.

(c) The Bank, if the project gives rise indirectly to an increased need for foreign exchange by the member in whose territories the project is located, may in exceptional circumstances provide the borrower as part of the loan with an appropriate amount of gold or foreign exchange not in excess of the borrower's local expenditure in connection with the purposes of the loan.

(d) The Bank may, in exceptional circumstances, at the request of a member in whose territories a portion of the loan is spent, repurchase with gold or foreign exchange a part of that member's currency thus spent but in no case shall the part so repurchased exceed the amount by which the expenditure of the loan in those territories gives rise to an increased need for foreign exchange.

Section 4. Payment provisions for direct loans

Loan contracts under Section 1 (a) (i) or (ii) of this Article shall be made in accordance with the following payment provisions:

(a) The terms and conditions of interest and amortization payments, maturity and dates of payment of each loan shall be determined by the Bank. The Bank shall also determine the rate and any other terms and conditions of commission to be charged in connection with such loan.

In the case of loans made under Section 1 (a) (ii) of this Article during the first ten years of the Bank's operations, this rate of commission shall be not less than one per cent per annum and not greater than one and one-half per cent per annum, and shall be charged on the outstanding portion of any such loan. At the end of this period of ten years, the rate of commission may be reduced by the Bank with respect both to the outstanding portions of loans already made and to future loans, if the reserves accumulated by the Bank under Section 6 of this Article and out of other earnings are considered by it sufficient to justify a reduction. In the case of future loans the Bank shall also have discretion to increase the rate of commission beyond the above limit, if experience indicates that an increase is advisable.

(b) All loan contracts shall stipulate the currency or currencies in which payments under the contract shall be made to the Bank. At the option of the borrower, however, such payments may be made in gold, or subject to the agreement of the Bank, in the currency of a member other than that prescribed in the contract.

(i) In the case of loans made under Section 1

(a) (i) of this Article, the loan contracts shall provide that payments to the Bank of interest, other charges and amortization shall be made in the currency loaned, unless the member whose currency is loaned agrees that such payments shall be made in some other specified currency or currencies. These payments, subject to the provisions of Article II, Section 9 (c), shall be equivalent to the value of such contractual payments at the time the loans were made, in terms of a currency specified for the purpose by the Bank by a three-fourths majority of the total voting power.

(ii) In the case of loans made under Section 1 (a) (ii) of this Article, the total amount outstanding and payable to the Bank in any one currency shall at no time exceed the total amount of the outstanding borrowings made by the Bank under Section 1 (a) (ii) and payable in the same currency.

(c) If a member suffers from an acute exchange stringency, so that the service of any loan contracted by that member or guaranteed by it or by one of its agencies cannot be provided in the stipulated manner, the member concerned may apply to the Bank for a relaxation of the conditions of payment. If the Bank is satisfied that some relaxation is in the interests of the particular member and of the operations of the Bank and of its members as a whole, it may take action under either, or both, of the following paragraphs with respect to the whole, or part, of the annual service:

(i) The Bank may, in its discretion, make arrangements with the member concerned to accept service payments on the loan in the member's currency for periods not to exceed three years upon appropriate terms regarding the use of such currency and the maintenance of its foreign exchange value; and for the repurchase of such currency on appropriate terms.

(ii) The Bank may modify the terms of amortization or extend the life of the loan, or both.

Section 5. Guarantees

(a) In guaranteeing a loan placed through the usual investment channels, the Bank shall charge a guarantee commission payable periodically on the amount of the loan outstanding at a rate determined by the Bank. During the first ten years of the Bank's operations, this rate shall be not less than one per cent per annum and not greater than one and one-half per cent per annum. At the end of this period of ten years, the rate of commission may be reduced by the Bank with respect both to the outstanding portions of loans already guaranteed and to future loans if the reserves accumulated by the Bank under Section 6 of this Article and out of other earnings are considered by it sufficient to justify a reduction. In the case of future loans the Bank shall also have discretion to increase the rate of commission beyond the above limit, if experience indicates that an increase is advisable.

(b) Guarantee commissions shall be paid directly to the Bank by the borrower.

(c) Guarantees by the Bank shall provide that the Bank may terminate its liability with respect to interest if, upon default by the borrower and by the guarantor, if any, the Bank offers to purchase, at par and interest accrued to a date designated in the offer, the bonds or other obligations guaranteed.

(d) The Bank shall have power to determine any other terms and conditions of the guarantee.

Section 6. Special reserve

The amount of commissions received by the Bank under Sections 4 and 5 of this Article shall be set aside as a special reserve, which shall be kept available for meeting liabilities of the Bank in accordance with Section 7 of this Article. The special reserve shall be held in such liquid form, permitted under this Agreement, as the Executive Directors may decide.

Section 7. Methods of meeting liabilities of the Bank in case of defaults

In cases of default on loans made, participated in, or guaranteed by the Bank:

(a) The Bank shall make such arrangements as may be feasible to adjust the obligations under the loans, including arrangements under or analogous to those provided in Section 4 (c) in Section 6 of this Article.

(b) The payments in discharge of the Bank's liabilities on borrowings or guarantees under Sections 1 (a) (ii) and (iii) of this Article shall be charged:

(i) first, against the special reserve provided in Section 6 of this Article.

(ii) then, to the extent necessary and at the discretion of the Bank, against the other reserves, surplus and capital available to the Bank.

(c) Whenever necessary to meet contractual payments of interest, other charges or amortization on the Bank's own borrowings, or to meet the Bank's liabilities with respect to similar payments on loans guaranteed by it, the Bank may call an appropriate amount of the unpaid subscriptions of members in accordance with Article 17, Sections 5 and 7. Moreover, if it believes that a default may be of long duration, the Bank may call an additional amount of such unpaid subscriptions not to exceed in any one year one per cent of the total subscriptions of the members for the following purposes:

(i) To redeem prior to maturity, or otherwise discharge its liability on, all or part of the outstanding principal of any loan guaranteed by it in respect of which the debtor is in default.

(ii) To repurchase, or otherwise discharge its liability on, all or part of its own outstanding borrowings.

Section 8. Miscellaneous operations

In addition to the operations specified elsewhere in this Agreement, the Bank shall have the power:

(i) To buy and sell securities it has issued and to buy and sell securities which it has guaranteed or in which it has invested, provided that the Bank shall obtain the approval of the member in whose territories the securities are to be bought or sold.

(ii) To guarantee securities in which it has invested for the purpose of facilitating their sale.

(iii) To borrow the currency of any member with the approval of that member.

(iv) To buy and sell such other securities as the Directors by a three-fourths majority of the total voting power may deem proper for the investment of all or part of the special reserve under Section 6 of this Article.

In exercising the powers conferred by this Section, the Bank may deal with any person, partnership, association, corporation or other legal entity in the territories of any member.

Section 9. Warning to be placed on securities

Every security guaranteed or issued by the Bank shall bear on its face a conspicuous statement to the effect that it is not an obligation of any government unless expressly stated on the security.

Section 10. Political activity prohibited

The Bank and its officers shall not interfere in the political affairs of any member; nor shall they be influenced in their decisions by the political character of the member or members concerned. Only economic considerations shall be relevant to their decisions, and these considerations shall be weighed impartially in order to achieve the purposes stated in Article I.

ARTICLE V

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

Section 1. Structure of the Bank

The Bank shall have a Board of Governors, Executive Directors, a President and such other officers and staff to perform such duties as the Bank may determine.

Section 2. Board of Governors

(a) All the powers of the Bank shall be vested in the Board of Governors consisting of one governor and one alternate appointed by each member in such manner as it may determine. Each governor and each alternate shall serve for five years, subject to the pleasure of the member appointing him, and may be reappointed. No alternate may vote except in the absence of his principal. The Board shall select one of the governors as Chairman.

(b) The Board of Governors may delegate to the Executive Directors authority to exercise any powers of the Board, except the power to:

(i) Admit new members and determine the conditions of their admission;

(ii) Increase or decrease the capital stock;

(iii) Suspend a member;

(iv) Decide appeals from interpretations of this Agreement given by the Executive Directors;

(v) Make arrangements to cooperate with other international organizations (other than informal arrangements of a temporary and administrative character);

(vi) Decide to suspend permanently the operations of the Bank and to distribute its assets;

(vii) Determine the distribution of the net income of the Bank.

(c) The Board of Governors shall hold an annual meeting and such other meetings as may be provided for by the Board or called by the Executive Directors. Meetings of the Board shall be called by the Directors whenever requested by five members or by members having one-quarter of the total voting power.

(d) A quorum for any meeting of the Board of Governors shall be a majority of the Governors, exercising not less than two-thirds of the total voting power.

(e) The Board of Governors may by regulation establish a procedure whereby the Executive Directors, when they deem such action to be in the best interests of the Bank, may obtain a vote of the Governors on a specific question without calling a meeting of the Board.

(f) The Board of Governors, and the Executive Directors to the extent authorized, may adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to conduct the business of the Bank.

(g) Governors and alternates shall serve as such without compensation from the Bank, but the Bank shall pay them reasonable expenses incurred in attending meetings.

(h) The Board of Governors shall determine the remuneration to be paid to the Executive Directors and the salary and terms of the contract of service of the President.

Section 3. Voting

(a) Each member shall have two hundred fifty votes plus one additional vote for each share of stock held.

(b) Except as otherwise specifically provided, all matters before the Bank shall be decided by a majority of the votes cast.

Section 4. Executive Directors

(a) The Executive Directors shall be responsible for the conduct of the general operations of the Bank, and for this purpose, shall exercise all the powers delegated to them by the Board of Governors.

(b) There shall be twelve Executive Directors, who need not be governors, and of whom:

(i) five shall be appointed, one by each of the five members having the largest number of shares;

(ii) seven shall be elected according to Schedule B by all the Governors other than those appointed by the five members referred to in (i) above.

For the purpose of this paragraph, "members" means governments of countries whose names are set forth in Schedule A, whether they are original members or become members in accordance with Article II, Section 1 (b). When governments of other countries become members, the Board of Governors may, by a four-fifths majority of the total voting power, increase the total number of directors by increasing the number of directors to be elected.

Executive directors shall be appointed or elected every two years.

(c) Each executive director shall appoint an alternate with full power to act for him when he is not present. When the executive directors appointing them are present, alternates may participate in meetings but shall not vote.

(d) Directors shall continue in office until their successors are appointed or elected. If the office of an elected director becomes vacant more than ninety days before the end of his term, another director shall be elected for the remainder of the term by the governors who elected the former director. A majority of the votes cast shall be required for election. While the office remains vacant, the alternate of the former director shall exercise his powers, except that of appointing an alternate.

(e) The Executive Directors shall function in continuous session at the principal office of the Bank and shall meet as often as the business of the Bank may require.

(f) A quorum for any meeting of the Executive Directors shall be a majority of the Directors, exercising not less than one-half of the total voting power.

(g) Each appointed director shall be entitled to cast the number of votes allotted under Section 3 of this Article to the member appointing him. Each elected director shall be entitled to cast the number of votes which counted toward his election. All the votes which a director is entitled to cast shall be cast as a unit.

(h) The Board of Governors shall adopt regulations under which a member not entitled to appoint a director under (b) above may send a representative to attend any meeting of the Executive Directors when a request made by, or a matter particularly affecting, that member is under consideration.

(i) The Executive Directors may appoint such committees as they deem advisable. Membership of such committees need not be limited to governors or directors or their alternates.

Section 5. President and staff

(a) The Executive Directors shall select a President who shall not be a governor or an executive director or an alternate for either. The President shall be Chairman of the Executive Directors, but shall have no vote except a deciding vote in case of an equal division. He may participate in meetings of the Board of Governors, but shall not vote at such meetings. The President shall cease to hold office when the Executive Directors so decide.

(b) The President shall be chief of the operating staff of the Bank and shall conduct, under the direction of the Executive Directors, the ordinary business of the Bank. Subject to the general control of the Executive Directors, he shall be responsible for the organization, appointment and dismissal of the officers and staff.

(c) The President, officers and staff of the Bank, in the discharge of their offices, owe their duty entirely to the Bank and to no other authority. Each member of the Bank shall respect the international character of this duty and shall refrain from all attempts to influence any of them in the discharge of their duties.

(d) In appointing the officers and staff the President shall, subject to the paramount importance of securing the highest standards of efficiency and of technical competence, pay due regard to the importance of recruiting personnel on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Section 6. Advisory Council

(a) There shall be an Advisory Council of not less than seven persons selected by the Board of Governors including representatives of banking, commercial, industrial, labor, and agricultural interests, and with as wide a national representation as possible. In those fields where specialized international organizations exist, the members of the Council representative of those fields shall be selected in agreement with such organizations. The Council shall advise the Bank on matters of general policy. The Council shall meet annually and on such other occasions as the Bank may request.

(b) Councillors shall serve for two years and may be reappointed. They shall be paid their reasonable expenses incurred on behalf of the Bank.

Section 7. Loan committees

The committees required to report on loans under Article III, Section 4, shall be appointed by the Bank. Each such committee shall have an expert selected by the governor representing the member in whose territories the project is located and one or more members of the technical staff of the Bank.

Section 8. Relationship to other international organizations

(a) The Bank, within the terms of this Agreement, shall cooperate with any general international organization and with public international organizations having specialized responsibilities in related fields. Any arrangements for such cooperation which would involve a modification of any provision of this Agreement may be effected only after amendment to this Agreement under Article VIII.

(b) In making decisions on applications for loans or guarantees relating to matters directly within the competence of any international organization of the types specified in the preceding paragraph and participated in primarily by members of the Bank, the Bank shall give consideration to the views and recommendations of such organization.

Section 9. Location of offices

(a) The principal office of the Bank shall be located in the territory of the member holding the greatest number of shares.

(b) The Bank may establish agencies or branch offices in the territories of any member of the Bank.

Section 10. Regional offices and councils

(a) The Bank may establish regional offices and determine the location of, and the areas to be covered by, each regional office.

(b) Each regional office shall be advised by a regional council representative of the entire area and selected in such manner as the Bank may decide.

Section 11. Depositories

(a) Each member shall designate its central bank as a depository for all the Bank's holdings of its currency or, if it has no central bank, it shall designate such other institution as may be acceptable to the Bank.

(b) The Bank may hold other assets, including gold, in depositories designated by the five members having the largest number of shares and in such other designated depositories as the Bank may select. Initially, at least one-half of the gold holdings of the Bank shall be held in the depository designated by the member in whose territory the Bank has its principal office, and at least forty percent shall be held in the depositories designated by the remaining four members referred to above, each of such depositories to hold, initially, not less than the amount of gold paid on the shares of the member designating it. However, all transfers of gold by the Bank shall be made with due regard to the costs of transport and anticipated requirements of the Bank. In an emergency the Executive Directors may transfer all or any part of the Bank's gold holdings to any place where they can be adequately protected.

Section 12. Form of holdings of currency

The Bank shall accept from any member, in place of any part of the member's currency, paid in to the Bank under Article II, Section 7 (i), or to meet amortization payments on loans made with such currency, and not needed by the Bank in its operations, notes or similar obligations issued by the Government of the member or the depository designated by such member, which shall be non-negotiable, non-interest-bearing and payable at their par value on demand by credit to the account of the Bank in the designated depository.

Section 13. Publication of reports and provision of information

(a) The Bank shall publish an annual report containing an audited statement of its accounts and shall circulate to members at intervals of three months or less a summary statement of its financial position and a profit and loss statement showing the results of its operations.

(b) The Bank may publish such other reports as it deems desirable to carry out its purposes.

(c) Copies of all reports, statements and publications made under this section shall be distributed to members.

Section 14. Allocation of net income

(a) The Board of Governors shall determine annually what part of the Bank's net income, after making provision for reserves, shall be allocated to surplus and what part, if any, shall be distributed.

(b) If any part is distributed, up to two per cent non-cumulative shall be paid, as a first charge against the distribution for any year, to each member on the basis of the average amount of the loans outstanding during the year made under Article IV, Section 1 (a) (i), out of currency corresponding to its subscription. If two per cent is paid as a first charge, any balance remaining to be distributed shall be paid to all members in proportion to their shares. Payments to each member shall be made in its own currency, or if that currency is not available in other currency acceptable to the member. If such payments are made in currencies other than the member's own currency, the transfer of the currency and its use by the receiving member after payment shall be without restriction by the members.

ARTICLE VI

WITHDRAWAL AND SUSPENSION OF MEMBERSHIP: SUSPENSION OF OPERATIONS

Section 1. Right of members to withdraw

Any member may withdraw from the Bank at any time by transmitting a notice in writing to the Bank at its principal office. Withdrawal shall become effective on the date such notice is received.

Section 2. Suspension of membership

If a member fails to fulfill any of its obligations to the Bank, the Bank may suspend its membership by decision of a majority of the Governors, exercising a majority of the total voting power. The member so suspended shall automatically cease to be a member one year from the date of its suspension unless a decision is taken by the same majority to restore the member to good standing.

While under suspension, a member shall not be entitled to exercise any rights under this Agreement, except the right of withdrawal, but shall remain subject to all obligations.

Section 3. Cessation of membership in International Monetary Fund.

Any member which ceases to be a member of the International Monetary Fund shall automatically cease after three months to be a member of the Bank unless the Bank by three-fourths of the total voting power has agreed to allow it to remain a member.

Section 4. Settlement of accounts with governments ceasing to be members.

(a) When a government ceases to be a member, it shall remain liable for its direct obligations to the Bank and for its contingent liabilities to the Bank so long as any part of the loans or guarantees contracted before it ceased to be a member are outstanding; but it shall cease to incur liabilities with respect to loans and guarantees entered into thereafter by the Bank and to share either in the income or the expenses of the Bank.

(b) At the time a government ceases to be a member, the Bank shall arrange for the repurchase of its shares as a part of the settlement of accounts with such government in accordance with the provisions of (c) and (d) below. For this purpose the repurchase price of the shares shall be the value shown by the books of the Bank on the day the government ceases to be a member.

(c) The payment for shares repurchased by the Bank under this section shall be governed by the following conditions:

(i) Any amount due to the government for its shares shall be withheld so long as the government, its central bank or any of its agencies remains liable, as borrower or guarantor, to the Bank and such amount may, at the option of the Bank, be applied on any such liability as it matures. No amount shall be withheld on account of the liability of the government resulting from its subscription for shares under Article II, Section 5 (ii). In any event, no amount due to a member for its shares shall be paid until six months after the date upon which the government ceases to be a member.

(ii) Payments for shares may be made from time to time, upon their surrender by the government, to the extent by which the amount due as the repurchase price in (b) above exceeds the aggregate of liabilities on loans and guarantees in (c) (i) above until the former member has received the full repurchase price.

(iii) Payments shall be made in the currency of the country receiving payment or at the option of the Bank in gold.

(iv) If losses are sustained by the Bank on any guarantees, participations in loans, or loans which were outstanding on the date when the government ceased to be a member, and the amount of such losses exceeds the amount of the reserve provided against losses on the date when the government ceased to be a member, such government shall be obligated to repay upon demand the amount by which the repurchase price of its shares would have been reduced, if the losses had been taken into account when the repurchase price was determined. In addition, the former member government shall remain liable on any call for unpaid subscriptions under Article II, Section 5 (h), to the extent that it would have been required to respond if the impairment of capital had occurred and the call had been made at the time the repurchase price of its shares was determined.

(d) If the Bank suspends permanently its operations under Section 5 (b) of this Article, within six months of the date upon which any government ceases to be a member, all rights of such government shall be determined by the provisions of Section 5 of this Article.

Section 5. Suspension of operations and settlement of obligations

(a) In an emergency the Executive Directors may suspend temporarily operations in respect of new loans and guarantees pending an opportunity for further consideration and action by the Board of Governors.

(b) The Bank may suspend permanently its operations in respect of new loans and guarantees by vote of a majority of the Governors, exercising a majority of the total voting power. After such suspension of operations the Bank shall forthwith cease all activities, except those incident to the orderly realization, conservation, and preservation of its assets and settlement of its obligations.

(c) The liability of all members for uncalled subscriptions to the capital stock of the Bank and in respect of the depreciation of their own currencies shall continue until all claims of creditors, including all contingent claims, shall have been discharged.

(d) All creditors holding direct claims shall be paid out of the assets of the Bank, and then out of payments to the Bank on calls on unpaid subscriptions. Before making any payments to creditors holding direct claims, the Executive Directors shall make such arrangements as are necessary, in their judgment, to insure a distribution to holders of contingent claims ratably with creditors holding direct claims.

(e) No distribution shall be made to members on account of their subscriptions to the capital stock of the Bank until

(i) all liabilities to creditors have been discharged or provided for, and

(ii) a majority of the Governors, exercising a majority of the total voting power, have decided to make a distribution.

(f) After a decision to make a distribution has been taken under (e) above, the Executive Directors may by a two-thirds majority vote make successive distributions of the assets of the Bank to members until all of the assets have been distributed. This distribution shall be subject to the prior settlement of all outstanding claims of the Bank against each member.

(g) Before any distribution of assets is made, the Executive Directors shall fix the proportionate share of each member according to the ratio of its shareholding to the total outstanding shares of the Bank.

(h) The Executive Directors shall value the assets to be distributed as at the date of distribution and then proceed to distribute in the following manner:

(i) There shall be paid to each member in its own obligations or those of its official agencies or legal entities within its territories, insofar as they are available for distribution, an amount equivalent in value to its proportionate share of the total amount to be distributed.

(ii) Any balance due to a member after payment has been made under (i) above shall be paid, in its own currency, insofar as it is held by the Bank, up to an amount equivalent in value to such balance.

(iii) Any balance due to a member after payment has been made under (i) and (ii) above shall be paid in gold or currency acceptable to the member, insofar as they are held by the Bank, up to an amount equivalent in value to such balance.

(iv) Any remaining assets held by the Bank after payments have been made to members under (i), (ii) and (iii) above shall be distributed pro rata among the members.

(i) Any member receiving assets distributed by the Bank in accordance with (h) above, shall enjoy the same rights with respect to such assets as the Bank enjoyed prior to their distribution.

ARTICLE VII

Actions may be brought against the Bank only in a court of competent jurisdiction in the territories of a member in which the Bank has an office, has appointed an agent for the purpose of accepting service or notice of process, or has issued or guaranteed securities. No actions shall, however, be brought by members or persons acting for or deriving claims from members. (c) No taxation of any kind shall be levied on any obligation or security issued by the Bank (including any dividend or interest thereon) by whomsoever held—

(i) which discriminates against such obligation or security solely because it is issued by the Bank; or

(ii) if the sole jurisdictional basis for such taxation is the place or currency in which it is issued, made payable or paid, or the location of any office or place of business maintained by the Bank.

(d) No taxation of any kind shall be levied on any obligation or security guaranteed by the Bank (including any dividend or interest thereon) by whomsoever held—

(i) which discriminates against such obligation or security solely because it is guaranteed by the Bank; or

(ii) if the sole jurisdictional basis for such taxation is the location of any office or place of business maintained by the Bank.

Section 10. Application of Article

Each member shall take such action as is necessary in its own territories for the purpose of making effective in terms of its own law the principles set forth in this Article and shall inform the Bank of the detailed action which it has taken.

If the proposed amendment is approved by the Board the Bank shall, by circular letter or telegram, ask all members whether they accept the proposed amendment. When three-fifths of the members, having four-fifths of the total voting power, have accepted the proposed amendment, the Bank shall certify the fact by formal communication addressed to all members.

(b) Notwithstanding (a) above, acceptance by all members is required in the case of any amendment modifying

(i) the right to withdraw from the Bank provided in Article VI, Section 1;

(ii) the right secured by Article II, Section 3 (c);

(iii) the limitation on liability provided in Article II, Section 6.

ARTICLE IX

INTERPRETATION

(a) Any question of interpretation of the provisions of this Agreement arising between any member and the Bank or between any members of the Bank shall be submitted to the Executive Directors for their decision. If the ques-

(b) In any case where the Executive Directors have given a decision under (a) above, any member may require that the question be referred to the Board of Governors, whose decision shall be final. Pending the result of the reference to the Board, the Bank may, so far as it deems necessary, act on the basis of the decision of the Executive Directors.

(c) Whenever a disagreement arises between the Bank and a country which has ceased to be a member, or between the Bank and any member during the permanent suspension of the Bank, such disagreement shall be submitted to arbitration by a tribunal of three arbitrators, one appointed by the Bank, another by the country involved and an umpire who, unless the parties otherwise agree, shall be appointed by the President of the Permanent Court of International Justice or such other authority as may have been prescribed by regulation adopted by the Bank. The umpire shall have full power to settle all questions of procedure in any case where the parties are in disagreement with respect thereto.

ARTICLE X

APPROVAL DEEMED GIVEN

Whenever the approval of any member is required before any act may be done by the Bank, except in Article VIII, approval shall be deemed to have been given unless the member presents an objection within such reasonable period as the Bank may fix in notifying the member of the proposed act.

ARTICLE XI

FINAL PROVISIONS

Section 1. Entry into force

This Agreement shall enter into force when it has been signed on behalf of governments whose minimum subscriptions comprise not less than sixty-five percent of the total subscriptions set forth in Schedule A and when the instruments referred to in Section 2 (a) of this Article have been deposited on their behalf, but in no event shall this Agreement enter into force before May 1, 1945.

Section 2. Signature

(a) Each government on whose behalf this Agreement is signed shall deposit with the Government of the United States of America an instrument setting forth that it has accepted this Agreement in accordance with its law and has taken all steps necessary to enable it to carry out all of its obligations under this Agreement.

(b) Each government shall become a member of the Bank as from the date of the deposit on its behalf of the instrument referred to in (a) above, except that no government shall become a member before this Agreement enters into force under Section 1 of this Article.

(c) The Government of the United States of America shall inform the government of all countries whose names are set forth in Schedule A, and all governments whose membership is approved in accordance with Article II, Section 1 (b), of all signatures of this Agreement and of the deposit of all instruments referred to in (a) above.

(d) At the time this Agreement is signed on its behalf, each government shall transmit to the Government of the United States of America one one-hundredth of one percent of the price of each share in gold or United States dollars for the purpose of meeting administrative expenses of the Bank. This payment shall be credited on account of the payment to be made in accordance with Article II, Section 8 (a). The Government of the United States of America shall hold such funds in a special deposit account and shall transmit them to the Board of Governors of the Bank when the initial meeting has been called under Section 3 of this Article. If this Agreement has not come into force by December 31, 1945, the Government of the United States of America shall return such funds to the governments that transmitted them.

(e) This Agreement shall remain open for signature at Washington on behalf of the governments of the countries whose names are set forth in Schedule A until December 31, 1945.

(h) In the case of governments whose metropolitan territories have been under enemy occupation, the deposit of the instrument referred to in (a) above may be delayed until one hundred and eighty days after the date on which these territories have been liberated. If, however, it is not deposited by any such government before the expiration of this period, the signature affixed on behalf of that government shall become void and the portion of its subscription paid under (d) above shall be returned to it.

(i) Paragraphs (d) and (h) shall come into force with regard to each signatory government as from the date of its signature.

Section 3. Inauguration of the Bank

(a) As soon as this Agreement enters into force under Section 1 of this Article, each member shall appoint a governor and the member to whom the largest number of shares is allocated in Schedule A shall call the first meeting of the Board of Governors.

(b) At the first meeting of the Board of Governors, arrangements shall be made for the selection of provisional executive directors. The governments of the five countries, to which the largest number of shares are allocated in Schedule A, shall appoint provisional executive directors. SCHEDULE B

ELECTION OF EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

1. The election of the elective executive directors shall be by ballot of the Governors eligible to vote under Article V, Section 4 (b).

2. In balloting for the elective executive directors, each governor eligible to vote shall cast for one person all of the votes to which the member appointing him is entitled under Section 3 of Article V. The seven persons receiving the greatest number of votes shall be executive directors, except that no person who receives less than fourteen percent of the total of the votes which can be cast (eligible votes) shall be considered elected.

3. When seven persons are not elected on the first ballot, a second ballot shall be held in which the person who received the lowest number of votes shall be ineligible for election and in which there shall vote only (a) those governors who voted in the first ballot for a person not elected and (b) those governors whose votes for a person elected are deemed under 4 below to have raised the votes cast for that person above thereby exceeded fifteen per cent.

4. In determining whether the votes cast by a governor are to be deemed to have raised the total of any person above fifteen percent of the eligible votes, the fifteen percent shall be deemed to include, first, the votes of the governor casting the largest number of votes for such person, then the votes of the governor casting the next largest number, and so on until fifteen percent is reached.

5. Any governor, part of whose votes must be counted in order to raise the total of any person above fourteen percent, shall be considered as casting all of his votes for such person even if the total votes for such person thereby exceeded fifteen percent.

6. If, after the second ballot, seven persons have not been elected, further ballots shall be held on the same principles until seven persons have been elected, provided that after six persons are elected, the seventh may be elected by a simple majority of the remaining votes and shall be deemed to have been elected by all such votes.

¹ The quota of Denmark was determined by the Bank, after Denmark had accepted membership, at $68,000,000.

VI. The International Monetary Fund

A. THE BRETTON WOODS CONFERENCE

The United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference met in Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, from July 1 to 22, 1944, at the invitation of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, of the United States. Participating in the Conference were representatives of 44 United and Associated Nations.

The Conference was called to formulate definite proposals for an International Monetary Fund and an International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Two years of exploratory discussions between the monetary and financial experts of the United Nations had preceded the formal meeting at Bretton Woods, and large areas of agreement had already been reached by the time the Conference began.

At the inaugural session of the Conference on July 1, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., chairman of the United States delegation, was elected President of the Conference. On the following day the Conference established three Commissions, among which one, under the chairmanship of Mr. Harry D. White, was to formulate proposals for the Fund. The Final Act of the Conference, which included the Articles of Agreement of the International Monetary Fund, was submitted to the governments of the participating nations.

B. PURPOSES

The purposes of the Fund, as stated in the Articles of Agreement, are:

(1) To promote international monetary cooperation through a permanent institution which provides the machinery for consultation and collaboration on international monetary problems.

(2) To facilitate the expansion and balanced growth of international trade, and to contribute thereby to the promotion and maintenance of high levels of employment and real income and to the development of the productive resources of all members as primary objectives of economic policy.

(3) To promote exchange stability, to maintain orderly exchange arrangements among members, and to avoid competitive exchange depreciation.

(4) To assist in the establishment of a multilateral system of payments in respect of current transactions between members and in the elimination of foreign exchange restrictions which hamper the growth of world trade.

(5) To give confidence to members by making the Fund's resources available to them under adequate safeguards, thus providing them with opportunity to correct maladjustment in their balance of payments without resorting to measures destructive of national or international prosperity.

(6) In accordance with the above, to shorten the duration and lessen the degree of disequilibrium in the international balances of payments of members.

C. STRUCTURE

The Fund has a Board of Governors, Executive Directors, a Managing Director and a staff.

All powers of the Fund are vested in the Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor and one alternate appointed by each member. As stated in the Articles of Agreement, the Board may delegate to the Executive Directors authority to exercise any powers of the Board, except the power to:

(1) Admit new members and determine the conditions of their admission.

(2) Approve a revision of quotas.

(3) Approve a uniform change in the par value of the currencies of all members.

(4) Make arrangements to co-operate with other international organizations (other than informal arrangements of a temporary or administrative character).

(5) Determine the distribution of the net income of the Fund.

(6) Require a member to withdraw.

(7) Decide to liquidate the Fund.

There are at least twelve Executive Directors, five of whom are appointed by members having the largest quotas. Seven are elected every two years as follows: five by members not entitled to appoint Directors, other than the American Republics; and two by the American Republics not entitled to appoint Directors.

In accordance with a resolution of the inaugural meeting at Savannah, an additional Director has been elected, bringing the total to thirteen. The Executive Directors are responsible for the conduct of the general operations of the Fund and exercise all the powers delegated to them by the Board of Governors.

The Executive Directors elect a Managing Director, who may not be a Governor or an Executive Director. He is the chairman of the Executive Directors. As the chief of the operating staff he conducts, under the direction of the Executive Directors, the ordinary business of the Fund.

Except as otherwise provided, decisions of the Fund are made by a simple majority vote. Each Governor casts as a unit all votes allotted to that member State which he represents. In the case of Executive Directors, an appointed Director casts as a unit all votes allotted to the member appointing him; an elected Executive Director casts as a unit the total number of votes allotted to those member States which elected him.

D. ACTIVITIES

The Articles of Agreement of the Fund came into force on December 27, 1945, when it was signed and instruments of acceptance were deposited in Washington on behalf of 29 governments with approximately 80 per cent of the total subscriptions.

The United States, in accordance with the Bretton Woods Agreement, issued an invitation to the other member governments to attend the Inaugural Meeting of the Board of Governors. An invitation to send observers to this meeting was extended to those governments which participated in the Bretton Woods Conference but had not signed the Articles of Agreement. The United Nations Economic and Social Council also was invited to send an observer.

The Inaugural Meeting of the Board of Governors took place in Savannah, Georgia, from March 8 to 18, 1946. It was mainly devoted to organizational and administrative matters. The Board adopted the By-Laws of the Fund, which were complementary to the Articles of Agreement of the Fund. It was decided that the Fund should be located within the metropolitan area of Washington, D.C., in the United States. The Board also decided that the time limit for admission to membership of participants in the Bretton Woods Conference should be extended to December 31, 1946, and that the applications for membership by Italy, Lebanon, Syria and Turkey should be referred to the Executive Directors for study and consideration.

The Executive Directors of the Fund met on May 6, 1946. Camille Gutt (Belgium) was elected Managing Director.

In their early meetings the Executive Directors considered that from the standpoint of its organization the Fund should be far enough advanced by September 1946 to warrant undertaking its major task of the initial determination of par values. This goal was realized and, accordingly, on September 12, cables were sent by the Managing Director to all member governments requesting information within 30 days concerning the par value of their currency based on the rates of exchange prevailing on October 28, 1945.

The Fund approved requests for additional time for the determination of initial par values by Brazil, China, the Dominican Republic, Greece, Poland, Yugoslavia, France with respect to French Indo China, and the Netherlands with respect to the Netherlands Indies. As required by the Articles of Agreement, the par value of the currency of each member was expressed in terms of gold as a common denominator or in terms of the United States dollar of the weight and fineness in effect on July 1, 1944. On the basis of the information received, the Fund reached agreement with over 30 of its member governments on the structure of exchange rates which would govern most of the foreign transactions of the world. The members of the Fund are obligated under the Articles of Agreement to keep the foreign exchange rates for their currencies within one per cent of the par value that is established by agreement with the Fund. Only after consultation with the Fund and if it is necessary to correct a fundamental disequilibrium in the international balance of payment can a member make a change in the par value of its currency.

By the time of the first annual meeting of the Board of Governors, held in Washington, D.C., from September 27 to October 3, 1946, the initial organization of the Fund had been completed and the institution had become an operating agency. The Board approved the applications for membership of Italy, Lebanon, Syria and Turkey, provided they accepted membership by April 15, 1947, on the conditions approved by the Board. The admission of these countries brought total membership in the Fund to 44 States. Increases in the quotas of France and Paraguay were approved. The Board of Governors selected London as the site of its second annual meeting, scheduled to convene in September 1947.

After the agreements on initial parities had been reached with most of its members, the Fund, by March 1947, was in a position to begin exchange transactions. In this connection, the Fund sells to a member for its own currency or for gold the foreign exchange it needs to make payments for imports and other current transactions. The foreign exchange sold by the Fund for a member's currency is to be repurchased by the member under specified conditions. Exchange transactions began with two operations: the first, $25,000,000 for France; the second, $12,000,000 for the Netherlands. The transactions with France was made entirely in United States dollars in exchange for francs at the rates set by the Fund to govern world currency transactions. The Netherlands obtained $6,000,000 in United States dollars and the remaining half in British pounds in exchange for an equivalent amount in Dutch guilders.

E. ADMINISTRATIVE BUDGET

The administrative budget of the Fund is prepared annually by the Managing Director for the approval of the Board of Governors. Due to the uncertainty in the amount and number of the Fund's transactions during the first financial year, and the resulting impossibility of estimating the staff and other administrative requirements for these transactions, a report of the required administrative budget was not submitted to the first annual meeting of the Board of Governors. An administrative budget will, however, be submitted to the second annual meeting of the Board of Governors.

ANNEX II

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

The Governments on whose behalf the present Agreement is signed agree as follows:

INTRODUCTORY ARTICLE

The International Monetary Fund is established and shall operate in accordance with the following provisions:

ARTICLE I. PURPOSES

The purposes of the International Monetary Fund are:

- (i) To promote international monetary cooperation through a permanent institution which provides the machinery for consultation and collaboration on international monetary problems.
- (ii) To facilitate the expansion and balanced growth of international trade, and to contribute thereby to the promotion and maintenance of high levels of employment and real income and to the development of the productive resources of all members as primary objectives of economic policy.
- (iii) To promote exchange stability, to maintain orderly exchange arrangements among members, and to avoid competitive exchange depreciation.
- (iv) To assist in the establishment of a multilateral system of payments in respect of current transactions between members and in the elimination of foreign exchange restrictions which hamper the growth of world trade.
- (v) To give confidence to members by making the Fund's resources available to them under adequate safeguards, thus providing them with opportunity to correct maladjustments in their balance of payments without resorting to measures destructive of national or international prosperity.
- (vi) In accordance with the above, to shorten the duration and lessen the degree of disequilibrium in the international balances of payments of members.

The Fund shall be guided in all its decisions by the purposes set forth in this Article.

ARTICLE II. MEMBERSHIP

SECTION 1. Original members.—The original members of the Fund shall be those of the countries represented at the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference whose governments accept membership before the date specified in Article XX, Section 2 (e).

SEC. 2. Other members.—Membership shall be open to the governments of other countries at such times and in accordance with such terms as may be prescribed by the Fund.

ARTICLE III. QUOTAS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

SECTION 1. Quotas.—Each member shall be assigned a quota. The quotas of the members represented at the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference which accept membership before the date specified in Article XX, Section 2 (e), shall be those set forth in Schedule A. The quotas of other members shall be determined by the Fund.

SEC. 2. Adjustment of quotas. The Fund shall at intervals of five years review, and if it deems it appropriate propose an adjustment of, the quotas of the members. It may also, if it thinks fit, consider at any other time the adjustment of any particular quota at the request of the member concerned. A four-fifths majority of the total voting power shall be required for any change in quotas and no quota shall be changed without the consent of the member concerned.

SEC. 3. Subscriptions: Time, place, and form of payment.—(a) The subscription of each member shall be equal to its quota and shall be paid in full to the Fund at the appropriate depository on or before the date when the member becomes eligible under Article XX, Section 4 (c) or (d), to buy currencies from the Fund.

(b) Each member shall pay in gold, as a minimum, the smaller of

- (i) twenty-five per cent of its quota; or
- (ii) ten per cent of its net official holdings of gold and United States dollars as at the date when the Fund notifies members under Article XX, Section 4 (a) that it will shortly be in a position to begin exchange transactions.

Each member shall furnish to the Fund the data necessary to determine its net official holdings of gold and United States dollars.

(c) Each member shall pay the balance of its quota in its own currency.

(d) If the net official holdings of gold and United States dollars of any member as at the date referred to in (b) (ii) above are not ascertainable because its territories have been occupied by the enemy, the Fund shall fix an appropriate alternative date for determining such holdings. If such date is later than that on which the country becomes eligible under Article XX, Section 4 (c) or (d), to buy currencies from the Fund, the Fund and the member shall agree on a provisional gold payment to be made under (b) above, and the balance of the member's subscription shall be paid in the member's currency, subject to appropriate adjustment between the member and the Fund when the net official holdings have been ascertained.

SEC. 4. Payments when quotas are changed.—

(a) Each member which consents to an increase in its quota shall, within thirty days after the date of its consent, pay to the Fund twenty-five per cent of the increase in gold and the balance in its own currency. If, however, on the date when the member consents to an increase, its monetary reserves are less than its new quota, the Fund may reduce the proportion of the increase to be paid in gold.

b) If a member consents to a reduction in its quota, the Fund shall, within thirty days after the date of the consent, pay to the member an amount equal to the reduction. The payment shall be made in the member's currency and in such amount of gold as may be necessary to prevent reducing the Fund's holdings of the currency below seventy-five per cent of the new quota.

SEC. 5. Substitution of securities for currency.—The Fund shall accept from any member in place of any part of the member's currency which in the judgment of the Fund is not needed for its operations, notes or similar obligations issued by the member or the depository designated by the member under Article XIII, Section 2, which shall be non-negotiable, non-interest bearing and payable at their par value on demand by crediting the account of the Fund in the designated depository. This Section shall apply not only to currency subscribed by members but also to any currency otherwise due to, or acquired by, the Fund.

ARTICLE IV. PAR VALUES OF CURRENCIES

SECTION 1. Expression of par values.—(a) The par value of the currency of each member shall be expressed in terms of gold as a common denominator or in terms of the United States dollar of the weight and fineness in effect on July 1, 1944.

(b) All computations relating to currencies of members for the purpose of applying the provisions of this Agreement shall be on the basis of their par values.

SEC. 2. Gold purchases based on par values.—The Fund shall prescribe a margin above and below par value for transactions in gold by members, and no member shall buy gold at a price above par value plus the prescribed margin, or sell gold at a price below par value minus the prescribed margin.

SEC. 3. Foreign exchange dealings based on parity.—The maximum and the minimum rates for exchange transactions between the currencies of members taking place within their territories shall not differ from parity

(i) in the case of spot exchange transactions, by more than one per cent; and

(ii) in the case of other exchange transactions, by a margin which exceeds the margin for spot exchange transactions by more than the Fund considers reasonable.

SEC. 4. Obligations regarding exchange stability.—(a) Each member undertakes to collaborate with the Fund to promote exchange stability, to maintain orderly exchange arrangements with other members, and to avoid competitive exchange alterations.

(b) Each member undertakes, through appropriate measures consistent with this Agreement, to permit within its territories exchange transactions between its currency and the currencies of other members only within the limits prescribed under Section 3 of this Article. A member whose monetary authorities, for the settlement of international transactions, in fact freely buy and sell gold within the limits prescribed by the Fund under Section 2 of this Article shall be deemed to be fulfilling this undertaking.

SEC. 5. Changes in par values.—(a) A member shall not propose a change in the par value of its currency except to correct a fundamental disequilibrium.

(b) A change in the par value of a member's currency may be made only on the proposal of the member and only after consultation with the Fund.

(c) When a change is proposed, the Fund shall first take into account the changes, if any, which have already taken place in the initial par value of the member's currency as determined under Article XX, Section 4. If the proposed change, together with all previous changes, whether increases or decreases,

(i) does not exceed ten per cent of the initial par value, the Fund shall raise no objection;

(ii) does not exceed a further ten per cent of the initial par value, the Fund may either concur or object, but shall declare its attitude within seventy-two hours if the member so requests;

(iii) is not within (i) or (ii) above, the Fund may either concur or object, but shall be entitled to a longer period in which to declare its attitude.

(d) Uniform changes in par values made under Section 7 of this Article shall not be taken into account in determining whether a proposed change falls within (i), (ii), or (iii) of (c) above.

(e) A member may change the par value of its currency without the concurrence of the Fund if the change does not affect the international transactions of members of the Fund.

(f) The Fund shall concur in a proposed change which is within the terms of (c) (ii) or (c) (iii) above if it is satisfied that the change is necessary to correct a fundamental disequilibrium. In particular, provided it is so satisfied, it shall not object to a proposed change because of the domestic social or political policies of the member proposing the change.

SEC. 6. Effect of unauthorized changes.—If a member changes the par value of its currency despite the objection of the Fund, in cases where the Fund is entitled to object, the member shall be ineligible to use the resources of the Fund unless the Fund otherwise determines; and if, after the expiration of a reasonable period, the difference between the member and the Fund continues, the matter shall be subject to the provisions of Article XV, Section 2 (b).

SEC. 7. Uniform changes in par values.—Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 5 (b) of this Article, the Fund by a majority of the total voting power may make uniform proportionate changes in the par values of the currencies of all members, provided each such change is approved by every member which has ten per cent or more of the total of the quotas. The par value of a member's currency shall, however, not be changed under this provision if, within seventy-two hours of the Fund's action, the member informs the Fund that it does not wish the par value of its currency to be changed by such action.

SEC. 8. Maintenance of gold value of the Fund's assets.—(a) The gold value of the Fund's assets shall be maintained notwithstanding changes in the par or foreign exchange value of the currency of any member.

(b) Whenever (i) the par value of a member's currency is reduced, or (ii) the foreign exchange value of a member's currency has, in the opinion of the Fund, depreciated to a significant extent within that member's territories, the member shall pay to the Fund within a reasonable time an amount of its own currency equal to the reduction in the gold value of its currency held by the Fund.

(c) Whenever the par value of a member's currency is increased, the Fund shall return to such member within a reasonable time an amount in its currency equal to the increase in the gold value of its currency held by the Fund.

(d) The provisions of this Section shall apply to a uniform proportionate change in the par values of the currencies of all members, unless at the time when such a change is proposed the Fund decides otherwise.

SEC. 9. Separate currencies within a member's territories.—A member proposing a change in the par value of its currency shall be deemed, unless it declares otherwise, to be proposing a corresponding change in the par value of the separate currencies of all territories in respect of which it has accepted this Agreement under Article XX, Section 2 (g). It shall, however, be open to a member to declare that its proposal relates either to the metropolitan currency alone, or only to one or more specified separate currencies, or to the metropolitan currency and one or more specified separate currencies.

ARTICLE V. TRANSACTIONS WITH THE FUND

SECTION 1. Agencies dealing with the Fund.—Each member shall deal with the Fund only through its Treasury, central bank, stabilization fund, or other similar fiscal agency and the Fund shall deal only with or through the same agencies.

SEC. 2. Limitation on the Fund's operations.—Except as otherwise provided in this Agreement, operations on the account of the Fund shall be limited to transactions for the purpose of supplying a member, on the initiative of such member, with the currency of another member in exchange for gold or for the currency of the member desiring to make the purchase.

SEC. 3. Conditions governing use of the Fund's resources.—(a) A member shall be entitled to buy the currency of another member from the Fund in exchange for its own currency subject to the following conditions:

(i) The member desiring to purchase the currency represents that it is presently needed for making in that currency payments which are consistent with the provisions of this Agreement;

(ii) The Fund has not given notice under Article VII, Section 3, that its holdings of the currency desired have become scarce;

(iii) The proposed purchase would not cause the Fund's holdings of the purchasing member's currency to increase by more than twenty-five per cent of its quota during the period of twelve months ending on the date of the purchase nor to exceed two hundred per cent of its quota, but the twenty-five per cent limitation shall apply only to the extent that the Fund's holdings of the member's currency have been brought above seventy-five per cent of its quota if they had been below that amount;

(iv) The Fund has not previously declared under Section 5 of this Article, Article IV,

Section 6, Article VI, Section 1, or Article XV, Section 2 (a), that the member desiring to purchase is ineligible to use the resources of the Fund.

(b) A member shall not be entitled without the permission of the Fund to use the Fund's resources to acquire currency to hold against forward exchange transactions.

SEC. 4. Waiver of conditions.—The Fund may in its discretion, and on terms which safeguard its interests, waive any of the conditions prescribed in Section 3 (a) of this Article, especially in the case of members with a record of avoiding large or continuous use of the Fund's resources. In making a waiver it shall take into consideration periodic or exceptional requirements of the member requesting the waiver. The Fund shall also take into consideration a member's willingness to pledge as collateral security gold, silver, securities, or other acceptable assets having a value sufficient in the opinion of the Fund to protect its interests and may require as a condition of waiver the pledge of such collateral security.

SEC. 5. Ineligibility to use the Fund's resources.—Whenever the Fund is of the opinion that any member is using the resources of the Fund in a manner contrary to the purposes of the Fund, it shall present to the member a report setting forth the views of the Fund and prescribing a suitable time for reply. After presenting such a report to a member, the Fund may limit the use of its resources by the member. If no reply to the report is received from the member within the prescribed time, or if the reply received is unsatisfactory, the Fund may continue to limit the member's use of the Fund's resources or may, after giving reasonable notice to the member, declare it ineligible to use the resources of the Fund.

SEC. 6. Purchases of currencies from the Fund for gold.—(a) Any member desiring to obtain, directly or indirectly, the currency of another member for gold shall, provided that it can do so with equal advantage, acquire it by the sale of gold to the Fund.

(b) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to preclude any member from selling in any market gold newly produced from mines located within its territories.

SEC. 7. Repurchase by a member of its currency held by the Fund.—(a) A member may repurchase from the Fund and the Fund shall sell for gold any part of the Fund's holdings of its currency in excess of its quota.

(b) At the end of each financial year of the Fund, a member shall repurchase from the Fund with gold or convertible currencies, as determined in accordance with Schedule B, part of the Fund's holdings of its currency under the following conditions:

(i) Each member shall use in repurchases of its own currency from the Fund an amount of its monetary reserves equal in value to one-half of any increase that has occurred during the year in the Fund's holdings of its currency plus one-half of any increase, or minus one-half of any decrease, that has occurred during the year in the member's monetary reserves. This rule shall not apply when a member's monetary reserves have decreased during the year by more than the Fund's holdings of its currency have increased.

(ii) If after the repurchase described in (i) above (if required) has been made, a member's holdings of another member's currency (or of gold acquired from that member) are found to have increased by reason of transactions in terms of that currency with other members or persons in their territories, the member whose holdings of such currency (or gold) have thus increased shall use the increase to repurchase its own currency from the Fund.

(c) None of the adjustments described in (b) above shall be carried to a point at which

(i) the member's monetary reserves are below its quota, or

(ii) the Fund's holdings of its currency are below seventy-five per cent of its quota, or

(iii) the Fund's holdings of any currency required to be used are above seventy-five per cent of the quota of the member concerned.

SEC. 8. Charges.—(a) Any member buying the currency of another member from the Fund in exchange for its own currency shall pay a service charge uniform for all members of three-fourths per cent in addition to the parity price. The Fund in its discretion may increase this service charge to not more than one per cent or reduce it to not less than one-half per cent.

(b) The Fund may levy a reasonable handling charge on any member buying gold from the Fund or selling gold to the Fund.

(c) The Fund shall levy charges uniform for all members which shall be payable by any member on the average daily balances of its currency held by the Fund in excess of its quota. These charges shall be at the following rates:

(i) On amounts not more than twenty-five per cent in excess of the quota: no charge for the first three months; one-half per cent per annum for the next nine months; and thereafter an increase in the charge of one-half per cent for each subsequent year.

(ii) On amounts more than twenty-five per cent and not more than fifty per cent in excess of the quota: an additional one-half per cent for the first year; and an additional one-half per cent for each subsequent year.

(iii) On each additional bracket of twenty-five per cent in excess of the quota: an additional one-half per cent for the first year; and an additional one-half per cent for each subsequent year.

(d) Whenever the Fund's holdings of a member's currency are such that the charge applicable to any bracket for any period has reached the rate of four per cent per annum, the Fund and the member shall consider means by which the Fund's holdings of the currency can be reduced. Thereafter, the charges shall rise in accordance with the provisions of (c) above until they reach five per cent and failing agreement, the Fund may then impose such charges as it deems appropriate.

(e) The rates referred to in (c) and (d) above may be changed by a three-fourths majority of the total voting power.

(f) All charges shall be paid in gold. If, however, the member's monetary reserves are less than one-half of its quota, it shall pay in gold only that proportion of the charges due which such reserves bear to one-half of its quota, and shall pay the balance in its own currency.

ARTICLE VI. CAPITAL TRANSFERS

SECTION 1. Use of the Fund's resources for capital transfers.—(a) A member may not make net use of the Fund's resources to meet a large or sustained outflow of capital, and the Fund may request a member to exercise controls to prevent such use of the resources of the Fund. If, after receiving such a request, a member fails to exercise appropriate controls, the Fund may declare the member ineligible to use the resources of the Fund.

(b) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed

(i) to prevent the use of the resources of the Fund for capital transactions of reasonable amount required for the expansion of exports or in the ordinary course of trade, banking or other business, or

(ii) to affect capital movements which are met out of a member's own resources of gold and foreign exchange, but members undertake that such capital movements will be in accordance with the purposes of the Fund.

SEC. 2 Special provisions for capital transfers.—If the Fund's holdings of the currency of a member have remained below seventy-five per cent of its quota for an immediately preceding period of not less than six months, such member, if it has not been declared ineligible to use the resources of the Fund under Section 1 of this Article, Article IV, Section 6, Article V, Section 5, or Article XV, Section 2 (a), shall be entitled, notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1 (a) of this Article, to buy the currency of another member from the Fund with its own currency for any purpose, including capital transfers. Purchases for capital transfers under this Section shall not, however, be permitted if they have the effect of raising the Fund's holdings of the currency of the member desiring to purchase above seventy-five per cent of its quota, or of reducing the Fund's holdings of the currency desired below seventy-five per cent of the quota of the member whose currency is desired.

SEC. 3. Controls of capital transfers.—Members may exercise such controls as are necessary to regulate international capital movements, but no member may exercise these controls in a manner which will restrict payments for current transactions or which will unduly delay transfers of funds in settlement of commitments, except as provided in Article VII, Section 3 (b), and in Article XIV, Section 2.

ARTICLE VII. SCARCE CURRENCIES

SECTION 1. General scarcity of currency.—If the Fund finds that a general scarcity of a particular currency is developing, the Fund may so inform members and may issue a report setting forth the causes of the scarcity and containing recommendations designed to bring it to an end. A representative of the member whose currency is involved shall participate in the preparation of the report.

SEC. 2. Measures to replenish the Fund's holdings of scarce currencies.—The Fund may, if it deems such action appropriate to replenish its holdings of any member's currency, take either or both of the following steps:

(i) Propose to the member that, on terms and conditions agreed between the Fund and the member, the latter lend its currency to the Fund or that, with the approval of the member, the Fund borrow such currency from some other source either within or outside the territories of the member, but no member shall be under any obligation to make such loans to the Fund or to approve the borrowing of its currency by the Fund from any other source.

(ii) Require the member to sell its currency to the Fund for gold.

SEC. 3. Scarcity of the Fund's holdings.—(a) If it becomes evident to the Fund that the demand for a member's currency seriously threatens the Fund's ability to supply that currency, the Fund, whether or not it has issued a report under Section 1 of this Article, shall formally declare such currency scarce and shall thenceforth apportion its existing and accruing supply of the scarce currency with due regard to the relative needs of members, the general international economic situation, and any other pertinent considerations. The Fund shall also issue a report concerning its action.

(b) A formal declaration under (a) above shall operate as an authorization to any member, after consultation with the Fund, temporarily to impose limitations on the freedom of exchange operations in the scarce currency. Subject to the provisions of Article IV, Sections 3 and 4, the member shall have complete jurisdiction in determining the nature of such limitations, but they shall be no more restrictive than is necessary to limit the demand for the scarce currency to the supply held by, or accruing to, the member in question; and they shall be relaxed and removed as rapidly as conditions permit.

(c) The authorization under (b) above shall expire whenever the Fund formally declares the currency in question to be no longer scarce.

SEC. 4. Administration of restrictions.—Any member imposing restrictions in respect of the currency of any other member pursuant to the provisions of Section 3 (b) of this Article shall give sympathetic consideration to any representations by the other member regarding the administration of such restrictions.

SEC. 5. Effect of other international agreements on restrictions.—Members agree not to invoke the obligations of any engagements entered into with other members prior to this Agreement in such a manner as will prevent the operation of the provisions of this Article.

ARTICLE VIII. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS OF MEMBERS

SECTION 1. Introduction.—In addition to the obligations assumed under other articles of this Agreement, each member undertakes the obligations set out in this Article.

SEC. 2. Avoidance of restrictions on current payments.—(a) Subject to the provisions of Article VII, Section 3 (b), and Article XIV, Section 2, no member shall, without the approval of the Fund, impose restrictions on the making of payments and transfers for current international transactions.

(b) Exchange contracts which involve the currency of any member and which are contrary to the exchange control regulations of that member maintained or imposed consistently with this Agreement shall be unenforceable in the territories of any member. In addition, members may, by mutual accord, cooperate in measures for the purpose of making the exchange control regulations of either member more effective, provided that such measures and regulations are consistent with this Agreement.

SEC. 3. Avoidance of discriminatory currency practices.—No member shall engage in, or permit any of its fiscal agencies referred to in Article V, Section 1, to engage in, any discriminatory currency arrangements or multiple currency practices except as authorized under this Agreement or approved by the Fund. If such arrangements and practices are engaged in at the date when this Agreement enters into force the member concerned shall consult with the Fund as to their progressive removal unless they are maintained or imposed under Article XIV, Section 2, in which case the provisions of Section 4 of that Article shall apply.

SEC. 4. Convertibility of foreign-held balances.—(a) Each member shall buy balances of its currency held by another member if the latter, in requesting the purchase, represents

- (i) that the balances to be bought have been recently acquired as a result of current transactions; or
- (ii) that their conversion is needed for making payments for current transactions.

The buying member shall have the option to pay either in the currency of the member making the request or in gold.

(b) The obligation in (a) above shall not apply

- (i) when the convertibility of the balances has been restricted consistently with Section 2 of this Article, or Article VI, Section 3; or
- (ii) when the balances have accumulated as a result of transactions effected before the removal by a member of restrictions maintained or imposed under Article XIV, Section 2; or
- (iii) when the balances have been acquired contrary to the exchange regulations of the member which is asked to buy them; or
- (iv) when the currency of the member requesting the purchase has been declared scarce under Article VII, Section 3 (a); or
- (v) when the member requested to make the purchase is for any reason not entitled to buy currencies of other members from the Fund for its own currency.

SEC. 5. Furnishing of information.—(a) The Fund may require members to furnish it with such information as it deems necessary for its operations, including, as the minimum necessary for the effective discharge of the Fund's duties, national data on the following matters:

- (i) Official holdings at home and abroad, of (1) gold, (2) foreign exchange.
- (ii) Holdings at home and abroad by banking and financial agencies, other than official agencies, of (1) gold, (2) foreign exchange.
- (iii) Production of gold.
- (iv) Gold exports and imports according to countries of destination and origin.
- (v) Total exports and imports of merchandise, in terms of local currency values, according to countries of destination and origin.
- (vi) International balance of payments, including (1) trade in goods and services, (2) gold transactions, (3) known capital transactions, and (4) other items.
- (vii) International investment position, i.e., investments within the territories of the member owned abroad and investments abroad owned by persons in its territories so far as it is possible to furnish this information.
- (viii) National income.
- (ix) Price indices, i.e., indices of commodity prices in wholesale and retail markets and of export and import prices.
- (x) Buying and selling rates for foreign currencies.
- (xi) Exchange controls, i.e., a comprehensive statement of exchange controls in effect at the time of assuming membership in the Fund and details of subsequent changes as they occur.
- (xii) Where official clearing arrangements exist, details of amounts awaiting clearance in respect of commercial and financial transactions, and of the length of time during which such arrears have been outstanding.

(b) In requesting information the Fund shall take into consideration the varying ability of members to furnish the data requested. Members shall be under no obligation to furnish information in such detail that the affairs of individuals or corporations are disclosed. Members undertake, however, to furnish the desired information in as detailed and accurate a manner as is practicable, and, so far as possible, to avoid mere estimates.

(c) The Fund may arrange to obtain further information by agreement with members. It shall act as a centre for the collection and exchange of information on monetary and financial problems, thus facilitating the preparation of studies designed to assist members in developing policies which further the purposes of the Fund.

SEC. 6. Consultation between members regarding existing international agreements.—Where under this Agreement a member is authorized in the special or temporary circumstances specified in the Agreement to maintain or establish restrictions on exchange transactions, and there are other engagements between members entered into prior to this Agreement which conflict with the application of such restrictions, the parties to such engagements will consult with one another with a view to making such mutually acceptable adjustments as may be necessary. The provisions of this Article shall be without prejudice to the operation of Article VII, Section 5.

ARTICLE IX. STATUS, IMMUNITIES AND PRIVILEGES

SECTION 1. Purpose of Article.—To enable the Fund to fulfill the functions with which it is entrusted, the status, immunities and privileges set forth in this Article shall be accorded to the Fund in the territories of each member.

SEC. 2. Status of the Fund.—The Fund shall possess full juridical personality, and in particular, the capacity

- (i) to contract;
- (ii) to acquire and dispose of immovable and movable property;
- (iii) to institute legal proceedings.

SEC. 3. Immunity from judicial process.—The Fund, its property and its assets, wherever located and by whomsoever held, shall enjoy immunity from every form of judicial process except to the extent that it expressly waives its immunity from every form of judicial process or by the terms of any contract.

SEC. 4. Immunity from other action.—Property and assets of the Fund, wherever located and by whomsoever held, shall be immune from search, requisition, confiscation, expropriation or any other form of seizure by executive or legislative action.

SEC. 5. Immunity of archives.—The archives of the Fund shall be inviolable.

SEC. 6. Freedom of assets from restrictions.—To the extent necessary to carry out the operations provided for in this Agreement, all property and assets of the Fund shall be free from restrictions, regulations, controls and moratoria of any nature.

SEC. 7. Privilege for communications.—The official communications of the Fund shall be accorded by members the same treatment as the official communications of other members.

SEC. 8. Immunities and privileges of officers and employees.—All governors, executive directors, alternates, officers and employees of the Fund

- (i) shall be immune from legal process with respect to acts performed by them in their official capacity except when the Fund waives this immunity;
- (ii) not being local nationals, shall be granted the same immunities from immigration restrictions, alien registration requirements and national service obligations and the same facilities as regard exchange restrictions as are accorded by members to the representatives, officials, and employees of comparable rank of other members;
- (iii) shall be granted the same treatment in respect of traveling facilities as is accorded by members to representatives, officials and employees of comparable rank of other members.

SEC. 9. Immunities from taxation.—(a) The Fund, its assets, property, income and its operations and transactions authorized by this Agreement, shall be immune from all taxation and from all customs duties. The Fund shall also be immune from liability for the collection or payment of any tax or duty.

(b) No tax shall be levied on or in respect of salaries and emoluments paid by the Fund to executive directors, alternates, officers or employees of the Fund who are not local citizens, local subjects, or other local nationals.

(c) No taxation of any kind shall be levied on any obligation or security issued by the Fund, including any dividend or interest thereon, by whomsoever held

- (i) which discriminates against such obligation or security solely because of its origin; or
- (ii) if the sole jurisdictional basis for such taxation is the place or currency in which it is issued, made payable or paid, or the location of any office or place of business maintained by the Fund.

SEC. 10. Application of Article.—Each member shall take such action as is necessary in its own territories for the purpose of making effective in terms of its own law the principles set forth in this Article and shall inform the Fund of the detailed action which it has taken.

ARTICLE X. RELATIONS WITH OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

The Fund shall co-operate within the terms of this Agreement with any general international organization and with public international organizations having specialized responsibilities in related fields. Any arrangements for such co-operation which would involve a modification of any provision of this Agreement may be effected only after amendment to this Agreement under Article XVII.

ARTICLE XI. RELATIONS WITH NON-MEMBER COUNTRIES

SECTION 1. Undertakings regarding relations with non-member countries.— Each member undertakes:

- (i) Not to engage in, nor to permit any of its fiscal agencies referred to in Article V, Section 1, to engage in, any transactions with a non-member or with persons in a non-member's territories which would be contrary to the provisions of this Agreement or the purposes of the Fund;
- (ii) Not to co-operate with a non-member or with persons in a non-member's territories in practices which would be contrary to the provisions of this Agreement or the purposes of the Fund.
- (iii) To co-operate with the Fund with a view to the application in its territories of appropriate measures to prevent transactions with non-members or with persons in their territories which would be contrary to the provisions of this Agreement or the purposes of the Fund.

SEC. 2. Restrictions on transactions with non-member countries.—Nothing in this Agreement shall affect the right of any member to impose restrictions on exchange transactions with non-members or with persons in their territories unless the Fund finds that such restrictions prejudice the interests of members and are contrary to the purposes of the Fund.

ARTICLE XII. ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

SECTION 1. Structure of the Fund.—The Fund shall have a Board of Governors, Executive Directors, a Managing Director, and a staff.

SEC. 2. Board of Governors.—(a) All powers of the Fund shall be vested in the Board of Governors, consisting of one governor and one alternate appointed by each member in such manner as it may determine. Each governor and each alternate shall serve for five years, subject to the pleasure of the member appointing him, and may be reappointed. No alternate may vote except in the absence of his principal. The Board shall select one of the governors as chairman.

(b) The Board of Governors may delegate to the Executive Directors authority to exercise any powers of the Board, except to:

- (i) Admit new members and determine the conditions of their admission.
- (ii) Approve a revision of quotas.
- (iii) Approve a uniform change in the par value of the currencies of all members.
- (iv) Make arrangements to co-operate with other international organizations (other than informal arrangements of a temporary or administrative character).
- (v) Determine the distribution of the net income of the Fund.
- (vi) Require a member to withdraw.
- (vii) Decide to liquidate the Fund.
- (viii) Decide appeals from interpretations of this agreement given by the Executive Directors.

(c) The Board of Governors shall hold an annual meeting and such other meetings as may be provided for by the Board or called by the Executive Directors. Meetings of the Board shall be called by the Directors whenever requested by five members or by members having one-quarter of the total voting power.

(d) A quorum for any meeting of the Board of Governors shall be a majority of the governors exercising not less than two-thirds of the total voting power.

(e) Each governor shall be entitled to cast the number of votes allotted under Section 5 of this Article to the member appointing him.

(f) The Board of Governors may by regulation establish a procedure whereby the Executive Directors, when they deem such action to be in the best interests of the Fund, may obtain a vote of the governors on a specific question without calling a meeting of the Board.

(g) The Board of Governors, and the Executive Directors to the extent authorized, may adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to conduct the business of the Fund.

(h) Governors and alternates shall serve as such without compensation from the Fund, but the Fund shall pay them reasonable expenses incurred in attending meetings.

(i) The Board of Governors shall determine the remuneration to be paid to the Executive Directors and the salary and terms of the contract of service of the Managing Director.

SEC. 3. Executive Directors.—(a) The Executive Directors shall be responsible for the conduct of the general operations of the Fund, and for this purpose shall exercise all the powers delegated to them by the Board of Governors.

(b) There shall be not less than twelve directors who need not be governors, and of whom

- (i) five shall be appointed by the five members having the largest quotas;
- (ii) not more than two shall be appointed when the provisions of (c) below apply;
- (iii) five shall be elected by the members not entitled to appoint directors, other than the American Republics; and

(iv) two shall be elected by the American Republics not entitled to appoint directors. For the purposes of this paragraph, members means governments of countries whose names are set forth in Schedule A, whether they become members in accordance with Article XX or in accordance with Article II, Section 2. When governments of other countries become members, the Board of Governors may, by a four-fifths majority of the total voting power, increase the number of directors to be elected.

(c) If, at the second regular election of directors and thereafter, the members entitled to appoint directors under (b) (i) above do not include the two members, the holdings of whose currencies by the Fund have been, on the average over the preceding two years, reduced below their quotas by the largest absolute amounts in terms of gold as a common denominator, either one or both of such members, as the case may be, shall be entitled to appoint a director.

(d) Subject to Article XX, Section 3 (b) elections of elective directors shall be conducted at intervals of two years in accordance with the provisions of Schedule C, supplemented by such regulations as the Fund deems appropriate. Whenever the Board of Governors increases the number of directors to be elected under (b) above, it shall issue regulations making appropriate changes in the proportion of votes required to elect directors under the provisions of Schedule C.

(e) Each director shall appoint an alternate with full power to act for him when he is not present. When the directors appointing them are present, alternates may participate in meetings but may not vote.

(f) Directors shall continue in office until their successors are appointed or elected. If the office of an elected director becomes vacant more than ninety days before the end of his term, another director shall be elected for the remainder of the term by the members who elected the former director. A majority of the votes cast shall be required for election. While the office remains vacant, the alternate of the former director shall exercise his powers, except that of appointing an alternate.

(g) The Executive Directors shall function in continuous session at the principal office of the Fund and shall meet as often as the business of the Fund may require.

(h) A quorum for any meeting of the Executive Directors shall be a majority of the directors representing not less than one-half of the voting power.

(i) Each appointed director shall be entitled to cast the number of votes allotted under Section 5 of this Article to the member appointing him. Each elected director shall be entitled to cast the number of votes which counted towards his election. When the provisions of Section 5 (b) of this Article are applicable, the votes which a director would otherwise be entitled to cast shall be increased or decreased correspondingly. All the votes which a director is entitled to cast shall be cast as a unit.

(j) The Board of Governors shall adopt regulations under which a member not entitled to appoint a director under (b) above may send a representative to attend any meeting of the Executive Directors when a request made by, or a matter particularly affecting, that member is under consideration.

(k) The Executive Directors may appoint such committees as they deem advisable. Membership of committees need not be limited to governors or directors or their alternates.

SEC. 4. Managing Director and staff. (a)—The Executive Directors shall select a Managing Director who shall not be a governor or an executive director. The Managing Director shall be chairman of the Executive Directors, but shall have no vote except a deciding vote in case of an equal division. He may participate in meetings of the Board of Governors, but shall not vote at such meetings. The Managing Director shall cease to hold office when the Executive Directors so decide.

(b) The Managing Director shall be chief of the operating staff of the Fund and shall conduct, under the direction of the Executive Directors, the ordinary business of the Fund. Subject to the general control of the Executive Directors, he shall be responsible for the organization, appointment and dismissal of the staff of the Fund.

(c) The Managing Director and the staff of the Fund, in the discharge of their functions, shall owe their duty entirely to the Fund and to no other authority. Each member of the Fund shall respect the international character of this duty and shall refrain from all attempts to influence any of the staff in the discharge of his functions.

(d) In appointing the staff the Managing Director shall, subject to the paramount importance of securing the highest standards of efficiency and of technical competence, pay due regard to the importance of recruiting personnel on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

SEC. 5. Voting.—(a) Each member shall have two hundred fifty votes plus one additional vote for each part of its quota equivalent to one hundred thousand United States dollars.

(b) Whenever voting is required under Article V, Section 4 or 5, each member shall have the number of votes to which it is entitled under (a) above, adjusted

(i) by the addition of one vote for the equivalent of each four hundred thousand United States dollars of net sales of its currency up to the date when the vote is taken, or

(ii) by the subtraction of one vote for the equivalent of each four hundred thousand United States dollars of its net purchases of the currencies of other members up to the date when the vote is taken;

provided, that neither net purchases nor net sales shall be deemed at any time to exceed an amount equal to the quota of the member involved.

(c) For the purpose of all computations under this Section, United States dollars shall be deemed to be of the weight and fineness in effect on July 1, 1944, adjusted for any uniform change under Article IV, Section 7, if a waiver is made under Section 8 (d) of that Article.

(d) Except as otherwise specifically provided, all decisions of the Fund shall be made by a majority of the votes cast.

SEC. 6. Distribution of net income.—(a) The Board of Governors shall determine annually what part of the Fund's net income shall be placed to reserve and what part, if any, shall be distributed.

(b) If any distribution is made, there shall first be distributed a two per cent non-cumulative payment to each member on the amount by which seventy-five per cent of its quota exceeded the Fund's average holdings of its currency during that year. The balance shall be paid to all members in proportion to their quotas. Payments to each member shall be made in its own currency.

SEC. 7. Publication of reports.—(a) The Fund shall publish an annual report containing an audited statement of its accounts, and shall issue, at intervals of three months or less, a summary statement of its transactions and its holdings of gold and currencies of members.

(b) The Fund may publish such other reports as it deems desirable for carrying out its purposes.

SEC. 8. Communication of views to members.—The Fund shall at all times have the right to communicate its views informally to any member on any matter arising under this Agreement. The Fund may, by a two-thirds majority of the total voting power, decide to publish a report made to a member regarding its monetary or economic conditions and developments which directly tend to produce a serious disequilibrium in the international balance of payments of members. If the member is not entitled to appoint an executive director, it shall be entitled to representation in accordance with Section 3 (j) of this Article. The Fund shall not publish a report involving changes in the fundamental structure of the economic organization of members.

ARTICLE XIII. OFFICES AND DEPOSITORIES

SECTION 1. Location of offices.—The principal office of the Fund shall be located in the territory of the member having the largest quota, and agencies or branch offices may be established in the territories of other members.

SEC. 2. Depositaries.—(a) Each member country shall designate its central bank as a depository for all the Fund's holdings of its currency, or if it has no central bank it shall designate such other institution as may be acceptable to the Fund.

(b) The Fund may hold other assets, including gold, in the depositories designated by the five members having the largest quotas and in such other designated depositories as the Fund may select. Initially, at least one-half of the holdings of the Fund shall be held in the depository designated by the member in whose territories the Fund has its principal office and at least forty per cent shall be held in the depositories designated by the remaining four members referred to above. However, all transfers of gold by the Fund shall be made with due regard to the costs of transport and anticipated requirements of the Fund. In an emergency the Executive Directors may transfer all or any part of the Fund's gold holdings to any place where they can be adequately protected.

SEC. 3. Guarantee of the Fund's assets.—Each member guarantees all assets of the Fund against loss resulting from failure or default on the part of the depository designated by it.

ARTICLE XIV. TRANSITIONAL PERIOD

SECTION 1. Introduction.—The Fund is not intended to provide facilities for relief or reconstruction or to deal with international indebtedness arising out of the war.

SEC. 2. Exchange restrictions.—In the post-war transitional period members may, notwithstanding the provisions of any other articles of this Agreement, maintain and adapt to changing circumstances (and, in the case of members whose territories have been occupied by the enemy, introduce where necessary) restrictions on payments and transfers for current international transactions. Members shall, however, have continuous regard in their foreign exchange policies to the purposes of the Fund; and, as soon as conditions permit, they shall take all possible measures to develop such commercial and financial arrangements with other members as will facilitate international payments and the maintenance of exchange stability. In particular, members shall withdraw restrictions maintained or imposed under this Section as soon as they are satisfied that they will be able, in the absence of such restrictions, to settle their balance of payments in a manner which will not unduly encumber their access to the resources of the Fund.

SEC. 3. Notification to the Fund.—Each member shall notify the Fund before it becomes eligible under Article XX, Sec. 4 (c) or (d), to buy currency from the Fund, whether it intends to avail itself of the transitional arrangements in Section 2 of this Article, or whether it is prepared to accept the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2, 3, and 4. A member availing itself of the transitional arrangements shall notify the Fund as soon thereafter as it is prepared to accept the above-mentioned obligations.

SEC. 4. Action of the Fund relating to restrictions.—Not later than three years after the date on which the Fund begins operations and in each year thereafter, the Fund shall report on the restrictions still in force under Section 2 of this Article. Five years after the date on which the Fund begins operations, and in each year thereafter, any member still retaining any restrictions inconsistent with Article VIII, Sections 2, 3, or 4, shall consult the Fund as to their further retention. The Fund may, if it deems such action necessary in exceptional circumstances, make representations to any member that conditions are favorable for the withdrawal of any particular restriction, or for the general abandonment of restrictions, inconsistent with the provisions of any other article of this Agreement. The member shall be given a suitable time to reply to such representations. If the Fund finds that the member persists in maintaining restrictions which are inconsistent with the purposes of the Fund, the member shall be subject to Article XV, Section 2 (a).

SEC. 5. Nature of transitional period.—In its relations with members, the Fund shall recognize that the post-war transitional period will be one of change and adjustment and in making decisions on requests occasioned thereby which are presented by any member it shall give the member the benefit of any reasonable doubt.

ARTICLE XV. WITHDRAWAL FROM MEMBERSHIP

SECTION 1. Right of members to withdraw.—Any member may withdraw from the Fund at any time by transmitting a notice in writing to the Fund at its principal office. Withdrawal shall become effective on the date such notice is received.

SEC. 2. Compulsory withdrawal.—(a) If a member fails to fulfill any obligations under this Agreement, the Fund may declare the member ineligible to use the resources of the Fund. Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to limit the provisions of Article IV, Section 6, Article V, Section 5, or Article VI, Section 1.

(b) If, after the expiration of a reasonable period the member persists in its failure to fulfill any of its obligations under this Agreement, or a difference between a member and the Fund under Article IV, Section 6, continues, that member may be required to withdraw from membership in the Fund by a decision of the Board of Governors carried by a majority of the governors representing a majority of the total voting power.

(c) Regulations shall be adopted to ensure that before action is taken against any member under (a) or (b) above, the member shall be informed in reasonable time of the complaint against it and given an adequate opportunity for stating its case, both orally and in writing.

SEC. 3. Settlement of accounts with members withdrawing.—When a member withdraws from the Fund, normal transactions of the Fund in its currency shall cease and settlement of all accounts between it and the Fund shall be made with reasonable despatch by agreement between it and the Fund. If agreement is not reached promptly, the provisions of Schedule D shall apply to the settlement of accounts.

ARTICLE XVI. EMERGENCY PROVISIONS

SECTION 1. Temporary suspension.—(a) In the event of an emergency or the development of unforeseen circumstances threatening the operations of the Fund, the Executive Directors by unanimous vote may suspend for a period of not more than one hundred twenty days the operation of any of the following provisions:

- (i) Article IV, Sections 3 and 4 (b).
- (ii) Article V, Sections 2, 3, 7, 8 (a) and (f).
- (iii) Article VI, Section 2.
- (iv) Article XI, Section 1.

(b) Simultaneously with any decision to suspend the operation of any of the foregoing provisions, the Executive Directors shall call a meeting of the Board of Governors for the earliest practicable date.

(c) The Executive Directors may not extend any suspension beyond one hundred twenty days. Such suspension may be extended, however, for an additional period of not more than two hundred forty days, if the Board of Governors by a four-fifths majority of the total voting power so decides, but it may not be further extended except by amendment of this Agreement pursuant to Article XVII.

(d) The Executive Directors may, by a majority of the total voting power, terminate such suspension at any time.

SEC. 2. Liquidation of the Fund.—(a) The Fund may not be liquidated except by decision of the Board of Governors. In an emergency, if the Executive Directors decide that liquidation of the Fund may be necessary, they may temporarily suspend all transactions, pending decision by the Board.

(b) If the Board of Governors decides to liquidate the Fund, the Fund shall forthwith cease to engage in any activities except those incidental to the orderly collection and liquidation of its assets and the settlement of its liabilities, and all obligations of members under this Agreement shall cease except those set out in this Article, in Article XVIII, paragraph (c), in Schedule D, paragraph 7, and in Schedule E.

(c) Liquidation shall be administered in accordance with the provisions of Schedule E.

ARTICLE XVII. AMENDMENTS

(a) Any proposal to introduce modifications in this Agreement, whether emanating from a member, a governor or the Executive Directors, shall be communicated to the chairman of the Board of Governors who shall bring the proposal before the Board. If the proposed amendment is approved by the Board the Fund shall, by circular letter or telegram, ask all members whether they accept the proposed amendment. When three-fifths of the members, having four-fifths of the total voting power, have accepted the proposed amendment, the Fund shall certify the fact by a formal communication addressed to all members.

(b) Notwithstanding (a) above, acceptance by all members is required in the case of any amendment modifying

- (i) the right to withdraw from the Fund (Article XV, Section 1);
- (ii) the provision that no change in a member's quota shall be made without its consent (Article III, Section 2);
- (iii) the provision that no change may be made in the par value of a member's currency except on the proposal of that member (Article IV, Section 5 (b)).

(c) Amendments shall enter into force for all members three months after the date of the formal communication unless a shorter period is specified in the circular letter or telegram.

ARTICLE XVIII. INTERPRETATION

(a) Any question of interpretation of the provisions of this Agreement arising between any member and the Fund or between any members of the Fund shall be submitted to the Executive Directors for their decision. If the question particularly affects any member not entitled to appoint an executive director it shall be entitled to representation in accordance with Article XII, Section 3 (j).

(b) In any case where the Executive Directors have given a decision under (a) above, any member may require that the question be referred to the Board of Governors, whose decision shall be final. Pending the result of the reference to the Board the Fund may, so far as it deems necessary, act on the basis of the decision of the Executive Directors.

(c) Whenever a disagreement arises between the Fund and a member which has withdrawn, or between the Fund and any member during liquidation of the Fund, such disagreement shall be submitted to arbitration by a tribunal of three arbitrators, one appointed by the Fund, another by the member or withdrawing member and an umpire who, unless the parties otherwise agree, shall be appointed by the President of the Permanent Court of International Justice or such other authority as may have been prescribed by regulation adopted by the Fund. The umpire shall have full power to settle all questions of procedure in any case where the parties are in disagreement with respect thereto.

ARTICLE XIX. EXPLANATION OF TERMS

In interpreting the provisions of this Agreement the Fund and its members shall be guided by the following:

(a) A member's monetary reserves means its net official holdings of gold, of convertible currencies of other members, and of the currencies of such non-members as the Fund may specify.

(b) The official holdings of a member means central holdings (that is, the holdings of its Treasury, central bank, stabilization fund, or similar fiscal agency).

(c) The holdings of other official institutions or other banks within its territories may, in any particular case, be deemed by the Fund, after consultation with the member, to be official holdings to the extent that they are substantially in excess of working balances; provided that for the purpose of determining whether, in a particular case, holdings are in excess of working balances, there shall be deducted from such holdings amounts of currency due to official institutions and banks in the territories of members or non-members specified under (d) below.

(d) A member's holdings of convertible currencies means its holdings of the currencies of other members which are not availing themselves of the transitional arrangements under Article XIV, Section 2, together with its holdings of the currencies of such non-members as the Fund may from time to time specify. The term currency for this purpose includes without limitation coins, paper money, bank balances, bank acceptances, and government obligations issued with a maturity not exceeding twelve months.

(e) A member's monetary reserves shall be calculated by deducting from its central holdings the currency liabilities to the Treasuries, central banks, stabilization funds, or similar fiscal agencies of other members or non-members specified under (d) above, together with similar liabilities to other official institutions and other banks in the territories of members, or non-members specified under (d) above. To these net holdings shall be added the sums deemed to be official holdings of other official institutions and other banks under (c) above.

(f) The Fund's holdings of the currency of a member shall include any securities accepted by the Fund under Article III, Section 5.

(g) The Fund, after consultation with a member which is availing itself of the transitional arrangements under Article XIV, Section 2, may deem holdings of the currency of that member which carry specified rights of conversion into another currency or into gold to be holdings of convertible currency for the purpose of the calculation of monetary reserves.

(h) For the purpose of calculating gold subscriptions under Article III, Section 3, a member's net official holdings of gold and United States dollars shall consist of its official holdings of gold and United States currency after deducting central holdings of its currency by other countries and holdings of its currency by other official institutions and other banks if these holdings carry specified rights of conversion into gold or United States currency.

(i) Payments for current transactions means payments which are not for the purpose of transferring capital, and includes, without limitation:

- (1) All payments due in connection with foreign trade, other current business, including services, and normal short-term banking and credit facilities;
- (2) Payments due as interest on loans and as net income from other investments;
- (3) Payments of moderate amount for amortization of loans or for depreciation of direct investments;
- (4) Moderate remittances for family living expenses.

The Fund may, after consultation with the members concerned, determine whether certain specific transactions are to be considered current transactions or capital transactions.

ARTICLE XX. FINAL PROVISIONS

SECTION 1. Entry into force.—This Agreement shall enter into force when it has been signed on behalf of governments having sixty-five per cent of the total of the quotas set forth in Schedule A and when the instruments referred to in Section 2 (a) of this Article have been deposited on their behalf, but in no event shall this Agreement enter into force before May 1, 1945.

SEC. 2. Signature.—(a) Each government on whose behalf this Agreement is signed shall deposit with the Government of the United States of America an instrument setting forth that it has accepted this Agreement in accordance with its law and has taken all steps necessary to enable it to carry out all of its obligations under this Agreement.

(b) Each government shall become a member of the Fund as from the date of the deposit on its behalf of the instrument referred to in (a) above, except that no government shall become a member before this Agreement enters into force under Section 1 of this Article.

(c) The Government of the United States of America shall inform the governments of all countries whose names are set forth in Schedule A, and all governments whose membership is approved in accordance with Article II, Section 2, of all signatures of this Agreement and of the deposit of all instruments referred to in (a) above.

(d) At the time this Agreement is signed on its behalf, each government shall transmit to the Government of the United States of America one one-hundredth of one per cent of its total subscription in gold or United States dollars for the purpose of meeting administrative expenses of the Fund. The Government of the United States of America shall hold such funds in a special deposit account and shall transmit them to the Board of Governors of the Fund when the initial meeting has been called under Section 3 of this Article. If this Agreement has not come into force by December 31, 1945, the Government of the United States of America shall return such funds to the governments that transmitted them.

(e) This Agreement shall remain open for signature at Washington on behalf of the governments of the countries whose names are set forth in Schedule A until December 31, 1945.

(f) After December 31, 1945, this Agreement shall be open for signature on behalf of the government of any country whose membership has been approved in accordance with Article II, Section 2.

(g) By their signature of this Agreement, all governments accept it both on their own behalf and in respect of all their colonies, overseas territories, all territories under their protection, suzerainty, or authority and all territories in respect of which they exercise a mandate.

(h) In the case of governments whose metropolitan territories have been under enemy occupation, the deposit of the instrument referred to in (a) above may be delayed until one hundred eighty days after the date on which these territories have been liberated. If, however, it is not deposited by any such government before the expiration of this period the signature affixed on behalf of that government shall become void and the portion of its subscription paid under (d) above shall be returned to it.

(i) Paragraphs (d) and (h) shall come into force with regard to each signatory government as from the date of its signature.

SEC. 3. Inauguration of the Fund.—(a) As soon as this Agreement enters into force under Section 1 of this Article, each member shall appoint a governor and the member having the largest quota shall call the first meeting of the Board of Governors.

(b) At the first meeting of the Board of Governors, arrangements shall be made for the selection of provisional executive directors. The governments of the five countries for which the largest quotas are set forth in Schedule A shall appoint provisional executive directors. If one or more of such governments have not become members, the executive directorships they would be entitled to fill shall remain vacant until they become members, or until January 1, 1946, whichever is the earlier. Seven provisional executive directors shall be elected in accordance with the provisions of Schedule C and shall remain in office until the date of the first regular election of executive directors which shall be held as soon as practicable after January 1, 1946.

(c) The Board of Governors may delegate to the provisional executive directors any powers except those which may not be delegated to the Executive Directors.

SEC. 4. Initial determination of par values.—

(a) When the Fund is of the opinion that it will shortly be in a position to begin exchange transactions, it shall so notify the members and shall request each member to communicate within thirty days the par value of its currency based on the rates of exchange prevailing on the sixtieth day before the entry into force of this Agreement. No member whose metropolitan territory has been occupied by the enemy shall be required to make such a communication while that territory is a theater of major hostilities or for such period thereafter as the Fund may determine. When such a member communicates the par value of its currency the provisions of (d) below shall apply.

(b) The par value communicated by a member whose metropolitan territory has not been occupied by the enemy shall be the par value of that member's currency for the purposes of this Agreement unless, within ninety days after the request referred to in (a) above has been received, (i) the member notifies the Fund that it regards the par value as unsatisfactory, or (ii) the Fund notifies the member that in its opinion the par value cannot be maintained without causing recourse to the Fund on the part of that member or others on a scale prejudicial to the Fund and to members. When notification is given under (i) or (ii) above, the Fund and the member shall, within a period determined by the Fund in the light of all relevant circumstances, agree upon a suitable par value for that currency. If the Fund and the member do not agree within the period so determined, the member shall be deemed to have withdrawn from the Fund on the date when the period expires.

(c) When the par value of a member's currency has been established under (b) above, either by the expiration of ninety days without notification, or by agreement after notification, the member shall be eligible to buy from the Fund the currencies of other members to the full extent permitted in this Agreement, provided that the Fund has begun exchange transactions.

(d) In the case of a member whose metropolitan territory has been occupied by the enemy, the provisions of (b) above shall apply, subject to the following modifications:

(i) The period of ninety days shall be extended so as to end on a date to be fixed by agreement between the Fund and the member.

(ii) Within the extended period the member may, if the Fund has begun exchange transactions, buy from the Fund with its currency the currencies of other members, but only under such conditions and in such amounts as may be prescribed by the Fund.

(iii) At any time before the date fixed under (i) above, changes may be made by agreement with the Fund in the par value communicated under (a) above.

(e) If a member whose metropolitan territory has been occupied by the enemy adopts a new monetary unit before the date to be fixed under (d) (i) above, the par value fixed by that member for the new unit shall be communicated to the Fund and the provisions of (d) above shall apply.

(f) Changes in par values agreed with the Fund under this Section shall not be taken into account in determining whether a proposed change falls within (i), (ii), or (iii) of Article IV, Section 5 (e).

(g) A member communicating to the Fund a par value for the currency of its metropolitan territory shall simultaneously communicate a value, in terms of that currency, for each separate currency, where such exists, in the territories in respect of which it has accepted this Agreement under Section 2 (g) of this Article, but no member shall be required to make a communication for the separate currency of a territory which has been occupied by the enemy while that territory is a theater of major hostilities or for such period thereafter as the Fund may determine. On the basis of the par value so communicated, the Fund shall compute the par value of each separate currency. A communication or notification to the Fund under (a), (b) or (d) above regarding the par value of a currency, shall also be deemed, unless the contrary is stated, to be a communication or notification regarding the par value of all the separate currencies referred to above. Any member may, however, make a communication or notification relating to the metropolitan or any of the separate currencies alone. If the member does so, the provisions of the preceding paragraphs (including (d) above, if a territory where a separate currency exists has been occupied by the enemy) shall apply to each of these currencies separately.

(h) The Fund shall begin exchange transactions at such date as it may determine after members having sixty-five per cent of the total of the quotas set forth in Schedule A have become eligible, in accordance with the preceding paragraphs of this Section, to purchase the currencies of other members, but in no event until after major hostilities in Europe have ceased.

(i) The Fund may postpone exchange transactions with any member if its circumstances are such that, in the opinion of the Fund, they would lead to use of the resources of the Fund in a manner contrary to the purposes of this Agreement or prejudicial to the Fund or the members.

(j) The par values of the currencies of governments which indicate their desire to become members after December 31, 1945, shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of Article II, Section 2.

Done at Washington, in a single copy which shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America, which shall transmit certified copies to all governments whose names are set forth in Schedule A and to all governments whose membership is approved in accordance with Article II, Section 2.

SCHEDULE B. PROVISIONS WITH RESPECT TO REPURCHASE BY A MEMBER OF ITS CURRENCY HELD BY THE FUND

1. In determining the extent to which repurchase of a member's currency from the Fund under Article V, Section 7 (b), shall be made with each type of monetary reserve, that is, with gold and with each convertible currency, the following rule, subject to 2 below, shall apply:

(a) If the member's monetary reserves have not increased during the year, the amount payable to the Fund shall be distributed among all types of reserves in proportion to the member's holdings thereof at the end of the year.

(b) If the member's monetary reserves have increased during the year, a part of the amount payable to the Fund equal to one-half of the increase shall be distributed among those types of reserves which have increased in proportion to the amount by which each of them has increased. The remainder of the sum payable to the Fund shall be distributed among all types of reserves in proportion to the member's remaining holdings thereof.

(c) If after all the repurchases required under Article V, Section 7 (b), had been made, the result would exceed any of the limits specified in Article V, Section 7 (c), the Fund shall require such repurchases to be made by the members proportionately in such manner that the limits will not be exceeded.

2. The Fund shall not acquire the currency of any non-member under Article V, Section 7 (b) and (c).

3. In calculating monetary reserves and the increase in monetary reserves during any year for the purpose of Article V, Section 7 (b) and (c), no account shall be taken, unless deductions have otherwise been made by the member for such holdings, of any increase in those monetary reserves which is due to currency previously inconvertible having become convertible during the year; or to holdings which are the proceeds of a long-term or medium-term loan contracted during the year; or to holdings which have been transferred or set aside for repayment of a loan during the subsequent year.

4. In the case of members whose metropolitan territories have been occupied by the enemy, gold newly produced during the five years after the entry into force of this Agreement from mines located within their metropolitan territories shall not be included in computations of their monetary reserves or of increases in their monetary reserves.

SCHEDULE C. ELECTION OF EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

1. The election of the elective executive directors shall be by ballot of the governors eligible to vote under Article XII, Section 3 (b) (iii) and (iv).

2. In balloting for the five directors to be elected under Article XII, Section 3 (b) (iii), each of the governors eligible to vote shall cast for one person all of the votes to which he is entitled under Article XII, Section 5 (a). The five persons receiving the greatest number of votes shall be directors, provided that no person who received less than nineteen per cent of the total number of votes that can be cast (eligible votes) shall be considered elected.

3. When five persons are not elected on the first ballot, a second ballot shall be held in which the person who received the lowest number of votes shall be ineligible for election and in which there shall vote only (a) those governors who voted in the first ballot for a person not elected, and (b) those governors whose votes for a person elected are deemed under 4 below above twenty per cent of the eligible votes.

4. In determining whether the votes cast by a governor are to be deemed to have raised the total of any person above twenty per cent of the eligible votes the twenty per cent shall be deemed to include, first, the votes of the governor casting the largest number of votes for such person, then the votes of the governor casting the next largest number, and so on until twenty per cent is reached.

5. Any governor part of whose votes must be counted in order to raise the total of any person above nineteen per cent shall be considered as casting all of his votes for such person even if the total votes for such person thereby exceed twenty per cent.

6. If, after the second ballot, five persons have not been elected, further ballots shall be held on the same principles until five persons have been elected, provided that after four persons are elected, the fifth may be elected by a simple majority of the remaining votes and shall be deemed to have been elected by all such votes.

7. The directors to be elected by the American Republics under Article XI, Section 3 (b) (iv) shall be elected as follows:

(a) Each of the directors shall be elected separately.

(b) In the election of the first director, each governor representing an American Republic eligible to participate in the election shall cast for one person all the votes to which he is entitled. The person receiving the largest number of votes shall be elected provided that he has received not less than forty-five per cent of the total votes.

(c) If no person is elected on the first ballot, further ballots shall be held, in each of which the person receiving the lowest number of votes shall be eliminated, until one person receives a number of votes sufficient for election under (b) above.

(d) Governors whose votes contributed to the election of the first director shall take no part in the election of the second director.

(e) Persons who did not succeed in the first election shall not be ineligible for election as the second director.

(f) A majority of the votes which can be cast shall be required for election of the second director. If at the first ballot no person receives a majority, further ballots shall be held in each of which the person receiving the lowest number of votes shall be eliminated, until some person obtains a majority.

(g) The second director shall be deemed to have been elected by all the votes which could have been cast in the ballot securing his election.

SCHEDULE D. SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS WITH MEMBERS WITHDRAWING

1. The Fund shall be obligated to pay to a member withdrawing an amount equal to its quota, plus any other amounts due to it from the Fund, less any amounts due to the Fund, including charges accruing after the date of its withdrawal; but no payments shall be made until six months after the date of withdrawal. Payments shall be made in the currency of the withdrawing member.

2. If the Fund's holdings of the currency of the withdrawing member are not sufficient to pay the net amount due from the Fund, the balance shall be paid in gold, or in such other manner as may be agreed. If the Fund and the withdrawing member do not reach agreement within six months of the date of withdrawal, the currency in question held by the Fund shall be paid forthwith to the withdrawing member. Any balance due shall be paid in half-yearly installments during the ensuing five years. Each such installment shall be paid, at the option of the Fund, either in the currency of the withdrawing member acquired after its withdrawal or by the delivery of gold.

3. If the Fund fails to meet any installment which is due in accordance with the preceding paragraphs, the withdrawing member shall be entitled to require the Fund to pay the installment in any currency held by the Fund with the exception of any currency which has been declared scarce under Article VII, Section 3.

4. If the Fund's holdings of the currency of a withdrawing member exceed the amount due to it, and if agreement on the method of settling accounts is not reached within six months of the date of withdrawal, the former member shall be obligated to redeem such excess currency in gold or, at its option, in the currencies of members which at the time of redemption are convertible. Redemption shall be made at the parity existing at the time of withdrawal from the Fund. The withdrawing member shall complete redemption within five years of the date of withdrawal, or within such longer period as may be fixed by the Fund, but shall not be required to redeem in any half-yearly period more than one-tenth of the Fund's excess holdings of its currency at the date of withdrawal plus further acquisitions of the currency during such half-yearly period. If the withdrawing member does not fulfill this obligation, the Fund may in an orderly manner liquidate in any market the amount of currency which should have been redeemed.

5. Any member desiring to obtain the currency of a member which has withdrawn shall acquire it by purchase from the Fund, to the extent that such member has access to the resources of the Fund and that such currency is available under 4 above.

6. The withdrawing member guarantees the unrestricted use at all times of the currency disposed of under 4 and 5 above for the purchase of goods or for payment of sums due to it or to persons within its territories. It shall compensate the Fund for any loss resulting from the difference between the par value of its currency on the date of withdrawal and the value realized by the Fund on disposal under 4 and 5 above.

7. In the event of the Fund going into liquidation under Article XVI, Section 2, within six months of the date on which the member withdraws, the account between the Fund and that government shall be settled in accordance with Article XVI, Section 2, and Schedule E.

SCHEDULE E. ADMINISTRATION OF LIQUIDATION

1. In the event of liquidation the liabilities of the Fund other than the repayment of subscriptions shall have priority in the distribution of the assets of the Fund. In meeting each such liability the Fund shall use its assets in the following order:

- (a) the currency in which the liability is payable;
- (b) gold;
- (c) all other currencies in proportion, so far as may be practicable, to the quotas of the members.

2. After the discharge of the Fund's liabilities in accordance with 1 above, the balance of the Fund's assets shall be distributed and apportioned as follows:

- (a) The Fund shall distribute its holdings of gold among the members whose currencies are held by the Fund in amounts less than their quotas. These members shall share the gold so distributed in the proportions of the amounts by which their quotas exceed the Fund's holdings of their currencies.
- (b) The Fund shall distribute to each member one-half the Fund's holdings of its currency but such distribution shall not exceed fifty per cent of its quota.
- (c) The Fund shall apportion the remainder of its holdings of each currency among all the members in proportion to the amounts due to each member after the distributions under (a) and (b) above.

3. Each member shall redeem the holdings of its currency apportioned to other members under 2 (c) above, and shall agree with the Fund within three months after a decision to liquidate upon an orderly procedure for such redemption.

4. If a member has not reached agreement with the Fund within the three-month period referred to in 3 above, the Fund shall use the currencies of other members apportioned to that member under 2 (c) above to redeem the currency of that member apportioned to other members. Each currency apportioned to a member which has not reached agreement shall be used, so far as possible, to redeem its currency apportioned to the members which have made agreements with the Fund under 3 above.

5. If a member has reached agreement with the Fund in accordance with 3 above, the Fund shall use the currencies of other members apportioned to that member under 2 (c) above to redeem the currency of that member apportioned to other members which have made agreements with the Fund under 3 above. Each amount so redeemed shall be redeemed in the currency of the member to which it was apportioned.

6. After carrying out the preceding paragraphs, the Fund shall pay to each member the remaining currencies held for its account.

7. Each member whose currency has been distributed to other members under 6 above shall redeem such currency in gold or, at its option, in the currency of the member requesting redemption, or in such other manner as may be agreed between them. If the members involved do not otherwise agree, the member obligated to redeem shall complete redemption within five years of the date of distribution, but shall not be required to redeem in any half-yearly period more than one-tenth of the amount distributed to each other member. If the member does not fulfill this obligation, the amount of currency which should have been redeemed may be liquidated in an orderly manner in any market.

8. Each member whose currency has been distributed to other members under 6 above guarantees the unrestricted use of such currency at all times for the purchase of goods or for payment of sums due to it or to persons in its territories. Each member so obligated agrees to compensate other members for any loss resulting from the difference between the par value of its currency on the date of the decision to liquidate the Fund and the value realized by such members on disposal of its currency.

ments for transferring to the Interim Commission of WHO such functions of the League of Nations Health Organization as had been assumed by the United Nations. In addition, the Conference adopted a Protocol Concerning the Office international d'hygiène publique providing for the transfer of the duties and functions of the Office to WHO or its Interim Commission.

The Constitution of the World Health Organization will come into force when 26 Members of the United Nations have become parties to it by signature without reservation as to approval, or by signature subject to approval followed by acceptance, or by acceptance. instrument with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The General Assembly on December 14, 1946, recommended that all Members of the United Nations accept the Constitution of WHO and the Protocol Concerning the Office international d'hygiène publique at the earliest possible date. The Assembly will be composed of delegates of all members; it will meet annually. It will act as the policy-making body of the Organization.

The Executive Board will consist of eighteen persons designated by as many members States. The States will be elected by the Assembly for a term of three years. The Board will act as the executive organ of the Health Assembly and carry out the decisions and policies of the Assembly.

The Secretariat will comprise the Director-General and such technical and administrative staff as may be required.

D. INTERIM COMMISSION

The International Health Conference established an Interim Commission consisting of representatives of the following eighteen States:

Australia	Netherlands
Brazil	Norway
Canada	Peru
China	Ukrainian S.S.R.
Egypt	U.S.S.R.
France	United Kingdom
India	United States
Liberia	Venezuela
Mexico	Yugoslavia

Under the terms of the Arrangement, the Interim Commission is to convoke the first session of the World Health Assembly and to prepare the preliminary documentation for that Assembly. The Assembly must be convoked within six months from the time the Constitution of WHO comes into force. The Commission is to enter into negotiations with the United Nations with a view to the preparation of an agreement, as contemplated in Article 57 of the United Nations Charter; to take necessary steps for the transfer of the functions and activities of the League of Nations Health Organization, the Office internationale d'hygiène publique, and the health functions of UNRRA, as provided by the Agreement; and to study the question of relations with other intergovernmental agencies and with non-governmental international and national organizations.

Sessions of the Interim Commission must be held at least once every four months to examine the work in progress, receive the reports of the committees and decide the programs for continued operations.

The WHO Interim Commission has held three sessions, the first in New York City from July 19 to 23, 1946; the second in Geneva from November 4 to 13, 1946; and the third in Geneva from March 31 to April 12, 1947. A fourth session of the Interim Commission is scheduled to be held in Geneva from August 30 to September 13, 1947, at which time it is hoped to schedule the first session of the World Health Assembly.

The headquarters of the World Health Organization Interim Commission are in New York City; a technical office is located in Geneva.

The Economic and Social Council of the United Nations and the WHO Interim Commission have begun negotiations toward an agreement between the two organizations. Until the conclusion of the agreement, the Interim Commission is developing informal co-operative relations with the United Nations and its specialized agencies.

E. ACTIVITIES OF THE INTERIM COMMISSION

The WHO Interim Commission is carrying forward numerous health activities pending their assumption by WHO. The health functions of the League of Nations Health Organization were transferred to the Interim Commission on October 16, 1946. These functions were principally of two types: operation of an epidemiological reporting service and administration of work in biological standardization. The Singapore Epidemiological Intelligence Station, operated by the League of Nations until 1942, was taken over by the Interim Commission on April 1, 1947.

The Commission has assumed some of UNRRA's activities in the health field. The functions and duties of UNRRA under the Sanitary Conventions of 1944 were transferred to the Commission on December 1, 1946. Later, on January 1, 1947, UNRRA transferred a program of field operations dealing with assistance to public health administration. These include malaria and tuberculosis programs in Greece, a scholarship program in Europe, and a medical mission in Ethiopia. Epidemiological information activities of the UNRRA Health Division were transferred to the Interim Commission and consolidated with epidemiological work in Geneva. On April 1, 1947, a public health and training program in China was transferred to the Commission. In each situation, both funds and responsibilities are transferred from UNRRA to WHO. Since April both Korea and the Philippine Republic have been added to the fellowship program.

Although the Protocol Concerning the Office international d'Hygiène publique has not yet come into force, the Interim Commission is carrying out the duties of the Office.

An important share of the work of WHO will be done by committees, of which there are two types: internal and expert. The Interim Commission has established five internal committees: Epidemiology and Quarantine, Administration and Finance, Headquarters, Priorities and Relations.

Expert committees established by the Commission are as follows: Expert Committee on Quarantine; Expert Sub-Committee on Yellow Fever; Expert Committee for the Revision of the Existing International Sanitary Conventions; Expert Sub-Committee for the Revision of the Pilgrimage Clauses of the International Sanitary Conventions; Expert Committee for the Preparation of the Sixth Decennial Revision of the International Lists of Diseases and Causes of Death; Expert Committee on Habit-Forming Drugs; Expert Committee on Biological Standardization; Expert Committee on Malaria; Expert Committee on Tuberculosis; and Expert Committee for the Unification of Pharmacopoeias.

Four of the expert committees have met since their establishment. ANNEX III

CONSTITUTION OF THE WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION

THE STATES parties to this Constitution declare, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations, that the following principles are basic to the happiness, harmonious relations and security of all peoples:

Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.

The enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being without distinction of race, religion, political belief, economic or social condition.

The health of all peoples is fundamental to the attainment of peace and security and is dependent upon the fullest co-operation of individuals and States.

The achievement of any State in the promotion and protection of health is of value to all.

Unequal development in different countries in the promotion of health and control of disease, especially communicable disease, is a common danger.

Healthy development of the child is of basic importance; the ability to live harmoniously in a changing total environment is essential to such development.

The extension to all peoples of the benefits of medical, psychological and related knowledge is essential to the fullest attainment of health.

Informed opinion and active co-operation on the part of the public are of the utmost importance in the improvement of the health of the people.

Governments have a responsibility for the health of their peoples which can be fulfilled only by the provision of adequate health and social measures.

ACCEPTING THESE PRINCIPLES, and for the purpose of co-operation among themselves and with others to promote and protect the health of all peoples, the contracting parties agree to the present Constitution and hereby establish the World Health Organization as a specialized agency within the terms of Article 57 of The Charter of the United Nations.

VIII. The International Refugee Organization

A. ORIGIN

The General Assembly of the United Nations, recognizing the immediate urgency of the international problem of refugees and displaced persons, recommended, on February 12, 1946, that the Economic and Social Council establish a special committee for the purpose of examining this problem. Pursuant to this resolution, the Council, on February 16, established a Special Committee on Refugees and Displaced Persons. The Committee met in London from April 8 to June 1, 1946, and recommended the establishment of a specialized agency of a non-permanent character to deal with the problem of refugees and displaced persons. The Committee submitted to the second session of the Economic and Social Council a report covering: (a) the scope and nature of the problem to be dealt with, (b) definition of the terms "refugee" and "displaced person," (c) organization of and financial provision for an International Refugee Organization with a draft Constitution, (d) numbers of displaced persons and refugees in various countries, (e) the numbers estimated to be resettled during the first year of the Organization.

On June 21, 1946, the Economic and Social Council in turn recommended to the General Assembly the establishment of an International Refugee Organization and requested the Secretary-General to forward the draft Constitution to governments for their comments. The Council also recommended that the Secretary-General take such steps as might be appropriate to plan, in consultation with UNRRA and the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees (IGC), the initiation of the work of the IRO. It further established a Committee on the Finances of the IRO to prepare provisional administrative and operational budgets for the first financial year of IRO and scales according to which contributions to these budgets might be allocated equitably among the Members of the United Nations. This Committee met in London from July 6 to 20, 1946.

At its third session the Economic and Social Council had before it the comments of governments on the draft Constitution and on the report of the Committee on the Finances of the IRO, and a report from the Secretary-General relating to the initiation of the work of the projected Organization. It established an ad hoc Committee on Finances to review the report of the Committee on the Finances of the IRO. The Council finally approved and submitted to the General Assembly a draft Constitution of IRO together with a resolution regarding Interim Arrangements which provided for the establishment of a Preparatory Commission. It also transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Committee on the Finances of the IRO together with the report of the ad hoc Committee on Finances.

The General Assembly on December 15, 1946, approved, with certain modifications, the Constitution of the International Refugee Organization, including a budget for its first year of operation and the arrangements for a Preparatory Commission, and urged Members of the United Nations to sign both of these instruments.

The Constitution of IRO will come into force when at least fifteen States, whose required contributions to the operational budget ($151,060,500) amount to not less than 75 per cent of the total, have become parties to it. States may become parties to the Constitution by signature without reservation as to approval, signature subject to approval followed by acceptance, or acceptance. As of July 1, 1947, representatives of nineteen governments¹ had signed the Constitution and the Agreement on Interim Measures; of this number, however, only seven, with contributions amounting to 65.26 per cent of the operational budget, had accepted the Constitution unconditionally.

B. FUNCTIONS

According to its Constitution the functions of IRO will be the repatriation; identification, registration and classification; care and assistance; legal and political protection; transport; and resettlement and re-establishment, in countries able and willing to receive them, of refugees and displaced persons.

These functions are to be exercised with a view to:

(1) encouraging and assisting the repatriation of persons the concern of the Organization, having regard to the principle that no person shall be compulsorily repatriated;

(2) promoting repatriation by all possible means, especially by providing repatriated persons with adequate food for a period of three months, provided that they are returning to a country suffering as a result of enemy occupation during the war, and provided such food is distributed under the auspices of the IRO.

The term "refugee" is intended to apply to a person who has left, or who is outside of, his country of nationality or of former habitual residence, and who is a victim of the nazi, fascist or falangist regimes or who was considered a refugee before the outbreak of the Second World War for reasons of race, religion, nationality or political opinion.

The term "displaced person" is intended to apply to an individual who has been deported from his country of nationality or of former habitual residence to undertake forced labor, or has been deported for racial, religious or political reasons.

C. STRUCTURE

Under the terms of the Constitution the principal organs of IRO will be a General Council, an Executive Committee and a Secretariat headed by a Director-General.

The General Council, in which each Member is to be represented, will be the ultimate policy-making body of IRO. The Executive Committee will consist of the representatives of nine members of IRO elected by the General Council. It will perform such functions as may be necessary to give effect to the policies of the General Council, with power to make policy decisions of an emergency nature subject to reconsideration by the General Council.

The chief administrative officer of IRO will be the Director-General, who will be nominated by the Executive Committee and appointed by the General Council. He will carry out the administrative and executive functions of IRO, in accordance with the decisions of the General Council and the Executive Committee, and will also be responsible for appointing the staff, under regulations to be established by the General Council.

Membership in the Organization, under the terms of the Constitution, is open to all Members of the United Nations and to any other peace-loving State, upon recommendation of the Executive Committee and subject to certain conditions.

D. PREPARATORY COMMISSION

The Preparatory Commission, as provided by the Agreement on Interim Measures, came into being on December 31, 1946, when representatives of eight governments signatories to the Constitution had signed the Agreement. Signature of the Constitution and of the Agreement automatically entitles a State to membership in the Preparatory Commission. The Commission will remain in existence until the convening of the General Council of IRO.

The functions of the Preparatory Commission, as stated in the Agreement, are, among others, to take all necessary measures for bringing IRO into effective operation as soon as possible; to convene the General Council of IRO in its first session and to prepare the agenda therefor; to suggest plans for the first year's program of IRO, and prepare draft financial and staff regulations and draft rules of procedure for the General Council and the Executive Committee of IRO.

The Preparatory Commission met in Geneva, Switzerland, for the first part of its first session from February 11 to 21, 1947, holding twenty plenary meetings during this period. The second part of the first session was held in Lausanne from May 1 to 21, 1947, and included twelve plenary meetings. As required by the Agreement on Interim Measures, a representative of the Director-General of ILO, the Director of IGC and a representative of the Director-General of UNRRA were present in a consultative capacity. Observers from the United Nations also attended the meetings.

The Commission elected Henri Ponsot (France) Chairman of the Commission, R. B. Skylstad (Norway) Vice-Chairman, and E. M. J. Sassen (Netherlands) Rapporteur. Arthur J. Altmeyer (United States) was appointed Executive Secretary.

The Commission adopted a formal resolution recording its decision to assume operating responsibility as from July 1, 1947, and to ask member Governments to make advance contributions in order to finance the conduct of operations for a period of three months from July 1. In accordance with the Agreement on Interim Measures, these contributions would be advances against and would be deductible from the first contributions to be made by those Governments to the IRO itself.

Having reached this decision of principle, the Commission proceeded to consider the detailed measures which should be taken in order to carry it into effect and also the various administrative and organizational problems which would need to be settled before the Preparatory Commission could in fact assume this operational responsibility. A necessary preliminary was the consideration of the proposed budget for the Preparatory Commission for the period up to June 30, 1947. The Commission requested the Secretary-General of the United Nations for an advance, not to exceed a total of $250,000, to enable the Commission to continue its work during this period. This request was granted to assist the Commission until it could finance its own activities from contributions by member Governments.

To advise the Executive Secretary and report to the Preparatory Commission concerning the organization of the IRO and the appointments of senior members of the staff, the Commission elected an Advisory Committee, composed of representatives of Belgium, Canada, China, France, Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States, with the Chairman of the Preparatory Commission (the representative of France) acting as Chairman.

The Commission directed the Executive Secretary, subject to the advice of the Advisory Committee, to conclude agreements with existing organizations dealing with refugees and displaced persons for the purpose of taking over their functions, activities, assets and personnel, and to make the necessary agreements and commitments with governments and occupation authorities concerned to accomplish a smooth transfer. The IRO therefore assumed the work of UNRRA and IGC on July 1, 1947. UNRRA, up to June 30, 1947, administered the camps in which the great majority of refugees and displaced persons were cared for; in the British, French, and United States zones of occupation, however, the control authorities provided all basic supplies. The IGC was established in 1938 at the Evian Conference in France to help victims of nazi persecution in Germany and Austria, providing for their legal protection, maintenance and resettlement; IGC gradually expanded its program until in July 1946 it included all non-repatriable refugees and displaced persons which now come under the jurisdiction of IRO. UNRRA and IGC had concluded agreements with more than 60 voluntary societies which are providing relief and specialized services. Existing agreements are to be continued temporarily and new agreements negotiated between IRO and these voluntary societies.

Of approximately 8,000,000 displaced persons at the time of liberation, more than 6,500,000 had returned to their homelands by the beginning of 1947. The remainder of the refugees and displaced persons were divided approximately as follows:

	Number	Per Cent
Poles	370,000	29
Balts (Esthonians, Latvians, Lithuanians)	194,000	15
Yugoslavs	77,000	6
U.S.S.R.	30,000	2
Stateless and Undetermined	98,000	8
Jews	229,000	18
Other	281,000	22
	1,279,000	100

Of this number, two-thirds were quartered in camps in the three western zones of Germany and Austria, and in Italy. The rest were living outside of camps, chiefly in these countries although 14,000 refugees from Europe took refuge as far away as Shanghai. By the time the Preparatory Commission assumed operating responsibility for refugees and displaced persons, their number, through repatriation or resettlement, had been reduced still further. The Commission concluded, after examining a statistical report made by the Executive Secretary, that the best estimate of the number of persons who, on July 1, 1947, would be eligible for and would require care and maintenance pending repatriation and resettlement would be 879,950, more than 80 per cent of whom were in the occupied zones. For this 80 per cent, the occupation authorities are to make available from indigenous sources food and other basic supplies without cost to IRO, whereas IRO or its Preparatory Commission will be responsible for the selection and direction of operating and supervisory staff. The Commission established the principles to be followed with regard to diet, housing, clothing, health, education and general living conditions for refugees and displaced persons coming within the mandate of IRO. It determined that the diet provided should not be lower than that of the local population and should be augmented by the Commission, if necessary, to maintain a minimum emergency standard of health.

With regard to resettlement possibilities, the Commission noted that there was a real prospect for the early resettlement of large numbers of refugees and displaced persons. This was particularly the case with regard to the schemes for resettlement in Western European countries, but the prospects for resettlement overseas, particularly in South America, had also much improved. The Commission felt that it had at last been realized that refugees and displaced persons were not simply a problem and a "liability" but could be a very valuable help, particularly to countries where there was a shortage of manpower.

It is expected that by June 30, 1948, the total number of persons requiring the care and assistance of IRO will be reduced by approximately 300,000, on the basis of withdrawals as follows: 150,000 through repatriation, 30,000 through settlement overseas, 70,000 through settlement in countries in Western Europe and 50,000 increase in the number of self-sustaining refugees and displaced persons no longer requiring care and maintenance.

The Commission urged the governments concerned to carry out as soon as practicable the screening of refugees and displaced persons as recommended by the General Assembly of the United Nations on December 15, 1946. It also appealed to governments concerned to intensify their efforts to provide employment for refugees and displaced persons, pending their repatriation or resettlement.

There are about 3,000,000 persons, scattered throughout the world during the war, about whom it has been thus far impossible to gain any information, although it is assumed that the majority of them are dead. In view of the importance of tracing these missing persons, the Commission directed the Executive Secretary to establish, in co-operation with the National Tracing Bureaus, an International Tracing Bureau to continue on a European scale the activities of zonal tracing services in Germany and Austria. The tracing services of the Central Tracing Bureau, set up for Germany by UNRRA in co-operation with the occupation authorities, have as a result been assumed by the Preparatory Commission. The Executive Secretary was directed to appeal to all governments concerned to submit, as soon as possible, lists of names, with particulars, of persons to be traced and to seek especially the co-operation of those countries where tracing operations were to be carried out.

With a view to encouraging membership in the IRO, the Commission urged Members of the United Nations which had not yet done so to adhere to the Constitution of IRO, pointing out that this imposed no obligation on them to accept refugees and displaced persons. Admittance of refugees and displaced persons to the territories of governments, as well as the precise form of contribution to IRO, was a matter of free negotiation between the government concerned and the Organization.

E. BUDGET

The General Assembly of the United Nations, on December 15, 1946, approved, as an Annex to the IRO Constitution, the budget of the Organization for its first year of operations. This included an administrative budget in the amount of $4,800,000, an operational budget of $151,060,500, and a budget of $5,000,000 for large-scale resettlement purposes.

In view of the difficulties experienced by member Governments of IRO's Preparatory Commission in making early advances, and of the uncertainty as to the total sums likely to be made available during the last half of 1947, the Commission, at the second part of its first session, decided to approve operational and administrative budgets each of which were 75 per cent of the original estimates approved by the General Assembly. Thus, the operational budget for the Commission was $112,045,000 as compared with the General Assembly's estimate of $151,060,500, which was based on 100 per cent United Nations membership in IRO. The administrative budget was reduced, accordingly, to $3,600,000. The Commission agreed that as soon as sufficient funds became available or were pledged, the Executive Secretary could proceed on a 100 per cent basis.

Subject to the provisions of paragraph 1 of this article, the members of the Organization shall be those States whose duly authorized representatives sign this Constitution without reservation as to subsequent acceptance, and those States which deposit with the Secretary-General of the United Nations their instruments of acceptance after their duly authorized representatives have signed this Constitution with such reservation.

3. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 1 of this article, those States, whose representatives have not signed the Constitution referred to in the previous paragraph, or which, having signed it, have not deposited the relevant instrument of acceptance within the following six months, may, however, be admitted as members of the Organization in the following cases:

(a) If they undertake to liquidate any outstanding contributions in accordance with the relevant scale; or

(b) If they submit to the Organization a plan for the admission to their territory, as immigrants, of refugees or displaced persons in such numbers, and on such settlement conditions as shall, in the opinion of the Organization, require from the applicant State an expenditure or investment equivalent, or approximately equivalent, to the contribution that they would be called upon, in accordance with the relevant scale, to make to the budget of the Organization.

4. Those States which, on signing the Constitution, express their intention to avail themselves of clause (b) of paragraph 3 of this article may submit the plan referred to in that paragraph within the following three months, without prejudice to the presentation within six months of the relevant instrument of acceptance.

5. Members of the Organization which are suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of Membership of the United Nations shall, upon request of the latter, be suspended from the rights and privileges of this Organization.

6. Members of the Organization which are expelled from the United Nations shall automatically cease to be members of this Organization.

7. With the approval of the General Assembly of the United Nations, members of the Organization which are not members of the United Nations, and which have persistently violated the principles of the Charter of the United Nations may be suspended from the rights and privileges of the Organization, or expelled from its membership by the General Council.

8. A member of the Organization which has persistently violated the principles contained in the present Constitution, may be suspended from the rights and privileges of the Organization by the General Council, and with the ap-

2. The General Council shall be convened in regular session not less than once a year by the Executive Committee provided, however, that for three years after the Organization comes into being the General Council shall be convened in regular session not less than twice a year. It may be convened in special session whenever the Executive Committee shall deem necessary; and it shall be convened in special session by the Director-General within thirty days after a request for such a special session is received by the Director-General from one-third of the members of the Council.

3. At the opening meeting of each session of the General Council, the Chairman of the Executive Committee shall preside until the General Council has elected one of its members as Chairman for the session.

4. The General Council shall thereupon proceed to elect from among its members a first Vice-Chairman and a second Vice-Chairman, and such other officers as it may deem necessary.

Article 7

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

1. The Executive Committee shall perform such functions as may be necessary to give effect to the policies of the General Council, and may make, between sessions of the General Council, policy decisions of an emergency nature which it shall pass on to the Director-General, who shall be guided thereby, and shall report to the Executive Committee on the action which he has taken thereon. These decisions shall be subject to reconsideration by the General Council.

2. The Executive Committee of the General Council shall consist of the representatives of nine members of the Organization. Each member of the Executive Committee shall be elected for a two-year term by the General Council at a regular session of the Council. A member may continue to hold office on the Executive Committee during any such period as may intervene between the conclusion of its term of office and the first succeeding meeting of the General Council at which an election takes place. A member shall be at all times eligible for re-election to the Executive Committee. If a vacancy occurs in the membership of the Executive Committee between two sessions of the General Council, the Executive Committee may fill the vacancy by itself appointing another member to hold office until the next meeting of the Council.

3. The Executive Committee shall elect a Chairman and a Vice-Chairman from among its members, the terms of office to be determined by the General Council.

4. Meetings of the Executive Committee shall be convened:

(a) At the call of the Chairman, normally twice a month;

(b) Whenever any representative of a member of the Executive Committee shall request the convening of a meeting, by a letter addressed to the Director-General, in which case the meeting shall be convened within seven days of the date of the receipt of the request;

(c) In the case of a vacancy occurring in the Chairmanship, the Director-General shall convene a meeting at which the first item on the agenda shall be the election of a Chairman.

5. The Executive Committee may, in order to investigate the situation in the field, either as a body or through a delegation of its members, visit camps, hostels or assembly points within the control of the Organization, and may give instructions to the Director-General in consequence of the reports of such visits.

6. The Executive Committee shall receive the reports of the Director-General as provided in paragraph 6 of Article 8 of this Constitution, and, after consideration thereof, shall request the Director-General to transmit these reports to the General Council with such comments as the Executive Committee may consider appropriate. These reports and such comments shall be transmitted to all members of the General Council before its next regular session and shall be published. The Executive Committee may request the Director-General to submit such further reports as may be deemed necessary.

Article 8

ADMINISTRATION

1. The chief administrative officer of the Organization shall be the Director-General. He shall be responsible to the General Council and the Executive Committee and shall carry out the administrative and executive functions of the Organization in accordance with the decisions of the General Council and the Executive Committee, and shall report on the action taken thereon.

2. The Director-General shall be nominated by the Executive Committee and appointed by the General Council. If no person acceptable to the General Council is nominated by the Executive Committee, the General Council may proceed to appoint a person who has not been nominated by the Committee. When a vacancy occurs in the office of the Director-General the Executive Committee may appoint an Acting Director-General to assume all the duties and functions of the office until a Director-General can be appointed by the General Council.

3. The Director-General shall serve under a contract which shall be signed, on behalf of the Organization, by the Chairman of the Executive Committee and it shall be a clause of such contract that six months' notice of termination can be given on either side. In exceptional circumstances, the Executive Committee, subject to subsequent confirmation by the General Council, has the power to relieve the Director-General of his duties by a two-thirds majority vote of the members if, in the Committee's opinion, his conduct is such as to warrant such action.

4. The staff of the Organization shall be appointed by the Director-General under regulations to be established by the General Council.

5. The Director-General shall be present, or be represented by one of his subordinate officers, at all meetings of the General Council, or the Executive Committee and of all other committees and sub-committees. He or his representatives may participate in any such meeting but shall have no vote.

6. (a) The Director-General shall prepare at the end of each half-year period a report on the work of the Organization. The report, prepared at the end of each alternate period of six months, shall relate to the work of the Organization during the preceding year and shall give a full account of the activities of the Organization during that period. These reports shall be submitted to the Executive Committee for consideration, and thereafter shall be transmitted to the General Council together with any comments of the Executive Committee thereon, as provided by paragraph 6 of Article 7 of this Constitution.

(b) At every special session of the General Council the Director-General shall present a statement of the work of the Organization since the last meeting.

Article 9

STAFF

1. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity. A further consideration in the employment of the staff shall be adherence to the principles laid down in the present Constitution. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting staff on an appropriate geographical basis, and of employing an adequate number of persons from the countries of origin of the displaced persons.

2. No person shall be employed by the Organization who is excluded under Part II, other than paragraph 5, of Annex I to this Constitution, from becoming the concern of the Organization.

3. In the performance of their duties, the Director-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any Government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization. Each member of the Organization undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Director-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 10

FINANCE

1. The Director-General shall submit, through the Executive Committee, to the General Council an annual budget, covering the necessary administrative, operational and large-scale re-settlement expenditures of the Organization, and from time to time such supplementary budgets as may be required. The Executive Committee shall transmit the budget to the General Council with any remarks it may deem appropriate. Upon final approval of a budget by the General Council, the total under each of these three headings—to wit, "administrative," "operational" and "large-scale re-settlement"—shall be allocated to the members in proportions for each heading to be determined from time to time by a two-thirds majority vote of the members of the General Council present and voting.

2. Contributions shall be payable, as a result of negotiations undertaken, at the request of members, between the Organization and such members, in kind or in such currency as may be provided for in a decision by the General Council, having regard to currencies in which the anticipated expenditure of the Organization will be effected from time to time, regardless of the currency in which the budget is expressed.

3. Each member undertakes to contribute to the Organization its share of the administrative expenses as determined and allocated under paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article.

4. Each member shall contribute to the operational expenditures—except for large-scale re-settlement expenditures—as determined and allocated under paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article, subject to the requirements of the constitutional procedure of such members.

The members undertake to contribute to the large-scale re-settlement expenditures on a voluntary basis and subject to the requirements of their constitutional procedure.

5. A member of the Organization which, after the expiration of a period of three months following the date of the coming into force of this Constitution, has not paid its financial contribution to the Organization for the first financial year, shall have no vote in the General Council or the Executive Committee until such contribution has been paid.

6. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 5 of this article, a member of the Organization which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Council or the Executive Committee if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding one full year.

7. The General Council may, nevertheless, permit such members to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of such members.

8. The administrative budget of the Organization shall be submitted annually to the General Assembly of the United Nations for such review and recommendation as the General Assembly may deem appropriate. The agreement under which the Organization shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations under Article 3 of this Constitution may provide, inter alia, for the approval of the administrative budget of the Organization by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

9. Without prejudice to the provisions concerning supplementary budgets in paragraph 1 of this article, the following exceptional arrangements shall apply in respect of the financial year in which this Constitution comes into force:

(a) The budget shall be the provisional budget set forth in Annex II to this Constitution; and

(b) The amounts to be contributed by the members shall be in the proportions set forth in Annex II to this Constitution.

Article 11

1. The Organization shall establish its headquarters at Paris or at Geneva, as the General Council shall decide, and all meetings of the General Council and the Executive Committee shall be held at this headquarters, unless a majority of the members of the General Council or the Executive Committee have agreed, at a previous meeting or by correspondence with the Director-General, to meet elsewhere.

2. The Executive Committee may establish such regional and other offices and representations as may be necessary.

3. All offices and representations shall be established only with the consent of the Government in authority in the place of establishment.

Article 12

(b) Representatives of members, officials and administrative personnel of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization.

3. Such legal status, privileges and immunities shall be defined in an agreement to be prepared by the Organization after consultation with the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The agreement shall be open to accession by all members and shall continue in force as between the Organization and every member which accedes to the agreement.

Article 14

RELATIONS WITH OTHER ORGANIZATIONS

1. Subject to the provisions of the agreement to be negotiated with the United Nations, pursuant to Article 3 of this Constitution, the Organization may establish such effective relationships as may be desirable with other international organizations.

2. The Organization may assume all or part of the functions, and acquire all or part of the resources, assets and liabilities of any inter-governmental organization or agency, the purposes and functions of which lie within the scope of the Organization. Such action may be taken either through mutually acceptable arrangements with the competent authorities of such organizations or agencies, or pursuant to authority conferred upon the Organization by international convention or agreement.

Article 15

RELATIONSHIP WITH AUTHORITIES OF COUNTRIES OF LOCATION OF REFUGEES AND DISPLACED PERSONS

The relationship of the Organization with the Governments or administrations of countries in which displaced persons or refugees are located, and the conditions under which it will operate in such countries, shall be determined by agreements to be negotiated by it with such Governments or administrations in accordance with the terms of this Constitution.

Article 16

AMENDMENT OF CONSTITUTION

Texts of proposed amendments to this Constitution shall be communicated by the Director-General to members at least three months in advance of their consideration by the General Council. Amendments shall come into effect when adopted by a two-thirds majority of the members of the General Council present and voting and accepted by two-thirds of the members in accordance with their respective constitutional processes, provided, however, that amendments involving new obligations for members shall come into force in respect of each member only on acceptance by it.

Article 17

2. Subject to Article 96 of the Charter of the United Nations and of Chapter II of the Statute of the International Court of Justice, any question or dispute concerning the interpretation or application of this Constitution shall be referred to the International Court of Justice, unless the General Council or the parties to such dispute agree to another mode of settlement.

ANNEX I

DEFINITIONS—GENERAL PRINCIPLES

1. The following general principles constitute an integral part of the definitions as laid down in Parts I and II of this Annex.

(a) The main object of the Organization will be to bring about a rapid and positive solution of the problem of bona fide refugees and displaced persons, which shall be just and equitable to all concerned.

(b) The main task concerning displaced persons is to encourage and assist in every way possible their early return to their countries of origin, having regard to the principles laid down in paragraph (c) (ii) of the resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 12 February 1946 regarding the problem of refugees (Annex III).

(c) As laid down in the resolution adopted by the Economic and Social Council on 16 February 1946, no international assistance should be given to traitors, quislings and war criminals, and nothing should be done to prevent in any way their surrender and punishment.

(d) It should be the concern of the Organization to ensure that its assistance is not exploited in order to encourage subversive or hostile activities directed against the Government of any of the United Nations.

(e) It should be the concern of the Organization to ensure that its assistance is not exploited by persons in the case of whom it is clear that they are unwilling to return to their countries of origin because they prefer idleness to facing the hardships of helping in the reconstruction of their countries, or by persons who intend to settle in other countries for purely economic reasons, thus qualifying as emigrants.

(f) On the other hand it should equally be the concern of the Organization to ensure that no bona fide and deserving refugee or displaced person is deprived of such assistance as it may be in a position to offer.

(g) The Organization should endeavour to carry out its functions in such a way as to avoid disturbing friendly relations between nations. In the pursuit of this objective, the Organization should exercise special care in cases in which the re-establishment or resettlement of refugees or displaced persons might be contemplated, either in countries contiguous to their respective countries of origin or in non-self-governing countries. The Organization should give due weight, among other factors, to any evidence of genuine apprehension and concern felt in regard to such plans, in the former case, by the country of origin of the persons involved, or, in the latter case, by the indigenous population of the non-self-governing country in question.

2. To ensure the impartial and equitable application of the above principles and of the terms of the definition which follows, some special system of semi-judicial machinery should be created, with appropriate constitution, procedure and terms of reference.

PART I

Refugees and displaced persons within the meaning of the resolution adopted by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations on 16 February 1946.

SECTION A—DEFINITION OF REFUGEES

1. Subject to the provisions of sections C and D and Part II of this Annex, the term "refugee" applies to a person who has left, or who is outside of, his country of nationality or of former habitual residence, and who, whether or not he had retained his nationality, belongs to one of the following categories:

(a) Victims of the nazi or fascist regimes or of regimes which took part on their side in the second world war, or of the quisling or similar regimes which assisted them against the United Nations, whether enjoying international status as refugees or not;

(b) Spanish Republicans and other victims of the Falangist regime in Spain, whether enjoying international status as refugees or not;

(c) Persons who were considered refugees before the outbreak of the second world war, for reasons of race, religion, nationality or political opinion.

2. Subject to the provisions of sections C and D and of Part II of this Annex regarding the exclusion of certain categories of persons, including war criminals, quislings and traitors, from the benefits of the Organization, the term "refugee" also applies to a person, other than a displaced person as defined in section B of this Annex, who is outside of his country of nationality or former habitual residence, and who, as a result of events subsequent to the outbreak of the second world war, is unable or unwilling to avail himself of the protection of the Government of his country of nationality or former nationality.

3. Subject to the provisions of Section D and of Part II of this Annex, the term "refugee" also applies to persons who, having resided in Germany or Austria, and being of Jewish origin or foreigners or stateless persons, were victims of nazi persecution and were detained in, or were obliged to flee from, and were subsequently returned to, one of those countries as a result of enemy action, or of war circumstances, and have not yet been firmly resettled therein.

4. The term "refugee" also applies to unaccompanied children who are war orphans or whose parents have disappeared, and who are outside their countries of origin. Such children, 16 years of age or under, shall be given all possible priority assistance, including, normally, assistance in repatriation in the case of those whose nationality can be determined.

SECTION B—DEFINITION OF DISPLACED PERSONS

The term "displaced person" applies to a person who, as a result of the actions of the authorities of the regimes mentioned in Part I, section A, paragraph 1 (a) of this Annex, has been deported from, or has been obliged to leave, his country of nationality or of former habitual residence, such as persons who were compelled to undertake forced labour or who were deported for racial, religious or political reasons. Displaced persons will only fall within the mandate of the Organization subject to the provisions of sections C and D of Part I and to the provisions of Part II of this Annex. If the reasons for their displacement have ceased to exist, they should be repatriated as soon as possible in accordance with Article 2, paragraph 1 (a) of this Constitution, and subject to the provision of paragraph (c), sub-paragraphs (ii) and (iii) of the General Assembly resolution of 12 February 1946 regarding the problem of refugees (Annex III).

SECTION C—CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH "REFUGEES" AND "DISPLACED PERSONS" WILL BECOME THE CONCERN OF THE ORGANIZATION

1. In the case of all the above categories except those mentioned in section A, paragraphs 1 (b) and 3 of this Annex, persons will become the concern of the Organization in the sense of the resolution adopted by the Economic and Social Council on 16 February 1946 if they can be repatriated, and the help of the Organization is required in order to provide for their repatriation, or if they have definitely, in complete freedom and after receiving full knowledge of the facts, including adequate information from the Governments of their countries of nationality or former habitual residence, expressed valid objections to returning to those countries.

(a) The following shall be considered as valid objections:

(i) Persecution, or fear, based on reasonable grounds of persecution because of race, religion, nationality or political opinions, provided these opinions are not in conflict with the principles of the United Nations, as laid down in the Preamble of the Charter of the United Nations;

(ii) Objections of a political nature judged by the Organization to be "valid", as contemplated in paragraph 8 (a)¹ of the report of the Third Committee of the General Assembly as adopted by the Assembly on 12 February 1946.

(iii) In the case of persons falling within the category mentioned in section A, paragraphs 1 (a) and 1 (c) compelling family reasons arising out of previous persecution, or compelling reasons of infirmity or illness.

(b) The following shall normally be considered "adequate information": information regarding conditions in the countries of nationality of the refugees and displaced persons concerned, communicated to them directly by representatives of the Governments of these countries, who shall be given every facility for visiting camps and assembly centres of refugees and displaced persons in order to place such information before them.

2. In the case of all refugees falling within the terms of section A, paragraph 1 (b) of this Annex, persons will become the concern of the Organization in the sense of the resolution adopted by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations on 16 February 1946, so long as the Falangist regime in Spain continues. Should that regime be replaced by a democratic regime they will have to produce valid objections against returning to Spain corresponding to those indicated in paragraph 1 (a) of this section.

SECTION D — CIRCUMSTANCES IN WHICH REFUGEES AND DISPLACED PERSONS WILL CEASE TO BE THE CONCERN OF THE ORGANIZATION

Refugees or displaced persons will cease to be the concern of the Organization:

(a) When they have returned to the countries of their nationality in United Nations territory, unless their former habitual residence to which they wish to return is outside their country of nationality; or

(b) When they have acquired a new nationality; or

(c) When they have, in the determination of the Organization, become otherwise firmly established; or

(d) When they have unreasonably refused to accept the proposals of the Organization for their re-settlement or repatriation; or

(e) When they are making no substantial effort towards earning their living when it is possible for them to do so, or when they are exploiting the assistance of the Organization.

PART II

Persons who will not be the concern of the Organization.

1. War criminals, quislings and traitors.

2. Any other persons who can be shown:

(a) To have assisted the enemy in persecuting civil populations of countries Members of the United Nations; or

(b) To have voluntarily assisted the enemy forces since the outbreak of the second world war in their operations against the United Nations.²

4. Persons of German ethnic origin, whether German nationals or members of German minorities in other countries, who:

(a) Have been or may be transferred to Germany from other countries;

(b) Have been, during the second world war, evacuated from Germany to other countries;

(c) Have fled from, or into, Germany, or from their places of residence into countries other than Germany in order to avoid falling into the hands of Allied armies.

5. Persons who are in receipt of financial support and protection from their country of nationality, unless their country of nationality requests international assistance for them.

6. Persons who, since the end of hostilities in the second world war:

(a) Have participated in any organization having as one of its purposes the overthrow by armed force of the Government of their country of origin, being a Member of the United Nations; or the overthrow by armed force of the Government of any other Member of the United Nations, or have participated in any terrorist organization;

(b) Have become leaders of movements hostile to the Government of their country

"In answering the representative of Belgium, the Chairman stated that it was implied that the international body would judge what were, or what were not, 'valid objections'; and that such objections clearly might be of a political nature."

² Mere continuance of normal and peaceful duties, not performed with the specific purpose of aiding the enemy against the Allies or against the civil population of territory in enemy occupation, shall not be considered to constitute "voluntary assistance." Nor shall acts of general humanity, such as care of wounded or dying, be so considered except in cases where help of this nature given to enemy nationals could equally well have been given to Allied nationals and was purposely withheld from them.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY ON 12 FEBRUARY 1946 (document A/45)

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY,

RECOGNIZING that the problem of refugees and displaced persons of all categories is one of immediate urgency and recognizing the necessity of clearly distinguishing between genuine refugees and displaced persons on the one hand, and the war criminals, quislings and traitors referred to in paragraph (d) below, on the other:

(a) DECIDES to refer this problem to the Economic and Social Council for thorough examination in all its aspects under item 10 of the agenda for the first session of the Council and for report to the second part of the first session of the General Assembly;

(b) RECOMMENDS to the Economic and Social Council that it establish a special committee for the purpose of carrying out promptly the examination and preparation of the report referred to in paragraph (a); and

(c) RECOMMENDS to the Economic and Social Council that it take into consideration in this matter the following principles:

(i) this problem is international in scope and nature;

(ii) no refugees or displaced persons who have finally and definitely, in complete freedom and after receiving full knowledge of the facts, including adequate information from the Governments of their countries of origin, expressed valid objections to returning to their countries of origin and who do not come within the provisions of paragraph (d) below, shall be compelled to return to their country of origin. The future of such refugees or displaced persons shall become the concern of whatever international body may be recognized or established as a result of the report referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b) above, except in cases where the Government of the country where they are established has made an arrangement with this body to assume the complete cost of their maintenance and the responsibility for their protection;

(iii) the main task concerning displaced persons is to encourage and assist in every way possible their early return to their countries of origin. Such assistance may take the form of promoting the conclusion of bilateral arrangements for mutual assistance in the repatriation of such persons, having regard to the principles laid down in paragraph (c) (ii) above;

(d) CONSIDERS that no action taken as a result of this resolution shall be of such a character as to interfere in any way with the surrender and punishment of war criminals, quislings and traitors, in conformity with present or future international arrangements or agreements;

(e) CONSIDERS that Germans being transferred to Germany from other States or who fled to other States from Allied troops, do not fall under the action of this declaration in so far as their situation may be decided by Allied forces of occupation in Germany, in agreement with the Governments of the respective countries.

IX. The International Trade Organization

On February 18, 1946, the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, on the motion of the United States representative, decided to call an International Conference on Trade and Employment, to meet in the latter part of 1946, for the purpose of expanding the production, exchange and consumption of goods.

Prior to this, on December 6, 1945, the Department of State of the United States had made public a document setting forth "Proposals for Expansion of World Trade and Employment." On the same day the Government of the United Kingdom expressed its full agreement on all important points in these proposals, which had resulted from the Anglo-American financial and trade discussions, and accepted them as a basis for international discussion. The proposals were later elaborated by the United States Government and published in September 1946 as a "Suggested Charter for an International Trade Organization."

The Economic and Social Council established a Preparatory Committee of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment to prepare for consideration at the Conference, an agenda and a draft convention or charter for an International Trade Organization. The Council also suggested certain topics to be included in the agenda of the Preparatory Committee. It appointed the following States to designate representatives as members of the Committee: Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Union of South Africa, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Secretary-General of the United Nations announced in May 1946, during the second session of the Council, that it would not be possible to hold the International Conference on Trade and Employment until the following year, but that arrangements had been made for the Preparatory Committee to meet in London on October 15, 1946.

B. FIRST SESSION OF THE PREPARATORY COMMITTEE

The Preparatory Committee held its first session in London from October 15 to November 26, 1946. It was attended by representatives of eighteen of its nineteen member governments. The U.S.S.R. had indicated that it felt unable to participate in the work of the Committee as it had not found it possible to devote sufficient preliminary study to the important questions which were the subject of the Committee's discussions. Colombia, Denmark, Mexico, Peru, Poland and Syria, not members of the Committee, sent observers to the meeting. The following international organizations also sent observers: the International Labour Organisation, Food and Agriculture Organization, International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, International Monetary Fund, International Chamber of Commerce, International Co-operative Alliance, World Federation of Trade Unions and the American Federation of Labor.

The Preparatory Committee elected Max Suetens (Belgium) as its Chairman. Eric Wyndham-White (United Kingdom) was Executive Secretary.

The Committee had before it for discussion the agenda suggested by the Economic and Social Council, which included: international agreement on the achievement and maintenance of high and stable levels of employment and economic activity; international agreement on regulations, restrictions and discrimination affecting international trade; international agreement on intergovernmental commodity arrangements; and establishment of an international trade organization as a specialized agency of the United Nations. It added to these the question of an international agreement relating to industrial development and the question of international agreement on an undertaking to promote high and steadily rising levels of effective demand.

To examine the appropriate sections of the agenda, the Preparatory Committee established six working committees, as follows: Employment and Economic Activity, General Commercial Policy, Restrictive Business Practices, Inter-governmental Commodity Arrangements, Administration and Organization and a joint Committee on Industrial Development. The working committees, in considering the relevant sections of the agenda, used as a basic document the "Suggested Charter" issued by the United States in September 1946, together with documents submitted by other delegations. These included, among others, a draft Charter submitted by the delegation of Brazil, a detailed commentary on the United States proposals submitted by the delegation of India and a memorandum on employment policy submitted by the delegation of the United Kingdom.

The Preparatory Committee adopted the reports of its working committees. It noted that the United States had previously invited the States which were now members of the Committee to meet to negotiate concrete arrangements for the relaxation of tariffs and trade barriers of all kinds. It therefore suggested that such reciprocal and mutually advantageous tariff negotiations be conducted under the sponsorship of the Preparatory Committee at its second session.

Pending the establishment of an International Trade Organization, the Committee suggested that the Secretary-General of the United Nations appoint an interim co-ordinating committee for international commodity arrangements. This interim committee was to be composed of the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Committee, a representative from FAO to be concerned with agricultural primary commodities, and a person to be selected by the Secretary-General of the United Nations to be concerned with non-agricultural primary commodities. Accordingly, in June 1947, the Secretary-General, at the request of the Economic and Social Council, appointed the Interim Co-ordinating Committee for International Commodity Arrangements. The Economic and Social Council recommended that Members of the United Nations adopt as a guide in inter-governmental commodity arrangements the principles laid down in the chapter of the ITO Charter dealing with these arrangements.

The Preparatory Committee requested the Economic and Social Council to state whether the suggested functions of ITO with regard to economic development, as set forth in the relevant section of the Charter, were in accordance with the Council's views on the appropriate allocation of such functions. The Council, when this question came up before it in March 1947, decided that it would be appropriate for the ITO to provide advice and technical assistance to its member nations in making and carrying out their plans for economic development. At the same time, the Council expressed the hope that in the final drafting of the ITO charter, careful consideration would be given to the activities of specialized agencies and of the Sub-Commission on Economic Development.

A drafting committee was established by the Preparatory Committee to prepare a draft charter of the International Trade Organization. It was to edit for consistency and clarity those portions of the text on which the Preparatory Committee had come to substantial agreement, and prepare alternative drafts of those portions on which there remained disagreement. It was also to prepare suggested drafts covering such uncompleted portions as were referred to it by the Preparatory Committee, together with explanatory notes and commentaries.

C. DRAFTING COMMITTEE

The drafting committee was composed of representatives of the members of the Preparatory Committee. It met at the headquarters of the United Nations from January 20 to February 25, 1947.

The report of the drafting committee, which included the draft Charter of the proposed organization, was forwarded for approval and further consideration to governments and to the second session of the Preparatory Committee. In its revised form, the draft Charter as it emerged from the drafting committee was divided into eight chapters: 1. Purposes; 2. Membership; 3. Employment, Effective Demand and Economic Activity; 4. Economic Development; 5. General Commercial Policy; 6. Restrictive Business Practices; 7. Inter-Governmental Commodity Arrangements; 8. Organization.

Inasmuch as the second session of the Preparatory Committee, in addition to completing the work of its first session, was to be concerned with concluding multilateral tariff negotiations, the drafting committee prepared an interim instrument entitled "General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade" to aid the delegates in their discussions. This instrument embodied the fundamental provisions of the Charter, especially of its chapter on General Commercial Policy. (These provisions included such questions as: general most-favored-nation treatment; national treatment on international taxation and regulations; freedom of transit; anti-dumping and countervailing duties; tariff valuation; customs formalities and unions; exchange arrangements; subsidies; non-discriminatory administration of State-trading enterprises; maintenance of domestic employment and governmental assistance to economic development.) The General Agreement provides for an interim trade committee, to be composed of one representative of each contracting party, to administer its provisions. As soon as the ITO is established and capable of exercising its functions, the committee may be dissolved and its functions transferred to the Organization.

D. SECOND SESSION OF THE PREPARATORY COMMITTEE

The Preparatory Committee convened for its second session in Geneva on April 10, 1947, and hoped to complete its work some time in September 1947.

In addition to the States and organizations represented at the first session, the following sent observers to the second session: Afghanistan, Argentina, Ecuador, Egypt, Greece, Iran, Saudi-Arabia, Sweden, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia and the International Federation of Agricultural Producers. Syrian representatives attended the second session as part of a delegation representing the Syro-Lebanese Customs Union in the tariff negotiations.

This session of the Preparatory Committee was charged with the two-fold task of completing its work on the draft Charter, which is to be presented as the basic document for discussion at the International Conference on Trade and Employment, and of concluding negotiations for a multilateral trade agreement.

Prior to the session, each member of the Committee had compiled a list of commodities which it was interested in exporting and for which it asked tariff concessions from the other members of the Committee. Each member also compiled a schedule of concessions which it was prepared to make to other countries on particular products. The negotiations are being conducted in accordance with a selective product-by-product method, ensuring flexibility by taking into account the needs of individual countries and their industries. No country is expected to grant concessions without receiving concessions in return from the other negotiating countries. Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands are considered as a Customs Union, and are jointly represented in the negotiations as one delegation. Sixteen delegations are taking part in the negotiations. Of the 120 possible bilateral negotiations which might have taken place, 104 have begun; in other cases, the volume of trade is so small that there is no need for negotiations. Each negotiating country will be contractually entitled to each of the tariff reductions and other concessions in each of the schedules of the other parties. When the bilateral negotiations are completed, their results will be grouped together into a multilateral agreement to be signed by the contracting States and presented to the Conference.

With regard to the draft Charter of ITO, the Committee discussed anew all the articles and appointed a special committee of lawyers to put the text into final form.

The Preparatory Committee recommended to the Economic and Social Council that the International Conference on Trade and Employment be convened on November 21, 1947, in Havana, Cuba. It felt that States not Members of the United Nations which had an appreciable interest in world trade should also be invited to the Conference. The Committee recommended that all Members of the United Nations be asked to participate and that the following non-Members of the United Nations, which had an appreciable interest in world trade, should also be invited to the Conference: Albania, Austria, Bulgaria, Eire, Finland, Hungary, Italy, Portugal, Rumania, Switzerland, Transjordan and the Yemen. It was suggested that appropriate authorities in Germany, Japan and Korea should also be invited, as well as Burma, Ceylon and Southern Rhodesia, which possess full autonomy in the conduct of their external commercial relations and in related matters to be dealt with by the Conference.

The substance of the agenda of the Conference, (subject to the approval of the fifth session of the Economic and Social Council)¹ will be based on the subject index of the draft Charter. This includes: Employment and Economic Activity; Economic Development; General Commercial Policy; and Inter-Governmental Commodity Arrangements. The relevant chapters of the draft Charter will be the principal working paper under each heading. The Conference is to establish the proposed International Trade Organization and to adopt a Charter for the Organization.

X. The Universal Postal Union

A. ORIGIN

The Universal Postal Union was established on October 9, 1874, with the approval of the Universal Postal Convention by the Postal Congress of Berne, Switzerland. It superseded the General Postal Union, which had been established in 1863. The Universal Postal Union was extended and improved by the Postal Congresses of Paris (1878), Lisbon (1885), Vienna (1891), Washington (1897), Rome (1906), Stockholm (1924), London (1929), Cairo (1934) and Buenos Aires (1939), and by the conferences of Berne (1876), Paris (1880), Brussels (1890), Zermatt (1921), Nice (1922), Cortina d'Ampezzo (1925), The Hague (1927), Paris (1928) and Ottawa (1933).

Ten years after its foundation, the Union included 86 postal administrations; by 1900 there were 113; by 1938 the membership included all of the countries of the world, except for Nepal and Touva.

B. PURPOSE

The UPU was established to alleviate the uncertainty, confusion and excessive cost of international postal communications by uniting its member countries in a single postal territory for the reciprocal exchange of mail. Every member of the Union binds itself to transmit the mails entrusted to it by every other member by the best means of communications which it employs for its own mail.

C. STRUCTURE

The Convention provides for a Universal Postal Congress and an International Bureau.

Every member is invited to send representatives to the Congress, which usually meets at intervals of five years. It reviews the International Postal Convention and its subsidiary agreements on the basis of proposals submitted by member countries.

The Twelfth Congress provided for the establishment of a Permanent Executive and Liaison Commission, which will not come into existence until the entry into force of the Twelfth Postal Convention on July 1, 1948.

The International Bureau, which was founded on September 15, 1875, functions as the permanent secretariat of the Union. It collects, co-ordinates, publishes and circulates information of all kinds concerning the international postal service; gives opinions, on request, on questions in dispute; examines requests for amendments to the Acts of the Congresses; gives notice of amendments adopted. It is also responsible for supplying the administrations of the Union with reply-coupons, identity-cards and postal orders for travellers, and in general acts as a clearing house for the settlement of accounts relative to the international postal service. The International Bureau has no executive powers; it must follow the instructions of the Congress.

D. ACTIVITIES

In accordance with a decision of the second session of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, the Secretary-General called a meeting of postal experts of Members of the United Nations for the purpose of drafting proposals for submission to the Congress regarding the relationship between the United Nations and UPU. The Committee of Governmental Postal Experts, attended by representatives from 39 countries, met in December 1946 at United Nations Headquarters. A draft agreement was adopted for submission to the Universal Postal Congress. The report of the Postal Experts expressed the view that any modification of the Convention of the UPU in consequence of the eventual conclusion of the contemplated agreement could be discussed solely by the Congress. By a resolution of March 28, 1947, the Economic and Social Council authorized its Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies to enter into negotiations at the appropriate time with the UPU for the purpose of bringing it into relationship with the United Nations as a specialized agency.

The Twelfth Congress of the UPU convened in Paris on May 6, 1947. All members of the Union, with the exception of Spain, were invited to participate. In view of the resolution of the General Assembly barring Franco Spain from membership in any specialized agency brought into relationship with the United Nations, the Congress voted to exclude Spain from membership in the Union. On May 28 the Congress passed a resolution approving relationship with the United Nations. Discussions on the terms of the relationship were subsequently conducted between a negotiating committee of the Congress and representatives of the Economic and Social Council's Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies. The text of a draft agreement was decided upon and finally approved by the Congress. The agreement has still to be approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

It was anticipated that before its adjournment in early July 1947, the Congress would have decided on changes in the Universal Postal Convention, revisions of international postal regulations and questions with regard to membership in the Union.

XI. The International Telecommunications Union

The International Telecommunications Union was established on December 9, 1932, by the Madrid Radio-telegraph Conference as a successor to the International Telegraph Union which was formed in Paris in 1865 by twenty countries. The International Telecommunication Convention provides for a bureau of the International Telecommunications Union to function, under the control of the Swiss Government, as the central office of the Union at Berne. ITU was set up to organize and regulate exchanges of telecommunications by telegraph (since 1865), by telephone (since 1885), and by radio (since 1906) between countries members of the Union. Most of the countries in which there are telecommunication services are members of ITU. There are 77 member countries.

The Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, on March 28, 1947, authorized its Committee on Negotiations with Specialized Agencies to enter into negotiations at the appropriate time with the ITU for the purpose of bringing it into relationship with the United Nations.

A plenipotentiary conference of the ITU convened at Atlantic City, New Jersey, on July 1, 1947, to discuss, among other items, the terms of the agreement with the United Nations and amendments to the International Telecommunications Convention to provide for certain changes in the membership and structure of the ITU.

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS.

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

STATUTE OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 1

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

CHAPTER I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labor cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy despatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.

2. The rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.

2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.

3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.

4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.

5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20 and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.

2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.

3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.

4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.

5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.

6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.

7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.

8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

CHAPTER II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.

2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- a. the interpretation of a treaty;
- b. any question of international law;
- c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
- d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex æquo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

CHAPTER III

PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.
2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.
3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.
2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.
3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.
4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.
5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.
2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.
2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favor of its claim.
2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.
2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.
3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.

2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

CHAPTER IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

CHAPTER V

AMENDMENTS

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

X Indicates that the country is a member of the organization (or commission, in the case of WHO and IRO).

① The index number ① indicates countries which have become parties to the Constitution of the World Health Organization and therefore may be considered fully qualified as WHO members; Albania, Ethiopia, Iran, Italy, New Zealand, Saudi Arabia, Switzerland, Syria and Transjordan are not, however, members of the WHO Interim Commission. The organization will come into being when 26 Members of the United Nations have become parties to the Constitution.

② All the countries in this column have signed the Constitution of the International Refugee Organization (IRO) and the Agreement on Interim Measures, thereby becoming members of the Preparatory Commission. Australia, China, Guatemala, Iceland, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States are the only countries, however, whose signatures do not require subsequent ratification by their Governments, and who therefore may be considered fully qualified as IRO members. The IRO will come into being when at least fifteen states, which have unconditionally subscribed at least 75 per cent of the operational budget, have ratified the Constitution.
